Incipit Liber Quartus.

Dicunt accidiam fore nutricem viciorum,
Torpet et in cunctis tardaque lenta bonis,
Que fieri possent hodie transfert piger in cras
Furatoque prius hostia claudit equo.
Poscenti tardo negat emolumenta Cupido,
Sed Venus in celeri ludit amore viri.

PON the vices to procede
After the cause of mannes dede

The firste point of slouth I calle

Lachesse, and is the chefe of alle

Hic in quarto libro loquitur confessor de speciebus accidie, quarum primam tardacionem vocat, cuius condicionem pertractans amanti super hoc consequenteropponit.

And hath this properlich of kind
To leven alle thing behind.
Of that he mighte do nowe here
He tarieth all the longe yere
And evermore he faith: to morwe,
And fo he woll his time borwe

And wissheth after: god me sende, That whan he weneth have an ende, Than is he furthest to beginne. Thus bringeth he many a mischese inne Unware, till that he be mischeved And may nought thanne be releved. And right fo nouther more ne lesse It stant of love and of lachesse. Some time he floutheth on a day, That he never after gete may.

Confessor.

Now fone, as of this ilke thing, If thou have any knouleching, That thou to love hast done er this, Confessio amantis. Tell on.

My gode fader, yis. As of lachesse I am beknowe, That I may stonde upon his rowe, As I that am clad of his fuite. For whanne I thought my pursuite To make and therto fet a day

30 To speke unto that swete may, Lachesse bad abide yit And bare on honde it was no wit Ne time for to speke as tho. Thus with his tales to and fro My time in tarieng he drough, Whan there was time good inough, He said another time is better. Thou shalt now senden her a letter And par cas write more plein

Than thou by mouthe dursest sain.

Thus have I lette time flide
For flouthe, and kepte nought my tide,
So that lacheffe with his vice
Full oft hath made my wit so nice,
That what I thought to speke or do
With tarieng he held me so,
Til whan I wolde and mighte nought,
I not what thing was in my thought
Or it was drede, or it was shame.

- But ever in ernest and in game
  I wit there is long time passed,
  But yet is nought the love lassed,
  Whiche I unto my lady have,
  For though my tunge is slow to crave
  At alle time, as I have bede,
  Min hert stant ever in o stede
  And axeth besiliche grace,
  The whiche I may nought yet embrace,
  And god wot that is malgre min.
- For this I wot right well afin,
  My grace cometh so selde aboute,
  That is the slouthe, which I doubte
  More than of all the remenaunt,
  Whiche is to love appartenaunt.

And thus as touchend of lachesse, As I have tolde, I me confesse To you, my fader, I beseche That furthermore ye wol me teche, And if there be to this matere

70 Some goodly tale for to here,

How I may do lachesse awey, That ye it wolden telle, I prey.

Confessor.

To wiffe the, my fone, and rede Among the tales, whiche I rede, 75 An olde ensample therupon Now herken, and I wol telle on.

Hic ponit confessor exemplum contra iftos,qui in amoriscausa tardantes delinquunt. Et narrat, qualiter Di-Eneam, ab incendiis Troie fugitivum, in amorem luum gavisa suscepit, qui cum postea in partes Italie a Cartagine bellaturum se transtulit nimiamque ibidem moram faciens tempus redditus sui ad Didonem ultra modum tardavit, ipfa intolerabili dolore concusta sui cordis intima mortali gladio transfodit.

Ayein lachesse in loves cas I finde, how whilom Eneas, Whom Anchifes to fone hadde, do regina Cartaginis With great navie, which he ladde, Fro Troie arriveth at Cartage. Wherfore a while his herbergage He toke, and it betidde fo With her, which was a quene tho Of the citee, his acqueintaunce He wan, whos name in remembraunce Is yet, and Dido was she hote, Which loveth Eneas fo hote Upon the wordes, whiche he faide, That all her hert on him she laide And did all holy what he wolde. But after that, as it be sholde, Fro thenne he goth toward Itaile By ship and there his arrivaile Hath take and shope him for to ride. But she, which may nought longe abide The hote peine of loves throwe, Anon within a litel throwe A letter unto her knight hath write And did him pleinly for to wite,

If he made any tarieng
To drecche of his ayein comming,
That she ne might him fele and se,
She shulde stonde in such degre
As whilom stood a swan to-fore
Of that she hadde her make lore
For sorwe a fether into her brain
She shof and hath her selve slain.
As king Menander in a lay
The soth hath sounde, where she lay
Spraulend with her winges twey
As she, which shulde thanne deie
For love of him, which was her make.
And so shal I do for thy sake
This quene saide, wel I wote.

Lo, to Enee thus she wrote
With many another word of pleint.
But he, which had his thoughtes seint
Towardes love and full of slouthe,
His time let, and that was routhe.
For she, which loveth him to-fore,
Desireth ever more and more
And whan she sigh him tary so,
Her herte was so full of wo,
That compleignend manyfolde
She hath her owne tale tolde
Unto her self and thus she spake:
Ha, who sound ever suche a lacke
Of slouth in any worthy knight?
Now wote I well my deth is dight

Through him, which shuld have be my life. But for to stinten all this strife
Thus whan she sigh none other bote,
Right even unto her herte rote
A naked swerd anone she threste
And thus she gat her selve reste
In remembraunce of alle slowe.

Confessor. 138 Wherof, my sone, thou might knowe,
How tarieng upon the nede
In loves cause is for to drede.

And that hath Dido fore abought,
Whose deth shall ever be bethought.
And evermore if I shal seche
In this matere another speche
In a cronique I finde write
A tale, whiche is good to wite.

At Troie whan king Ylixes
Upon the fiege among the pres
Of hem, that worthy knightes were,
Abode long time stille there,
In thilke time a man may se,
How goodly that Penelope,
Which was to him his trewe wise,
Of his lachesse was pleintise,
Wherof to Troie she him sende
Her will by letter, thus spekende:

My worthy love and lord also, It is and hath ben ever so, That where a woman is alone, It maketh a man in his persone

Hic loquitur super eodem, qualiter Penelope Ulixem maritum suum in obsidione Troie diucius morantem ob ipsius ibidem tardacionem epistola sua redarguit.

160 The more hardy for to wowe, In hope that she wolde bowe To fuch thinge, as his wille were, While that her lord were elles where. And of my felf I telle this. For it so longe passed is, Sith first that ye fro home wente, That well nigh every man is wente To there I am, while ye be oute, Had made and eche of hem aboute, Which love can, my love fecheth With great praiere and me besecheth. And some maken great manace, That if they mighten come in place, Where that they mighten her will have, There is no thing me shulde save, That they ne wolde werche thinges. And some tellen me tidinges, That ye ben dede, and some sain, That certainly ye ben besain To love a newe and leve me. But how as ever that it be. I thonke unto the goddes alle As yet for ought that is befalle, May no man do my chekes rede. But netheles it is to drede. That lachesse in continuaunce

- And praid him, that he wolde wite And thenke, how that she was al his, And that he tarie nought in this, But that he wold his love acquite To her ayeinward and nought write, But come him self in alle haste, That he none other paper waste, So that he kepe and holde his trouthe Withoute let of any slouthe.
  - To Troie, where the grete siege
    Was laid, this letter was conveied.
    And he, which wisdome hath purveied
    Of all that to reson belongeth,
    With gentil herte it undersongeth.
    And whan he hath it overrad,
    In parte he was right inly glad
    And eke in parte he was disesed.
    But love his hert hath so through sesed
- With pure ymaginacion,
  That for none occupacion,
  Whiche he can take on other fide,
  He may nought flit his herte afide,
  For that his wife him had enformed,
  Wherof he hath him felf conformed
  With all the will of his corage
  To shape and take the viage
  Homeward, what time that he may.
  So that him thenketh of a day

The visage of Penelope,
Whiche he desireth most of alle.
And whan the time is so befalle,
That Troie was distruied and brent,
He made non delaiement,
But goth him home in alle hie,
Where that he found to-fore his eye
His worthy wife in good estate,
And thus was cessed the debate

230 Of love, and flouthe was excused, Which doth great harm, wher it is used, And hindreth many a cause honest.

For of the grete clerk Grostest I rede how busy that he was Upon the clergie an heved of bras To forge and make it for to telle Of suche thinges as befelle. And seven yeres besinesse He laide, but for the lachesse

Pro firste he began laboure
He lost all that he hadde do.
And other while it fareth so
In loves cause, who is slowe,
That he without under the wowe
By night stant full oft a colde,
Which mighte, if that he had wolde
His time kept, have be withinne.

But flouthe may nought profit winne,

Nota hic de quodam astrologo super eodem, qui quoddam opus ingeniosum quasi ad complementum septennio perducens unius momenti tardacione omnem sui operis diligenciam penitus frustravit.

Nota adhuc contra tardacionem de vir-

And that was proved well by night Whilome of the maidens five. Whan thilke lord came for to wive. For that her oile was awey To light her lampes in his wey, Her flouthe brought it so aboute Fro him that they be shet withoute.

Confessor.

Wherof, my sone, be thou ware, Als ferforth as I telle dare. For love muste ben awaited, And if thou be nought well affaited In love to escheue southe, My fone, for to telle trouthe Thou might nought of thy felf ben able To winne love or make it stable, All though thou mightest love acheve.

Confessio amantis.

My fader, that I may well leve. But me was never affigned place, Where yet to geten any grace, Ne me was non fuch time appointed, For than I wolde I were unjointed Of every limme that I have, And I ne shulde kepe and fave Min houre bothe and eke my stede, If my lady it hadde bede. But she is otherwise avised Than graunte fuche a time affifed.

There hath be no default I gesse
Of time loste, if that I mighte.
But yet her liketh nought alighte
Upon no lure, which I caste.
For ay the more I crie faste
The lasse her liketh for to here.
So for to speke of this matere
I seche that I may nought sinde,
I haste and ever I am behinde
And wot nought what it may amounte.
But fader, upon min accompte,
Whiche ye ben set to examine
Of shrifte after the discipline,
Say what your best counseile is.

My sone, my counseil is this.

How so it stonde of time go,

Do forth thy besinesse so,

That no lachesse in the be founde,

For slouthe is mighty to consounde

300 The spede of every mannes werke.

For many a vice, as faith the clerke, There hongen upon flouthes lappe Of fuche as make a man mishappe To pleigne and tell of: had I wist. And therupon if that the list To knowe of flouthes cause more In special yet overmore There is a vice full grevable To him, which is therof coulpable,

Confessor.

- 310 And stant of alle vertue bare Here after as I shall declare.
  - Qui nichil attemptat, nichil expedit, oreque muto Munus amicicie vir sibi raro capit. Est modus in verbis, sed ei qui parcit amori Verba referre sua non favet ullus amor.

Hic loquitur confessor de quadam specie accidie, que pusillanimitas dicta est, cuius ymaginavirtutes aggredi, audet, sicque utriusque vite tam active quam contemnon attingit.

Touchend of flouth in his degre, There is yet pufillamite, Which is to fay in this langage tiva formido neque He that hath litel of corage neque vicia fugere And dare no mannes werk beginne, So may he nought by reson winne. plative premium For who that nought dare undertake, By right he shall no profit take.

- 320 But of this vice the nature Dare nothing fet in aventure, Him lacketh bothe worde and dede, Wherof he shuld his cause spede. He woll no manhode understonde, For ever he hath drede upon honde All is perill that he shall say, Him thenketh the wolfe is in the way. And of ymaginacion He maketh his excusacion
- 330 And feigneth cause of pure drede And ever he faileth ate nede, Till all be spilt, that he with deleth. He hath the fore, which no man heleth, The whiche is cleped lacke of herte, Though every grace about him sterte,

He woll nought ones stere his fote, So that by reson lese he mote, That woll nought aunter for to winne. And so forth, sone, if we beginne

Confessor.

To speke of love and his service,
There ben truantes in suche a wise,
That lacken herte, whan best were
They speken of love, and right for sere
They waxen dombe and dare nought telle
Withouten soun, as doth the belle,
Whiche hath no clapper for to chime.
And right so they, as for the time
Ben herteles withoute speche
Of love and dare nothing beseche.

350 And thus they lese and winne nought. Forthy my sone, if thou art ought Coulpable as touchend of this slouthe, Shrive the therof and tell me trouthe.

My fader, I am all beknowe,
That I have ben one of the flowe
As for to telle in loves cas.
Min herte is yet and ever was,
As though the world shuld al to-breke,
So ferful, that I dare nought speke

360 Of what purpos that I have nome, Whan I toward my lady come, But let it passe and overgo.

My fone, do no more fo. For after that a man pursueth, To love so fortune sueth Amans.

Confessor.

Ful oft and yiveth her happy chaunce To him, which maketh continuaunce To preie love and to befeche, As by ensample I shall the teche.

loquitur contra pufillanimes et dicit, quod amans pro timore verbis obtumefcere non debet, sed concinnando preces fui amoris expedicionem tucius prosequatur, et ponit confesfor exemplum, qualiquod preces continuavit, quandam ymaginem eburneam, cuius pulcritudinis concupiscencia illaqueatus extitit, in carnem et fanguinem ad latus fuum transformatam fenciit.

Hic in amoris causa 370 I finde, how whilom there was one, Whose name was Pigmaleon, Which was a lusty man of youthe. The werkes of entaile he couthe Above all other men as tho. And through fortune it felle him fo ter Pigmaleon pro eo, As he, whom love shall travaile, He made an ymage of entaile Lich to a woman in femblaunce Of feture and of contenaunce, So faire yet never was figure. 380 Right as a lives creature She femeth, for of yvor white He hath it wrought of fuch delite, That she was rody on the cheke And rede on both her lippes eke, Wherof that he him felf beguileth. For with a goodly loke she smileth, So that through pure impression Of his ymagination With all the herte of his corage His love upon this faire ymage He set, and her of love preide. But she no worde ayeinward said. The longe day what thing he dede This ymage in the same stede

Was ever by, that ate mete He wold her ferve and praide her ete And put unto her mouth the cup. And whan the bord was taken up, He hath her unto his chambre nome, And after whan the night was come, He laide her in bed all naked. He was forwept, he was forwaked, He kiste her colde lippes ofte And wisheth, that they weren fofte. And ofte he rouneth in her ere, And ofte his arm now here now there He laide, as he her wolde embrace. And ever among he axeth grace, As though she wiste what it mente. And thus him felf he gan tormente With fuch difese of loves peine, That no man might him more peine. But how it were of his penaunce He made fuche contenaunce Fro day to night and praid fo longe, That his praiere is underfonge, Which Venus of her grace herde By night, and whan that he worst ferde And it lay in his naked arme, The colde ymage he feeleth warme Of flesshe and bone and full of life.

Lo, thus he wanne a lusty wife, Whiche obeisaunt was at his will And if he wolde have hold him still 16

And nothing spoke, he shuld have failed. But for he hath his word travailed And durste speke, his love he spedde And had all that he wolde abedde. For er they wente than a two. A knave child betwene hem two They gete, which was after hote Paphus, of whom yet hath the note A certain ile, which Paphos Men clepe, and of his name it rose.

Confessor.

By this ensample thou might finde, That word may worche above kinde. Forthy my fone, if that thou spare

440 To speke, lost is all thy fare, For flouthe bringeth in alle wo. And over this to loke also The god of love is favorable To hem, that ben of love stable. And many a wonder hath befalle, Wherof to speke amonges alle, If that the lift to taken hede, Therof a solempne tale I rede, Whiche I shall telle in remembraunce

450 Upon the forte of loves chaunce.

Hic ponit exemplum super eodem, qualiter rex Ligdus uxori sue Thelacuse pregnanti minabatur, quod si siliam pareret, infans occideretur, que taam ediderat, Ysis dea

The king Ligdus upon a strife Spake unto Thelacuse his wife, Which thanne was with childe grete, He fwore it sholde nought be lette, men postea cum fili- That if she have a doughter bore, partus tunc presens That it ne sholde be forlore

And slain, wherof she sory was.
So it befelle upon this cas,
Whan she delivered sholde be,
460 Ysis by nighte in privete,
Whiche of childing is the goddesse,
Came for to helpe in that distresse,
Till that this lady was all small
And had a doughter forth with all,
Which the goddesse in alle way
Bad kepe, and that they sholde say,
It were a sone. And thus Yphis
They named him, and upon this
The fader was made for to wene.

This Yphis was forth drawe tho
And clothed and arraied so
Right as a kinges sone sholde.
Till after, as fortune it wolde,
Whan it was of a ten yere age,
Him was betake in mariage
A dukes doughter for to wedde,
Whiche Iante hight, and ofte abedde
These children lien, she and she,

Whiche of one age bothe be.
So that withinne time of yeres
To-gider, as they ben play-feres
Liggend abedde upon a night
Nature, which doth every wight
Upon her lawe for to muse,
Constreigneth hem, so that they use

filiam nomine filii Yphiappellari ipsamque more masculi educare admonuit, quam pater filium credens, ipfam in maritagium filie cuiusdam principis etate solita copulavit, sed cum Yphis debitum fue conjugi unde solvere non habuit, deos in fui adjutorium interpellabat, qui super hoc miserti femineum genus in masculinum ob affectum nature in Yphe per omnia transmutarunt.

Thing, which to hem was all unknowe, Wherof Cupide thilke throwe
Toke pite for the grete love
And let do fette kinde above,
So that her lawe may ben used
And they upon her lust excused.
For love hateth nothing more
Than thing, which stant avein the lore

For love hateth nothing more
Than thing, which stant again the lore
Of that nature in kinde hath set.
Forthy Cupide hath so beset
His grace upon this aventure
That be accordant to nature,
Whan that he sigh his time best,
That eche of hem hath other kest.

That eche of hem hath other kest,
Transformeth Yphe into a man,
Wherof the kinde love he wan
Of lusty yonge Iante his wife.
And tho they ledde a merie life,
Which was to kinde none offence.

Confessor.

And thus to take an evidence It semeth love is welwillende To hem, that ben continuende With befy herte to pursue

Wherof, my sone, in this matere
Thou might ensample taken here,
That with thy grete befinesse
Thou might atteigne the richesse
Of love, that there be no slouth.

Amans. I dare well fay by my trouth,

Als ferre as my wit can seche,
My fader, as for lacke of speche,
But so as I me shrose to-fore,
520 There is none other time lore,
Wherof there mighte be obstacle
To lette love of his miracle,
Whiche I beseche day and night.
But fader, so as it is right
In forme of shriste to be knowe
What thing belongeth to the slowe,
Your saderhode I wolde pray,
If there be surther any way
Touchend unto this ilke vice.

There ferveth one in special,
Which lost hath his memorial,
So that he can no wit witholde
In thing, which he to kepe his holde
Wherof full ofte him self he greveth.
And who that most upon him leveth,
Whan that his wittes ben so weived,
He may full lightly be deceived.

Mentibus oblitus alienis labitur ille, Quem probat accidia non meminisse sui. Sic amor incautus, qui non memoratur ad horas, Perdit et offendit, quod cuperare nequit.

To ferve accidie in his office,

540 There is of flouth an other vice,
Which cleped is foryetelnesse,
That nought may in his herte impresse

Confessor.

Hic tractat confesfor de vicio oblivionis, quam mater eius accidia ad omnes virtutum memorias necnon immemorem con-

et in amoris causa Of vertue, which reson hath set, So clene his wittes he foryete. For in tellinge of his tale No more his herte than his male Hath remembraunce of thilke forme. Wherof he sholde his wit enforme As than, and yet ne wot he why.

Thus is his purpos nought forthy Forlore of that he wolde bidde And scarfely, if he seeth the thridde To love of that he hadde ment. Thus many a lover hath be shent. Telle on therefore, hast thou ben one Of hem, that flouth hath so begonne? Ye fader, ofte it hath ben fo,

Confessio amantis-

That whan I am my lady fro And thenke untoward her drawe, Than cast I many a newe lawe And all the world torne up fo down And so recorde I my lesson And write in my memoriall What I to her telle shall, Right all the mater of my tale. But all nis worth a nutteshale. For whan I come there she is. I have it all foryete iwis Of that I thoughte for to telle I can nought than unnethes spelle,

That I wende altherbest have rad, So fore I am of her adrad.

For as a man that fodeinly
A gost beholdeth so fare I,
So that for fere I can nought gete
My wit, but I my self foryete,
That I wot never, what I am,
Ne whider I shall, ne whenne I cam,
But muse as he, that were amased.

The letter and may nothing be rad,
So ben my wittes overlad,
That what as ever I thought have spoken,
It is out of min herte stoken
And stonde, as who saith, doumbe and defe,
That all nis worth an yvy lefe,
Of that I wende well have saide.
And ate last I make abraide,
Cast up min heed and loke aboute

And wot not, where he shall become.
Thus am I oft all overcome
There as I wende best to stonde.
But after, whan I understonde
And am in other place alone,
I make many a wofull mone
Unto my self and speke so:
Ha fool, where was thing herte the

Ha fool, where was thine herte tho,
Whan thou thy worthy lady figh,
Were thou afered of her eye?
For of her hond there is no drede,
So well I knowe her womanhede,

That in her is no more oultrage
Than in a childe of thre yere age.
Why hast thou drede of so good one,
Whom alle vertue hath begone,
That in her is no violence
But goodly hede and innocence
Withouten spot of any blame.

- Ha, nice herte, fy for shame,
  A cowarde herte of love unlered,
  Wherof art thou so fore afered,
  That thou thy tunge suffrest frese
  And wolt thy gode wordes lese,
  Whan thou hast founde time and space,
  How sholdest thou deserve grace,
  Whan thou thy self darst axe none?
  But all thou hast foryete anone.
  And thus dispute in loves lore,
- But helpe ne finde I nought the more,
  But stomble upon min owne treine
  And make an eking of my peine.
  For ever whan I thenke amonge,
  Howe all is on my self alonge
  I say: O fool of alle fooles
  Thou farest as he betwene two stoles
  That wolde sit and goth to grounde.
  It was ne never shall be founde
  Betwene foryetelnesse and drede,
  - And thus, min holy father dere, Toward my felf, as ye may here,

I pleigne of my foryetelnesse.
But elles all the businesse,
That may be take of mannes thought,
My herte taketh and is through sought
To thenken ever upon that swete
Withoute slouthe I you behete.
For what so falle or wel or wo,

Where so I laugh, or so I loure
Nought half a minute of an houre
Ne might I lette out of my minde,
But if I thought upon that ende,
Therof me shall no slouthe lette,
Till deth out of this world me fette,
All though I had on suche a ring,
As Moises through his enchaunting
Sometime in Ethiope made,

Whan that he Tharbis wedded had, Which ringe bare of oblivion The name, and that was by reson, That were it on a finger sate, Anone his love he so foryate, As though he had it never knowe. And so it fell that ilke throwe, Whan Tharbis had it on her honde, No knouleching of him she fonde, But all was clene out of memoire,

As men may rede in histoire. And thus he wente quite away, That never after that ilke day

She thought, that there was fuch a one. All was foryete and overgone. But in good feith fo may nought I. For she is ever faste by So nigh, that she min herte toucheth That for no thing that flouthe voucheth I may foryete her lefe ne loth. For over all where as she goth, Min herte folweth her aboute. Thus may I say withouten doubte, For bet, for wers, for ought, for nought She passeth never fro my thought, But whan I am there, as she is, Min hert, as I you faid er this, Somtime of her is fore adrad And fometime is overglad All out of reule and out of space. For whan I fe her goodly face And thenke upon her highe pris, As though I were in paradis, I am so ravisshed of the fight, That speke unto her I ne might As for the time, though I wolde. For I ne may my witte unfolde To finde o worde of that I mene, But all it is foryete clene. And though I stonde there a mile, 690 All is foryete for the while. A tunge I have and wordes none. And thus I stonde and thenke alone

Of thing that helpeth ofte nought. But what I had afore thought To speke, whan I come there, It is foryete, as nought ne were. And stonde amased and assoted, That of no thing, which I have noted, I can nought than a note finge, 700 But all is out of knoulechinge. Thus what for joy and what for drede All is foryeten ate nede, So that, my fader, of this flouthe I have you faid the pleine trouthe, Ye may it, as ye list, redresse. For thus stant my foryetelnesse And eke my pufillamite. Say now forth what ye lift to me, For I wol only do by you. My fone, I have wel herd, how thou Hast said, and that thou must amende. For love his grace wol nought fende To that man, which dare axe none. For this we knowen everychone,

Confessor.

His will is. For withoute bedes
He doth his grace in fewe stedes.
And what man that foryete him selve
720 Among a thousand be nought twelve,
That wol him take in remembraunce,
But let him falle and take his chaunce.

A mannes thought withoute speche God wot, and yet that men beseche Forthy pull up a befy herte,
My fone, and let no thing afterte
Of love fro thy befinesse.
For touching of foryetelnesse,
Which many a love hath set behinde,
A tale of great ensample I finde,
Wherof it is pite to wite
In the maner as it is write.

Hic in amoris causa contra obliviosos ponit confessor exemplum, qualiter Demephon versus bellum Trojanum itinerando a Phillide Rodopeie regina non tantum in hospicium, sed etiam in amorem gaudio magno susceptus est, qui postea ab ipsa Troie descendens rediturum infra certum tempus fidelissime se compromisit, sed quia huiusmodi promissionis diem statutum postmodum oblitus est, Phillis oblivionem Demephontis lacrimis primo deplangens, tandem cordula collo fuo circumligata in quodam corulo pre dolore se mortuam suspendit.

King Demephon whan he by ship To Troie ward with felaship Sailend goth upon his wey, It hapneth him at Rodepey, As Eolus him hadde blowe To londe and rested for a throwe. And fell that ilke time thus, That the doughter of Ligurgus, Which quene was of the contre, Was fojourned in that citee Within a castel nigh the stronde, Where Demephon cam up to londe. Phillis she hight and of yong age And of stature and of visage She had all that her best besemeth. Of Demephon right wel her quemeth, Whan he was come and made him chere. And he, that was of his manere A lusty knight, ne might afterte, That he ne set on her his herte, 750 So that within a day or two He thought, how ever that it go,

He wolde affaie the fortune And gan his herte to comune With goodly wordes in her ere, And for to put her out of fere He fwore and hath his trouthe plight To be for ever her owne knight. And thus with her he stille abode There, while his ship on anker rode, And had inough of time and space To fpeke of love and feche grace. This lady herd all that he faide, And how he fwore, and how he praide, Which was as an enchauntement To here, that was as innocent. As though it were trouthe and feith She leveth all, that ever he faith, And as her in fortune sholde. She graunteth him all that he wolde. Thus was he for the time in joie, Til that he shulde go to Troie, But tho she made mochel forwe And he his trouthe laid to borwe To come and if that he live may Ayein within a monthe day. And therupon they kisten bothe, But were hem leef or were hem lothe, To ship he goth and forth he went To Troy, as was his first entent. The daies go, the monthe passeth, Her love encreseth, and his lasseth

For him she lefte slepe and mete, And he his time hath all foryete, So that this wofull yonge quene, Which wot nought what it mighte mene, A letter fend and praid him come And faith how she is overcome With strengthe of love in suche a wise, That she nought longe may suffise To liven out of his presence, And put upon his conscience The trouthe, whiche he hath behote, Wherof she loveth him so hote, She faith, that if he lenger lette Of fuch a day, as she him sette, She shulde sterven in his slouthe. Which were a shame unto his trouthe. This letter is forth upon her fonde, Wherof fomdele comfort on honde She toke as she, that wolde abide And waite upon that ilke tide, Which she hath in her letter write. But now is pite for to wite, As he did erst, so he foryate His time eftsone and over-sate. But she, which mighte nought do so, The tide awaiteth evermo And cast her eye upon the see. Somtime nay, fomtime ye Somtime he cam, fomtime nought. Thus she disputeth in her thought

And wot nought what she thenke may. But fastend all the longe day She was into the derke night, And tho she hath do set up light In a lanterne on high alofte Upon a toure, where she goth ofte In hope, that in his comminge He shulde se the light brenninge, Wherof he might his weies right To come, where she was by night. But all for nought, she was deceived, For Venus hath her hope weived And shewed her upon the sky, How that the day was faste by, So that within a litel throwe The daies light she mighte knowe, Tho she beheld the see at large. And whan she figh there was no barge Ne ship, als fer as she may kenne, Down fro the tour she gan to renne Into an herber all her owne, Where many a wonder wofull mone She made, that no life it wist As she, which all her joie mist, That now she swouneth, now she pleigneth, And all her face she disteigneth With teres, whiche as of a welle The stremes from her eyen felle, So as she might and ever in one She cleped upon Demephon

And faid: Alas, thou flowe wight, Where was there ever fuche a knight, That so through his ungentilesse Of flouthe and of foryetelnesse Ayein his trouthe brak his steven. And the her eye up to the heven She cast and saide: O thou unkinde, Here shalt thou through thy southe finde, If that the lift to come and fe A lady dede for love of the So as I shall my selve spille, Whome, if it hadde be thy wille, Thou mightest save well inough. With that upon a grene bough A ceinte of filke, which she there had, She knette, and so her self she lad, That the about her white fwere It did and henge her felven there. Wherof the goddes were amoved, And Demephon was fo reproved, That of the goddes providence Was shape suche an evidence Ever afterward agein the flowe, That Phillis in the same throwe Was shape into a nutte-tre, That alle men it mighte se, And after Phillis philliberd This tre was cleped in the yerd, And yet for Demephon to shame Into this day it bereth the name.

This wofull chaunce how that it ferde Anone as Demephon it herde And every man it hadde in speche, His sorwe was nought tho to seche, He gan his slouthe for to banne, But it was all to late thanne.

Lo, thus, my sone, might thou wite
Ayein this vice how it is write,
For no man may the harmes gesse,
That fallen through foryetelnesse,
Wherof that I thy shrift have herd.
But yet of slouthe how it hath ferd
In other wise I thenke oppose,
If thou have gilt, as I suppose.

Fulfilled of flouthes exemplaire
There is yet one his fecretaire,
And he is cleped negligence,
Which woll nought loke his evidence,
Wherof he may beware to-fore.
But whan he hath his cause lore,
Than is he wise after the honde,
Whan helpe may no maner bonde,
Than ate firste wold he binde.
Thus evermore he stant behinde,
Whan he the thing may nought amende,
Than is he ware and saith at ende:

Hic tractat confesfor de vicio negligencie, cuius condicio accidiam amplectens omnes artes sciencie tam in amoris causa quam aliter ignominiosa pretermittens, cum nullum poterit eminere remedium, fui ministerii diligenciam ex post facto in vacuum attemptare presumit.

Ha, wolde god I hadde knowe, Wherof bejaped with a mowe He goth, for whan the grete stede Is stole, than he taketh hede And maketh the stable-dore fast. Thus ever he pleith an after cast Of all that he shall say or do. He hath a maner eke also, Him list nought lerne to be wife, For he sette of no vertu prise But as him liketh for the while, So feleth he ful ofte guile, Whan that he weneth fiker to stonde. And thus thou might wel understonde, My fone, if thou art fuche in love Thou might nought come at thin above Of that thou woldest wel acheve.

Confessio amantis.

Min holy fader, as I leve,
I may wel with fauf conscience
Excuse me of negligence
Towardes love in alle wise.
For though I be none of the wise,
I am so truly amorous,
That I am ever curious
Of hem, that conne best enforme
To knowe and witen all the forme,
What falleth unto loves craft.
But yet ne fond I nought the hast,
Which might unto the blade accorde.
For never herd I men recorde

What thinge it is, that might availe To winne love withoute faile. Yet so fer couthe I never finde Man, that by reson ne by kinde Me couthe teche suche an arte, That he ne failed of a parte. And as toward min owne wit Contrive I couthe never yit To finde any fikernesse, That me might other more or leffe Of love make for to spede. For leveth wel withouten drede, If that there were fuche a wey As certainly as I shall deie I hadde it lerned longe ago. But I wot wel there is none fo, And netheles it may wel be I am fo rude in my degre And eke my wittes ben so dull, That I ne may nought to the full Atteigne unto so highe a lore. But this I dar fay overmore, All though my wit ne be nought stronge, It is nought on my will alonge, For that is befy night and day To lerne all that he lerne may, How that I mighte love winne. But yet I am as to beginne Of that I wolde make an ende, And for I not, how it shall wende,

That is to me my moste forwe. But I dare take god to borwe, As after min entendement None other wife negligent, Than I you fay, have I nought be. Forthy pur fainte charite Tell me, my fader, what you femeth.

Confessor.

In good feith, fone, wel me quemeth, That thou thy felf hast thus acquite Toward this vice in which no wit Abide may, for in an houre He lest all that he may laboure The longe yere, fo that men fain, What ever he doth it is in vein. For through the flouth of negligence There was yet never fuch science Ne vertue which was bodely, That nis destruied and lost therby. Ensample, that it hath be so, In boke I finde write also.

Hic contra vicium negligencie ponit confessor exemplum. Et narrat, quod cum Pheton filius Solis aera regere debuerat, admonitus a patre, ut equos ne deviarent cius refrenaret, ipse consilium patris sua negligencia preteriens, equos cum curru nimis basse errare permisit, unde non solum

Phebus, which is the fonne hote, That shineth upon erthe hote And causeth every lives helth, currum patris sui per He hadde a sone in all his welth, Which Pheton hight, and he defireth equa manu diligen. And with his moder he conspireth, The which was cleped Clemene, For helpe and counfeil, so that he His faders carte lede might incendio orbem in- Upon the faire daies light.

And for this thing they bothe praide Unto the fader, and he faide, He wolde wel, but forth with all Thre points he bad in speciall Unto his fone in alle wife. That he him shulde wel avise And take it as by wey of lore. First was, that he his hors to fore Ne prike, and over that he tolde, That he the reines faste holde. And also that he be right ware. In what maner he lede his chare, That he mistake nought his gate. But upon avisement algate He shulde bere a siker eye, That he to lowe ne to high His carte drive at any throwe, Wherof that he might overthrowe. And thus by Phebus ordenaunce Toke Pheton into governaunce The fonnes carte, which he ladde. But he fuch veine gloire hadde Of that he was fet upon high, That he his own estate ne figh Through negligence and toke none hede. So might he wel nought longe spede. For he the hors withouten lawe The carte let aboute drawe Where as hem liketh wantonly, That ate laste sodeinly,

For he no refon wolde knowe, This firy cart he drove to lowe And fireth all the worlde aboute. Wherof they weren all in doubte And to the god for helpe criden Of fuche unhappes, as betiden. Phebus, which figh the negligence, How Pheton ayein his defence His chare hath drive oute of the wey Ordeigneth, that he fel awey Out of the cart into the flood And dreint. Lo now, how it stood With him, that was fo negligent, That fro the highe firmament, For that he wolde go to lowe, He was anone down overthrowe. In high estate it is a vice To go to lowe, and in fervice It greveth for to go to high, Wherof a tale in poesie

Exemplum super eodem de Icharo Dedali filio in carcere Minotauri existente, cui Dedalus, ut inde evolaret, alas componens firmiter injunxit, ne nimis alte propter solis ardorem ascenderet, quod Icharus sua negligencia postponens cum altius sublimatus fuisset fubito ad terram corruens expiravit.

I finde, how whilom Dedalus,
Whiche hadde a fone and Icharus
He hight, and though hem thoughte lothe
In fuch prison they weren bothe
With Minotaurus, that aboute
They mighten no where wenden oute.
So they begonne for to shape,
How they the prison might escape.
This Dedalus, which fro his youthe
Was taught and many craftes couthe,

Of fethers and of other thinges Hath made to flee diverse winges For him and for his fone also, To whome he yaf in charge tho And bad him thenke therupon, How that his winges ben fet on With wex, and if he toke his flight To high, all fodeinlich he might Make it to melte with the fonne. And thus they have her flight begonne Out of the prison faire and softe. And whan they weren both alofte, This Icharus began to mounte And of the counseil none acompte He fette whiche his fader taught, Til that the sonne his winges caught, Wherof it malt, and fro the hight Withouten helpe of any flight He fell to his destruction. And lich to that condition There fallen ofte times fele For lacke of governaunce in wele Als wel in love as other wey.

Now gode fader, I you prey, If there be more in this matere Of flouthe, that I might it here.

My sone, as for thy diligence, Whiche every mannes conscience By reson shulde reule and kepe, If that the list to take kepe, Amans.

I wol the tell aboven alle, In whom no vertu may befalle, Whiche yiveth unto the vices rest And is of southe the slowest.

5. Absque labore vagus vir inutilis ocia plectens

Non amor in tali misero viget, immo valoris
Qui faciunt opera clamat habere suos.

Hic loquitur confeffor fuper illa specie accidie, que ocium dicitur, cuius condicio in virtutum cultura nullius occupacionis diligenciam admittens, cuiuscumque expedicionem cause non attingit.

Among these other of southes kinde, Whiche alle labour set behinde, And hateth alle befinesse. There is yet one, whiche idelnesse Is cleped, and is the norice In mannes kinde of every vice, Which fecheth eses many folde. In winter doth he nought for colde, In fomer may he nought for hete, So wether that he frese or swete, Or be he in, or be he oute, He woll ben idel all aboute. But if he pleie ought at dees, For who as ever take fees And thenketh worship to deserve, There is no lord whome he woll ferve As for to dwelle in his fervice. But if it were in suche a wise, Of that he feeth par aventure, That by lordship and by coverture He may the more stonde stille And use his idelnesse at wille,

For he ne woll no travail take
To ride for his ladies fake,
But liveth all upon his wisshes,
And as a cat wold ete fisshes
Withoute weting of his clees,
So wolde he do, but netheles
He faileth ofte of that he wolde.

My fone, if thou of fuche a molde Art made, now tell me plein thy shrift.

Nay fader, god I yive a yift, That toward love, as by wit All idel was I never yit, Ne never shall, while I may go.

Now sone, telle me than so, What hast thou done of besiship To love and to the ladyship Of her, which thy lady is?

My fader, ever yet er this
In every place, in every stede,
What so my lady hath me bede,
With all min herte obedient,
I have therto be diligent.
And if so is that she bid nought,
What thing that than into my thought
Cometh first, of that I may suffise,
I bowe and profre my service,
Somtime in chambre, somtime in halle
Right so as I se the times falle,
And whan she goth to here masse
That time shall nought overpasse,

That I napproche her ladyhede In aunter if I may her lede Unto the chapel and ayein, Than is nought all my wey in vein. Somdele I may the better fare, Whan I, that may nought fele her bare, May lede her clothed in min arme. But afterwarde it doth me harme Of pure ymagination, For thanne this collation I make unto my felven ofte And fay: Ha lord, how she is softe, How she is round, how she is small, Now wolde god, I hadde her all Withoute daunger at my wille. And than I fike and fitte stille, Of that I se my besy thought Is torned idel into nought. But for all that let I ne may, Whan I fe time another day, That I ne do my befinesse Unto my ladies worthinesse. For I therto my wit affaite To fe the times and awaite What is to done, and what to leve. And so whan time is, by her leve What thing she bit me don, I do, And where she bit me gon, I go, And whan her lift to clepe, I come. Thus hath she fulliche overcome

Min idelnesse til I sterve. So that I mot her nedes ferve. For as men fain, nede hath no lawe, Thus mot I nedely to her drawe, I ferve, I bowe, I loke, I loute, Min eye folweth her aboute. What so she wolle so woll I, Whan she woll sit, I knele by, And whan she stont, than woll I stonde, And whan she taketh her werk on honde Of weving or of embrouderie, Than can I nought but muse and prie Upon her fingers longe and fmale. And nowe I thenke, and nowe I tale, And nowe I finge, and nowe I fike, And thus my contenaunce I pike. And if it falle, as for a time Her liketh nought abide byme But busien her on other thinges, Than make I other tarienges To drecche forth the longe day, For me is loth departe away. And than I am so simple of port, That for to feigne some desporte I pleie with her litel hound Nowe on the bed, nowe on the ground, Now with the briddes in the cage, For there is none so litel page Ne yet so simple a chamberere, That I ne make hem alle chere,

All for they shulde speke wele. Thus mow ye se my besy whele, That goth nought ideliche aboute. And if her lift to riden oute On pelrinage or other stede, I come, though I be nought bede, And take her in min arme alofte And fet her in her fadel softe And so forth lede her by the bridel, For that I wolde nought ben idel. And if her list to ride in chare. And than I may therof beware, Anone I shape me to ride Right even by the chares fide. And as I may, I speke amonge, And other while I finge a fonge, Whiche Ovide in his bokes made, And faid: O which forwes glad, O which wofull prosperite Belongeth to the proprete Of love? who so wold him serve, And yet there fro may no man swerve, That he ne mot his lawe obey. And thus I ride forth my wey And am right befy overall With herte, and with my body all, As I have faide you here to-fore. My gode fader tell therfore Of idelnesse if I have gilt. My fone, but thou telle wilt

Ought elles, than I may now here, Thou shalt have no penaunce here. And netheles a man may fe, How now a daies that there be Full many of fuch hertes flowe, That woll nought befien hem to knowe What thing love is, til ate last, That he with strengthe hem overcast That malgre hem they mot obey And done all idelship awey To ferve wel and befiliche. But sone, thou art none of sich, For love shall the wel excuse. But otherwise if thou refuse To love thou might so par cas Ben idel, as fomtime was A kinges doughter unavised, Til that Cupide her hath chastised, Wherof thou shalt a tale here Accordant unto this matere.

Of Armenie I rede thus,
There was a king whiche Herupus
Was hote, and he a lusty maide
To doughter had, and as men saide
Her name was Rosiphele,
Which tho was of great renome.
For she was bothe wise and saire
And shulde ben her saders heire.
But she had o defaulte of slouthe
Towardes love, and that was routhe.

Hic ponit confessor exemplum contra istos, qui amoris occupacionem omittentes, gravioris infortunii casus expectant, et narrat de quadam Armenie regis filia, que huiusmodi condicionis in principio juventutis ociosa persistens, mirabili postea visione castigata in amoris obsequium pre ceteris diligencior efficitur.

For fo well couthe no man fay, Which mighte fet her in the way Of loves occupacion Through none ymaginacion, That scole wolde she nought knowe. And thus the was one of the flowe As of fuche hertes befinesse, Till whanne Venus the goddesse, Which loves court hath for to reule, Hath brought her into better reule Forth with Cupide, and with his might, For they merveile of fuche a wight, Which tho was in her lufty age Defireth nouther mariage Ne yet the love of paramours, Which ever hath ben the comun cours Amonges hem, that lufty were. So was it shewed after there. For he, that highe hertes loweth, With firy dartes, whiche he throweth Cupide, whiche of love is god, In chastifinge hath made a rod To drive away her wantonnesse, So that within a while I geffe She had on fuche a chaunce sporned, That all her mod was overtorned, Which first she had of slowe manere. For thus it felle, as thou shalt here.

Whan come was the month of may, She wolde walke upon a day, And that was er the sonne arist, Of women but a fewe it wist. And forth she wente prively Unto the park was faste by, All fofte walkend on the gras, Till she came there the launde was. Through which ther ran a great rivere. It thought her faire and faide: Here I woll abide under the shawe, And bad her women to withdrawe And there the flood alone stille To thenke what was in her wille. She figh the fwote floures springe, She herde gladde foules finge, She figh the bestes in her kinde, The buck, the doo, the hert, the hinde, The male go with the femele. And fo began there a quarele Betwene love and her owne herte, Fro which she couthe nought afterte. And as she cast her eye aboute, She figh clad in one fute a route Of ladies, where they comen ride A longe under the wodes fide. On faire amblende hors they set, That were all white, faire and great, And everychone ride on fide. The fadels were of fuche a pride With perle and gold fo well begone, So riche figh she never none,

In kirtles and in copes riche They weren clothed alle aliche Departed even of white and blewe With alle lustes, that she knewe, They were embrouded over all, Her bodies weren longe and fmall. The beaute fair upon her face It may none erthly thing deface, Corounes on her hede they bere As eche of hem a quene were, That all the golde of Crefus halle The lefte coronall of alle Ne might have bought after the worth. Thus comen they ridende forth. The kinges doughter, which this figh, For pure abasshe drewe her adrigh And helde her close under a bough And let hem passen stille inough. For as her thought in her avise, To hem that weren of suche a price She was nought worthy to axen there, Fro whenne they come, or what they were, But lever than this worldes good She wolde have wist how that it stood And put her hede a litel out, And as she loked her aboute, She figh comend under the linde A woman upon an hors behinde. The hors, on which she rode, was black, All lene and galled upon the back

And halted, as he were encloied, Wherof the woman was annoied. Thus was the hors in fory plight, But for all that a sterre whit Amiddes in her front she hadde. Her sadel eke was wonder badde. In which the wofull woman fat. And netheles there was with that A riche bridel for the nones Of golde and preciouse stones, Her cote was fomdele to-tore, About her middel twenty fcore Of horse halters and well mo There hingen ate time tho. Thus whan she came the lady nigh, Than toke she better hede and sigh The woman fair was of vifage, Fresh, lusty, yong and tendre of age. And so this lady, there she stood, Bethought her well and understood, That this, which came ridende tho, Tidinges couth telle of tho, Whiche as she figh to-fore ride, And put her forth and praide abide And faid: Ha fuster, let me here, What ben they, that riden now here And ben so richely arraied? This woman, which came so esmaied, Answerde with full softe speche And faid: Madame, I shall you teche, These are of tho, that whilom were Servaunts to love and trouthe bere, There as they had their hertes sette. Fare well, for I may nought be lette. Madame, I go to my service, So must I haste in alle wise Forthy madame, yif me leve. I may nought longe with you leve.

Ha, gode suster, yet I prey, Tell me, why ye be so besey And with these halters thus begone?

Madame, whilom I was one, That to my fader hadde a king. But I was flowe and for no thing Me liste nought to love obey, And that I now full fore abey, For I whilom no love hadde, My hors is now feble and badde And all to-tore is min array, And every yere this fresshe may These lusty ladies ride aboute, And I must nedes sue her route In this maner, as ye now fe And truffe her halters forth with me And am but as her horse knave. None other office I ne have. Hem thenketh I am worthy no more, For I was flowe in loves lore, Whan I was able for to lere And wolde nought the tales here

Of hem, that couthen love teche. Now tell me than, I you beseche, Wherof that riche bridel ferveth? With that her chere away she swerveth And gan to wepe and thus she tolde: This bridel, which ye now beholde, So riche upon min horse hed, Madame, afore er I was dede, Whan I was in my lusty life, There fell into min hert a strife Of love, which me overcome, So that therafter hede I nome And thought I wolde love a knight, That laste well a fourtenight, For it no lenger mighte laste, So nigh my life was ate laste. But nowe alas to late ware That I ne had him loved ere, For deth cam so in haste byme, Er I therto had any time, That it ne mighte ben acheved. But for all that I am releved Of that my will was good therto That love suffreth it be so. That I shall such a bridel were. Nowe have ye herd all min answere, To god, madame, I you betake, And warneth alle for my fake, Of love that they be nought idel And bid hem thenke upon my bridel.

And with that worde all fodeinly She passeth as it were a skie All clene out of this ladies fight. And tho for fere her herte aflight And faide to her felf: Helas! I am right in the same cas. But if I live after this day, I shall amende it if I may. And thus homward this lady went And chaunged all her first entent Within her herte and gan to fwere, That she no halters wolde bere.

Lo sone, here might thou taken hede, How idelnesse is for to drede, Nameliche of love, as I have write. For thou might understonde and wite, Among the gentil nacion Love is an occupacion, Which for to kepe his lustes fave Shold every gentil herte have, For as the lady was chastised, Non quia sic se Right so the knight may ben avised, habet veritas, set opinio amancium. Which idel is and woll nought serve To love, he may parcas deserve A greater peine than she hadde, Whan she aboute with her ladde The horse halters, and forthy Good is to be ware therby. But for to loke aboven alle These maidens how so it falle.

They shulden take ensample of this, Whiche I have tolde forsoth it is.

→ My lady Venus, whom I ferve, What woman woll her thank deferve She may nought thilke love eschue Of paramours, but she mot sue Cupides lawe, and netheles Men sene such love selde in pees, That it nis ever upon aspie Of jangling and of fals envie, Full ofte medled with difefe-But thilke love is well at efe. Which fet is upon mariage, For that dare shewen the visage In alle places openly. A great merveile it is forthy, How that a maiden wolde lette, That she her time ne besette To haste unto that ilke feste. Wherof the love is all honeste. Men may recover loss of good, But so wise man yet never stood, Which may recover time ilore. So may a maiden well therfore Ensample take, of that she straungeth Her love and longe er that she chaungeth Her herte upon her lustes grene To mariage, as it is fene. For thus a yere or two or thre She lefte, er that she wedded be,

While she the charge mighte bere Of children, which the world forbere Ne may, but if it shulde faile. But what maiden that in her spousaile Wol tarie, whan she take may, 1500 She shall perchaunce an other day Be let, whan that her levest were, Wherof a tale unto her ere, Whiche is coulpable upon this dede, I thenke telle of that I rede.

Hic ponit exemplum super eodem et narrat de filia Jepte, que cum ex sui patris voto in holocaustum deo occidi et offerri deberet, ipsa pro eo, quod virgo fuisset et prolem ad augmentacionem genuisset. xl. dierum spacium, ut cum suis sodalibus virginibus fuam defleret virginitatem priusquam moreretur, in exemplum aliorum a patre postulavit.

Among the Jewes, as men tolde, There was whilom by daies olde A noble duke, which Jepte hight. And fell, he shulde go to fight Ayein Amon the cruel kinge. populi dei nondum And for to speke upon this thinge Within his herte he made a vow To god and faid: Ha lorde, if thou Wolt graunt unto thy man victoire, I shall in token of thy memoire The firste life, that I may se, Of man or woman, where it be, Anone as I come home ayeine, To the, which art god foverein, Sleen in thy name and facrifie. And thus with his chivalrie He goth him forth, so as he sholde, And wanne all that he winne wolde And overcame his fomen alle. May no man lette, that shall falle.

This duke a lusty doughter had, And fame, which the wordes sprad, Hath brought unto this ladies ere, How that her fader hath don there. She waiteth upon his cominge With daunsinge and with carolinge As she, that wolde be to-fore All other, and so she was therfore In Masphat at her faders gate The first, and whan he cam ther at And sigh his doughter, he to-braide His clothes and wepend he saide:

O mighty god among us here, Now wot I that in no manere This worldes joie may be pleine. I had all that I couthe faine Ayein my fomen by thy grace, So whan I came toward this place There was no gladder man than I. But now, my lorde, all fodeinly My joie is torned into forwe, For I my doughter shall to morwe To-hewe and brenne in thy fervice To loenge of thy facrifice Through min avowe, so as it is. The maiden, whan she wist of this And figh the forme her fader made, So as she may with wordes glade Comforted him and bad him holde His covenaunt, which he is beholde

Towardes god, as he behight. But netheles her herte aflight Of that she figh her deth comende, And than unto the grounde knelende To-fore her fader she is falle And faith, so as it is befalle Upon this point, that she shall deie, Of o thing first she wolde him prey, That forty daies of respite He wolde her graunt upon this plight, That she the while may bewepe Her maidenhede, which she to kepe So longe hath had, and nought be fet Wherof her lusty youth is let, That she no children hath forth drawe In mariage after the lawe, So that the people is nought encresed, But that it mighte be relesed, That she her time hath lore so, She wolde by his leve go With other maidens to compleigne And afterward unto the peine Of deth she wolde come ayein. The fader herde his doughter fain, And therupon of one affent The maidens weren anone affent. That shulden with this maiden wende. So for to speke unto this ende They gone the downes and the dales With weping and with wofull tales,

And every wight her maidenhede
Compleigneth upon thilke nede,
That she no children hadde bore,
Wherof she hath her youthe lore,
Which never she recover may.
For so fell, that her laste day
Was come, in which she shulde take
Her deth, which she may nought forsake.
Lo, thus she deiede a wofull maide
For thilke cause, which I saide,
As thou hast understonde above.

My fader, as toward the love
Of maidens for to telle trouthe,
Ye have thilke vice of flouthe
Me thenketh right wonder wel declared,
That ye the women have nought spared
Of hem that tarien so behinde.
But yet it falleth in my minde
Toward the men, how that ye speke
Of hem that woll no travail seke
In cause of love upon deserte
To speke in wordes so coverte,
I not what travail that ye ment.

My sone, and after min entent
I woll the telle, what I thought,
How whilom men her loves bought
Through great travaile in straunge londes,
Where that they wroughten with her hondes
Of armes many a worthy dede
In sondry places, as men may rede.

6. Quem probat armorum probitas Venus approbat, et quem Torpor habet reprobum reprobat illa virum. Vecors segnicies insignia nescit amoris, Nam piger ad bravium tardius ipse venit.

Hic loquitur, quod in amoris causa milicie probitas ad armorum laboris exercicium nullatenus torpescat.

That every love of pure kinde Is first forth drawe, well I finde. But netheless yet over this Deferte doth so, that it is The rather had in many place. Forthy who fecheth loves grace, Where that these worthy women are, He may nought than him felve spare Upon his travail for to ferve, Wherof that he may thank deserve, Where as these men of armes be Sometime over the grete see, So that by londe and eke by ship He mot travaile for worship And make many hastif rodes, Somtime in Pruse, somtime in Rodes And some time into Tartarie, So that these heralds on him crie: Vailant, vailant, lo, where he goth. And than he yiveth hem golde and cloth, So that his fame mighte springe And to his ladies ere bringe Some tiding of his worthinesse, So that she might of his prowesse Of that she herde men recorde The better unto his love accorde And daunger put out of her mood, Whan alle men recorden good,

And that she wot well for her sake, That he no travail woll forsake.

My sone, of this travaile I mene Now shrif the, for it shall be sene, If thou art idel in this cas.

My fader ye, and ever was For as me thenketh truely, That every man doth more than I As of this point, and if so is, That I have ought fo done er this, It is so litel of accompt, As who faith it may nought amount To winne of love his lufty yifte. For this I telle you in shrifte, That me were lever her love winne Than Kaire and all that is therinne. And for to fleen the hethen alle I not what good there mighte falle, So mochel blood though ther be shad. This finde I writen how Crist bad, That no man other shulde slee. What shulde I winne over the see, If I my lady lost at home? But passe they the salte some, To whom Crift bad they shulden preche To all the world and his feith teche. But now they rucken in her nest And resten as hem liketh best In all the swetenesse of delices. Thus they defenden us the vices

And fit hem selven all amidde, To sleen and fighten they us bidde Hem whom they shuld, as the boke saith, Converten unto Cristes feith. But herof have I great merveile, How they wol bidde me traveile. A Sarazin if I flee shall, I slee the soule forth withall, And that was never Cristes lore. But now ho there, I fay no more. But I woll speke upon my shrifte And to Cupide I make a yifte, That who as ever pris deserve Of armes I wol love serve. As though I shuld hem bothe kepe, Als well yet wolde I take kepe, Whan it were time to abide And for to travaile and for to ride, For how as ever a man laboure, Cupide appointed hath his houre.

Hic allegat amans in 'fui excufacionem, qualiter Achilles apud Trojam propter amorem Polixene arma fua per aliquod tempus dimifit. For I have herde tell also,
Achilles left his armes so
Both of him self and of his men
At Troie for Polixenen
Upon her love whan he selle,
That for no chaunce that befelle
Among the Grekes or up or down
He wolde nought ayein the town
Ben armed for the love of her.
And so me thenketh, leve sir,

A man of armes may him reste Somtime in hope for the beste, If he may finde a werre ner, What shulde I thanne go so fer In straunge londes many a mile To ride and lese at home there while My love, it were a short beyete To winne chaffe and lese whete. But if my lady bide wolde, That I for her love sholde Travail, me thenketh truely, I mighte flee through out the sky And go through out the depe fee, For all ne sette I at a stre, What thank that I might elles gete. What helpeth a man have mete, Where drinke lacketh on the borde, What helpeth any mannes worde To fay howe I travaile faste, Where as me faileth ate laste That thing, whiche I travaile fore. O in good time were he bore, That might atteigne suche a mede. But certes if I mighte spede With any maner befinesse, Of worldes travail than I gesse There shulde me none idelship Departen from her ladyship. But this I se on daies now, The blinde god I wot nought how Cupido, which of love is lorde, He fet the thinges in discorde, That they that lest to love entende Full ofte he woll hem yive and fende Most of his grace, and thus I finde, That he that sholde go behinde, Goth many a time fer to-fore. So wote I nought right well therfore, On whether bord that I shall saile. Thus can I nought my felf counfeile, But all I fet on aventure And am, as who faith, out of cure For ought that I can fay or do, For evermore I finde it fo. The more befinesse I lay, The more that I knele and pray With gode wordes and with fofte, The more I am refused ofte With befinesse and may nought winne, And in good feith that is great finne. For I may fay of dede and thought, That idel man have I be nought, For how as ever that I be deflaied. Yet evermore I have affaied. But though my befinesse laste, All is but idel ate laste. For whan theffect is idelnesse, I not what thing is befineffe. Say what availeth all the dede, Which nothing helpeth ate nede?

For the fortune of every fame Shall of his ende bere a name. And thus for ought is yet befalle, An idel man I woll me calle As after min entendement. But upon your amendement, Min holy fader, as you femeth My reson and my cause demeth.

My fone, I have herde of thy matere, Of that thou hast the shriven here. And for to speke of idel fare Me semeth that thou tharst nought care, But only that thou might nought spede. And therof, fone, I woll the rede, Abide and haste nought to faste, Thy dedes ben every day to caste, Thou nost, what chaunce shall betide. Better is to waite upon the tide Than rowe ayein the stremes stronge. For though so be the thenketh longe, Parcas the revolucion Of heven and thy condicion Ne be nought yet of one accorde. But I dare make this recorde To Venus, whose prest that I am, That fithen that I hider cam To here, as she me bad, thy life, Wherof thou elles be giltife, Thou might herof thy conscience Excuse and of great diligence,

Which thou to love hast so dispended, Thou oughtest wel to be comended. But if so be that there ought faile Of that thou flouthest to travaile In armes for to ben absent, And for thou makest an argument Of that thou faidest here above, How Achilles through strength of love His armes lefte for a throwe. Thou shalt an other tale knowe, Whiche is contrarie, as thou shalt wite. For this a man may finde write, Whan that knighthode shall be werred, Lust may nought thanne be preferred, The bed mot thanne be forfake And shield and spere on honde take, Which thing shall make hem after glad, Whan they be worthy knightes made, Wherof, so as it cometh to honde, A tale thou shalt understonde. How that a knight shall armes sue, And for the while his ese eschue.

Hic dicit, quod amoris delectamento postposito miles arma sua preferre debet, et ponit exemplum de Ulixe, cum ipse a bello Trojano propter a-morem Penelope remanere domi voluif-Palamedis cum tantis est, quod Ulixes thoro

Upon knighthode I rede thus, How whilom whan the king Nanplus, The fader of Palamides. Came for to preien Ulixes With other Gregois eke also, set, Nanplus pater That he with hem to Troie go, fermonibus allocutus Where that the fiege shulde be, fue conjugis relicto Anone upon Penelope,

His wife, whom that he loveth hote, Thenkend, wolde hem nought behote. But he shope than a wonder wile, How that he shulde hem best beguile, So that he mighte dwelle stille At home and weld his love at wille, Wherof erly the morwe day Out of his bed, where that he lay, Whan he was up, he gan to fare Into the felde and loke and stare As he, which feigneth to be wode, He toke a plough, where that it stood, Wherin anone in stede of oxes He let do yoken grete foxes And with great falt the londe he fewe. But Nanplus, which the cause knewe, Ayein the sleighte, which he feigneth, Another fleight anone ordeigneth. And fell that time Ulixes hadde A child to fone, and Nanplus radde, How men that fone take sholde And fetten him upon the molde, Where that his fader held the plough In thilke furgh, which he tho drough. For in fuch wife he thought affay, Howe it Ulixes shulde pay, If that he were wode or none. The knightes for this child forth gone, Telemacus anone was fette To-fore the plough and even fette, labores armorum una cum aliis Troie magnanimis subibat. Where that his fader shulde drive. But whan he figh his childe as blive, He drof the plough out of the way, And Nanplus the began to fay And hath half in a jape cried:

O Ulixes, thou art aspied, What is all this thou woldest mene? For openlich it is now sene, That thou hast feigned all this thing, Which is great shame to a king, Whan that for lust of any slouthe Thou wolt in a quarel of trouthe Of armes thilke honour forfake And dwelle at home for loves fake. For better it were honour to winne Than love, which likinge is inne. Forthy take worship upon honde And elles thou shalt understonde These other worthy kinges alle Of Grece, which unto the calle, Towardes the wol be right wroth And greve the par chaunce both, Which shall be to the double shame Most for the hindringe of thy name, That thou for flouthe of any love Shalt so thy lustes set above And leve of armes the knighthode, Whiche is the prife of thy manhode And oughte first to be defired.

But he, which had his herte fired,

Upon his wife, whan he this herd, Nought o word there agein answerd, But torneth home halving ashamed And hath within him felf so tamed His herte, that all the fotie Of love for chivalrie He lefte, and be him leef or loth To Troie with hem forth he goth, That he him mighte nought excuse. Thus stant it, if a knight refuse The lust of armes to travaile. There may no worldes ese availe, But if worshipe be with all. And that hath shewed overall, For it fit wel in alle wife A knight to ben of high emprise And putten alle drede away, For in this wife I have herd fay,

The worthy knight Prothesalay
On his passage where he lay
Towardes Troie thilke siege
She which was all his owne liege
Laodomie his lusty wise,
Which for his love was pensife
As he whiche all her herte hadde,
Upon a thing, wherof she dradde,
A letter for to make him dwelle
Fro Troie, send him thus to telle,
How she hath axed of the wise
Touchend of him in suche a wise,

Hic narrat fuper eodem, qualiter Laodomia regis Prothefalai uxor volens ipfum a bello Trojano fecum retinere fatalem fibi mortem in portu Troie prenun-ciavit, sed ipse miliciam pocius quam affe&tans, ocia Trojam adiit, ubi fue mortis precio laudis perpetue cronicam ademit.

That they have done her understonde Towardes other how so it stonde, The destine it hath so shape, That he shall nought the deth escape In cas that he arrive at Troy. Forthy as to her worldes joy With all her herte she him preide And many another cause alleide, That he with her at home abide. But he hath cast her letter aside As he, which tho no maner hede Toke of her wommanische drede And forth he goth, as nought ne were, To Troy, and was the firste there, Which londeth and toke arrivaile, For him was lever in the bataile He faith to deien as a knight Than for to live in all his might And be reproved of his name. Lo, thus upon the worldes fame Knighthode hath ever yet beset, Which with no cowardis is let.

Adhuc fuper eodem, qualiter rex Saul, non obstante quod Samuelem a Phitonissa suscitatum et conjuratum responsum, quod ipse in bello moreretur, accepisset, aggrediens milicie us vite blandimentis preposuit.

Of kinge Saul also I finde, Whan Samuel out of his kinde, Through that the Phitonesse hath lered, In Samarie was arered Long time after that he was dede. hostes tamen suos The kinge Saul him axeth rede, famam cunctis hui- If that he shall go fight or none. And Samuel him faid anone:

The firste day of the bataile Thou shalt be flain withoute faile And Jonathas thy fone also. But how as ever it felle fo, This worthy knight of his corage Hath undertake the viage And wolde nought his knighthode let. For no perill he couthe fet, Wherof that bothe his fone and he Upon the mounte of Gelboe Affemblen with her enemies. For they knighthode of fuch a pris By olde daies thanne helden, That they none other thing behelden. And thus the fader for worship Forth with his fone of felaship Through lust of armes weren dede As men may in the bible rede, They whos knighthode is yet in minde And shall be to the worldes ende.

And for to loken overmore
It hath and shall ben evermore,
That of knighthode the prowesse
Is grounded upon hardiesse
Of him that dare wel undertake.
And who that wolde ensample take
Upon the forme of knightes lawe,
How that Achilles was forth drawe
With Chiro, which Centaurus hight,
Of many a wonder here he might.

Hic loquitur, quod miles in suis primordiis ad audaciam provocari debet. Et narrat, qualiter Chirocentaurus Achillem, qui secum ab infancia in monte Peleon educavit, ut audax efficeretur, primitus edocuit, quod cum ipse venacionibus ibidem insisteret, leones et tigrides huiusmodique animalia sibi resistencia et nulla alia fugitiva agitaret, et sic Achilles in juven-tute animatus famofissime milicie probitatem postmodum adoptavit. For it stood thilke time thus, That this Chiro this Centaurus Within a large wildernesse, Where was leon and leonesse. The lepard and the tigre also With hert and hinde, buk and doo, Had his dwelling, as the befell. Of Peleon upon the hill, Wherof was thanne mochel speche, There hath Chiro this child to teche. What time he was of twelve yere age, Wherfore to maken his corage The more hardy by other wey. In the forest to hunt and pley Whan that Achilles walke wolde, Centaurus bad that he ne sholde After no beste make his chas, Which wolde fleen out of his place As buk and doo and hert and hinde, With which he may no werre finde. But tho, that wolden him withstonde, There shuld he with his dart on honde Upon the tigre and the leon Purchace and make his venison, As to a knight is accordaunt. And therupon a covenaunt This Chiro with Achilles fet. That every day withouten let He shulde such a cruel beste Or sle or wounden ate leste.

So that he might a token bring
Of blood upon his home coming.
And thus of that Chiro him taught
Achilles fuch an herte caught,
That he no more a leon drad,
Whan he his dart on honde had,
Than if a leon were an affe.
And that hath made him for to paffe
All other knightes of his dede,
Whan it cam the grete nede,
As it was afterward wel knowe.

Lo, thus, my fone, thou might knowe That the corage of hardiesse Is of knighthode the prowesse, Which is to love suffisaunt Aboven all the remenaunt, That unto loves court pursue. But who that wol no slouth eschue Upon knighthode and nought travaile, I not what love him shuld availe, But every labour axeth why Of some reward, wherof that I Ensamples couthe tel inough Of hem, that toward love drough By olde daies, as they shulde.

My fader, therof here I wolde.
My fone, it is wel refonable
In place, which is honourable,
If that a man his herte fette,
That than he for no flouthe lette

To do what longeth to manhede. For if thou wolt the bokes rede Of Launcelot and other mo, There might thou feen, how it was tho Of armes, for they wold atteigne To love, which withouten peine May nought be get of idelnesse. And that I take to witnesse An old cronique in speciall, The whiche into memoriall Is write for his loves sake, How that a knight shal undertake.

Hic dicit, quod miles priusquam amoris amplexu dignus efficiatur, eventus bellicos victoriosus amplectere debet, et narrat, qualiter Hercules et Achelous propter Deianiram Calidonie regis filiam fingulare duellum adinvicem inierunt, cuius victor Hercules existens armorum meritis amorem virginis laudabiliter conquestavit.

Ther was a king, which Oenes Was hote and he under pees Held Calidoine in his empire And had a doughter Deianire. Men wist in thilke time none So fair a wight, as she was one. And as she was a lusty wight, Right fo was than a noble knight, To whom Mercurie fader was. This knight the two pillers of bras, The whiche yet a man may finde, Set up in the defert of Ynde, That was the worthy Hercules, Whos name shall be endeles For the merveiles, which he wrought. This Hercules the love fought Of Deianire, and of his thing Unto her fader, which was king,

He spake touchend of mariage. The kinge knowend his high lignage And drad also his mightes sterne To him ne durst his doughter werne And netheles, this he him faide, How Achelous er he first preide To wedden her, and in accorde They stood, as it was of recorde. But for all that this he him graunteth, That which of hem that other daunteth In armes, him she shulde take, And that the king hath undertake. This Achelous was a geaunt, A fubtil man, a deceivaunt, Which through magique and forcerie Couth all the worlde of trecherie. And whan that he this tale herde. How upon that the king answerde, With Hercules he muste feight, He trusteth nought upon his sleight Al onely, whan it cometh to nede, But that, which voideth alle drede And every noble herte stereth, The love, that no life forbereth, For his lady, whom he defireth, With hardiesse his herte fireth, And fend him word withoute faile, That he woll take the bataile. They fetten day, they chosen felde, The knightes covered under shelde

To-gider come at time fette And eche one is with other mette. It fel they foughten both on foot, There was no stone, there was no root, Which mighte letten hem the wey, But all was voide and take awey. They smiten strokes but a fewe, For Hercules, which wolde shewe His grete strengthe as for the nones, He stert upon him all at ones And caught him in his armes stronge. This geaunt wote, he may nought longe Endure under so harde bondes, And thought he wold out of his hondes By fleight in some maner escape. And as he couthe him felf forshape, In likenesse of an adder he slipte Out of his honde and forth he skipte And efte, as he that fighte wolle, He torneth him into a bolle And gan to belwe in suche a soune, As though the world shuld al go doune. The grounde he sporneth and he traunceth, His large hornes he avaunceth And cast hem here and there aboute. But he, which stant of hem no doubte, Awaiteth wel whan that he cam And him by bothe hornes nam And all at ones he him caste Unto the grounde and helde him faste,

That he ne mighte with no fleight
Out of his hond get upon height,
Till he was overcome and yolde,
And Hercules hath what he wolde.
The kinge him graunteth to fulfille
His axing at his owne wille.
And she, for whom he hadde served,
Her thought he hath her wel deserved.
And thus with great desert of armes
He wan him for to ligge in armes
As he, which hath it dere abought,
For otherwise shuld he nought.

And over this if thou wol here
Upon knighthode of this matere,
How love and armes ben acqueinted,
A man may fe both write and peinted
So ferforth, that Pentafilee,
Which was the quene of Feminee,

For who that reson understond Upon richesse it may nought stond, For that is thing, which faileth ofte. For he that stant to day alofte And all the worlde hath in his wones. To morwe he falleth all at ones Out of richesse into pouerte, So that therof is no deferte, Which gentilesse maketh abide. And for to loke on other fide How that a gentilman is bore, Adam, whiche alle was to-fore With Eve his wife, as of hem two, All was aliche gentil tho, So that of generacion To make declaracion, There may no gentilesse be. For to the reson if we se Of mannes birthe the mesure, It is so comun to nature, That it yiveth every man aliche, As well to the pouer as to the riche, For naked they ben bore bothe, The lorde hath no more for to clothe As of him felf that ilke throwe. She, which our olde moder is, The erthe bothe that and this Receiveth and alich devoureth, That she to nouther part favoureth. So wote I nothing after kinde, Where I may gentilesse finde, For lacke of vertue lacketh grace, Wherof richesse in many place, Whan men best wene for to stonde. All fodeinly goth out of honde. But vertue fet in the corage, There may no world be fo falvage, Which might it take and done away, Till whanne that the body deie. And than he shall be riched so, That it may faile nevermo, So that may well be gentileffe, Which yiveth so great a fikernesse, For after the condicion Of refonable entencion, The which out of the foule groweth And the vertue fro vice knoweth.

Omnes quidem ad unum tendimus, fet diverso tramite.

Wherof a man the vice eschueth Withoute flouth and vertue fueth, That is a verray gentilman And nothing elles, whiche he can, Ne which he hath, ne which he may. But for all that yet now a day In loves court to taken hede, The pouer vertue shall nought spede, Where that the riche vice woweth. For felde it is, that love alloweth The gentil man withouten good, Though his condition be good. But if a man of bothe two Be riche and vertuous also. Than is he well the more worth. But yet to put him felve forth He must done his besinesse, For nouther good ne gentilesse May helpen hem, whiche idel be. But who, that woll in his degre Travaile fo, as it belongeth, It happeth ofte, that he fongeth Worship and ese bothe two. For ever yet it hath be fo, That love honest in sondry wey Profiteth, for it doth awey The vice, and as the bokes fain, It maketh curteis of the vilain And to the coward hardiesse It yiveth, so that the verray prowesse

Is caused upon loves reule To him that can manhode reule, And eke toward the womanhede, Who that therof woll taken hede. For they the better affaited be In every thinge, as men may fe, For love hath ever his lustes grene In gentil folke, as it is sene, Which thing there may no kind arefte. I trowe, that there is no beste, If he with love shulde acqueint, That he ne wolde make it queint As for the while, that it laste. And thus I conclude ate laste, That they ben idel, as me femeth, Whiche unto thing, that love demeth, Forflouthen, that they shulden do, And over this, my fone, also After the vertue morall eke To speke of love, if I shall seke, Among the holy bokes wife, I finde write in fuche a wife Who loveth nought is here as dede, For love above all other is hede, Whiche hath the vertues for to lede, Of all that unto mannes dede Belongeth. For of idelship He hateth all the felaship, For flouthe is ever to despise, Whiche in disdeigne hath all apprise,

Nota de amore charitatis, ubi dicit, qui non diligit, manet in morte.

And that accordeth nought to man. For he that wit and reson can. It fit him wel, that he travaile Upon fuch thing, which might availe, For idelship is nought comended, But every law it hath defended. And in ensample thereupon The noble wife Salomon. Whiche had of every thinge infight, Saith: As the briddes to the flight Ben made, fo the man is bore To labour, whiche is nought forbore To hem, that thenken for to thrive. For we, whiche are nowe alive, Of hem that befy whilom were Als wel in fcole as elles where Now every day enfample take, That if it were now to make doctrinam scripta Thing, which that they first founden out, It sholde nought be brought about. Her lives thanne were longe, Her wittes great, her mightes stronge, Her hertes full of befinesse. Wherof the worldes redinesse In body both and in corage Stant ever upon his avauntage. And for to drawe into memoire

Que-fcripta Apostolus. funt ad nostram

Her names both and her histoire,

In fondry bokes thou might rede.

Upon the vertu of her dede

7.

Expedit de manibus labor, ut de cotidianis Actibus ac vita vivere poscit homo. Sed qui doctrine causa fert mente labores Prevalet et merita perpetuata parat.

Of every wisdom the parfit The highe god of his spirit Yaf to men in erthe here Upon the forme and the matere, Of that he wolde make hem wife. And thus cam in the first apprise Of bokes and of alle good Through hem, that whilom understood The lore, which to hem was yive, Wherof these other, that now live, Ben every day to lerne new. But er the time that men fue And that the labour forth it brought, There was no corn, though men it fought, In none of all the feldes oute. And er the wisdom cam aboute Of hem, that first the bokes write. This may well every wife man wite, There was great labour eke also. Thus was none idel of the two. That one the plough hath undertake With labour, which the hond hath take, That other toke to studie and muse As he which wolde nought refuse The labour of his wittes alle. And in this wife it is befalle Of labour, which that they begonne, We be now taught of that we conne,

Hic loquitur contra ociosos quoscumque, et maxime contra iftos, qui excellentis prudencie ingenium habentesabsque fructu operum torpefcunt. Et ponit exemplum de diligencia predecessorum, qui ad tocius humani generis doctrinam et auxilium suis continuis laboribus et studiis gracia mediante divina artes et sciencias primitus invenerunt.

Her befinesse is yet to sene, That it stant ever aliche grene, All be it so the body deie, The name of hem shall never awey. In the cronique as I finde Cham, whos labour is yet in minde, Was he, which first the letters fonde And wrote in Hebreu with his honde, Of natural philosophy He found first also the clergy. Cadmus the letters of Gregois First made upon his owne chois. Theges of thing, which shal befalle, He was the first augure of alle. And Philemon by the vifage Found to descrive the corage. Claudius, Efdras and Sulpices, Termegis, Pandulf and Frigidilles, Menander, Ephiloquorus, Solins, Pandas and Josephus The firste were of enditours Of old cronique and eke auctours. And Herodot in his science Of metre, of rime and of cadence The firste was of which men note. And of musique also the note In mannes voise or softe or sharpe That founde Jubal. And of the harpe The mery foune, whiche is to like, That founde Paulius forth with phisique.

Zeuzis found first the portreture, And Prometheus the sculpture, After what forme that hem thought The refemblaunce anon they wrought. Tubal in iron and in stele Found first the forge and wrought it wele, And Jadahel, as faith the boke, First made nette and fisshes toke. Of hunting eke he found the chace, Which now is knowe in many place, A tent of cloth with corde and stake He set up first and did it make. Berconius of cokerie First made the delicacie. The craft Minerve of wolle fonde And made cloth her owne honde. And Delbora made it of line. The women were of great engine. But thing which yiveth us mete and drinke And doth the labour for to fwinke To till the londes and fet the vines. Wherof the cornes and the wines Ben sustenaunce to mankinde. In olde bokes as I finde. Saturnus of his owne wit Hath founde first, and more vit Of chapmenhode he found the wey And eke to coigne the money Of fondry metal, as it is He was the firste man of this.

But how that metal cam a place Through mannes wit and goddes grace The route of philosophres wife Contreveden by fondry wife, First for to get it out of mine And after for to trie and fine. And also with great diligence They founde thilke experience, Which cleped is alconomy, Wherof the filver multiply They made and eke the golde also. And for to telle howe it is fo, Of bodies feven in speciall With foure spirits joint withall Stant the substance of this matere. The bodies, whiche I speke of here, Of the planettes ben begonne. The golde is titled to the fonne, The mone of filver hath his part, And iron that stond upon Mart, The leed after Satorne groweth, And Jupiter the brass bestoweth, The copper fet is to Venus, And to his part Mercurius Hath the quick filver, as it falleth, The whiche after the boke it calleth Is first of thilke foure named Of spirites, which ben proclaimed. And the spirit, whiche is secounde In fal armoniak is founde.

The thridde spirit sulphur is, The forth fuende after this Arcennicum by name is hote. With blowing and with fires hote In these thinges, whiche I say, They worchen by diverse way. For as the philosophre tolde, Of golde and filver they ben holde Two principal extremities, To whiche all other by degrees Of the metalles ben accordaunt. And so through kinde resemblaunt. That what man couthe awaie take The rust, of which they waxen blacke, And the favour of the hardnesse, They shulden take the likenesse Of golde or filver parfitly. But for to worche it fikerly Betwene the corps and the spirit, Er that the metall be parfit, In feven formes it is fet Of all. And if that one be let, The remenaunt may nought availe, But other wife it may nought faile. For they, by whom this art was founde, To every point a certain bounde Ordeignen, that a man may finde This craft is wrought by wey of kinde So that there is no fallas inne. But what man that this werk beginne,

He mot awaite at every tide, So that nothing be left aside. First of the distillation Forth with the congelation Solucion, discention And kepe in his entention The point of fublimation, And forth with calcination Of verray approbation Do that there be fixation With tempred hetes of the fire, Till he the parfit elixir Of thilke philosophres stone May gete, of which that many one Of philosophres whilom write. And if thou wolt the names wite Of thilke stone with other two, Whiche as the clerkes maden tho. So as the bokes it recorden. The kinde of hem I shall recorden.

Nota de tribus lapidibus, quos philosophi composuerunt, quorum primus dicitur lapis vegetabilis, qui sanitatem conservat, secundus dicitur lapis animalis, qui membra et virtutes sensibiles fortificat, tercius dicitur lapis mineralis, qui omnia metalla purificat et in suum perfectum naturali potencia deducit.

These olde philosophres wise
By wey of kinde in sondry wise
Thre stones made through clergy.
The firste if I shall specify,
Was cleped vegetabilis,
Of which the propre vertue is
To mannes hele for to serve
As for to kepe and to preserve
The body fro sikenesses alle,
Till deth of kinde upon him falle.

The stone seconde I the behote
Is lapis animalis hote,
The whose vertue is propre and couth
For ere and eye and nase and mouth,
Wherof a man may here and se
And smelle and taste in his degre.
And for to fele and for to go
It helpeth a man, of bothe two
The wittes sive he undersongeth
To kepe, as it to him belongeth.

The thridde stone in speciall By name is cleped minerall, Which the metalles of every mine Attempreth, till that they ben fine, And pureth hem by fuch a wey, That all the vice goth awey Of rust, of stinke and of hardnesse. And whan they ben of fuch clennesse, This minerall, fo as I finde, Transformeth all the firste kinde And maketh hem able to conceive Through his vertue and receive Both in fubstaunce and in figure Of golde and filver the nature. For they two ben thextremites, To whiche after the propreties Hath every metal his defire With helpe and comfort of the fire Forth with this stone, as it is said, Which to the fonne and mone is laid,

For to the redde and to the white This stone hath power to profite, It maketh multiplication Of golde and the fixation It causeth, and of his habite He doth the werke to be parfite Of thilke elixir, which men calle Alconomy, as is befalle To hem, that whilom were wife. But nowe it stant all otherwise. They speken fast of thilke stone, But how to make it, now wot none After the fothe experience. And netheles great diligence They fetten up thilke dede And spillen more than they spede. For alle way they finde a lette, Which bringeth in pouerte and dette To hem, that riche were afore. The loss is had, the lucre is lore, To get a pound they spenden five, I not how fuch a craft shall thrive In the maner as it is used. It were better be refused Than for to worchen upon wene In thing, which stant nought as they wene. But nought forthy, who that it knewe, The science of him self is trewe Upon the forme, as it was founded, Wherof the names yet be grounded

Of hem, that first it founden out. And thus the fame goth about To fuch as foughten befinesse Of vertue and of worthinesse, Of whom if I the names calle, Hermes was one the first of alle, To whom this art is most applied. Geber therof was magnified And Ortolan and Morien, Among the which is Avicen, Which found and wrote a great partie The practique of alconomie. Whose bokes pleinly, as they stonde Upon this craft, few understonde. But yet to put hem in affay, There ben full many now a day, That knowen litel what they mene. It is nought one to wite and wene, In forme of wordes they it trete, But yet they failen of beyete, For of to moche or of to lite There is algate found a wite, So that they folwe nought the line Of the parfite medicine, Which grounded is upon nature. But they that writen the scripture Of Greke, Arabe and of Caldee, They were of suche auctorite, That they first founden out the way Of all that thou hast herd me say,

Wherof the cronique of her lore Shall stonde in prise for evermore. But toward oure marches here Of the Latins, if thou wolt here Of hem that whilom vertuous Were and therto laborious. Carment made of her engine The firste letters of Latine, Of which the tunge Romain cam, Wherof that Aristarchus nam Forth with Donat and Dindimns The firste reule of scole, as thus How that Latin shall be compouned And in what wife it shall be souned, That every word in his degre Shall stond upon congruite. And thilke time at Rome also Was Tullius Cicero. That writeth upon rethorique, How that men shuld her wordes pike After the forme of eloquence, Which is, men fain, a great prudence. And after that out of Hebrew Jerome, which the langage knew, The bible, in which the lawe is closed, Into Latine he hath transposed. And many an other writer eke Out of Caldee, Arabe and Greke With great labour the bokes wife Translateden. And otherwise

The Latins of hem felf also Her study at thilke time so With great travaile of scole toke In sondry forme for to boke, That we may take her evidences Upon the lore of the sciences, Of crastes bothe and of clergie, Among the whiche in poesse To the lovers Ovide wrote And taught, if love be to hote, In what maner it shulde akele.

Forthy my fone, if that thou fele, That love wringe the to fore, Behold Ovide and take his lore.

My fader, if they mighte spede
My love, I wolde his bokes rede.
And if they techen to restreigne
My love, it were an idel peine
To lerne a thing which may nought be.
For lich unto the grene tre,
If that men take his root awey,
Right so min herte shulde deie,
If that my love be withdrawe.
Wherof touchend unto this sawe
There is but onely to pursue
My love and idelship escheue.

My gode sone, soth to say,
If there be siker any way
To love, thou hast said the best.
For who that woll have all his rest

And do no travaile at the nede, It is no reson that he spede In loves cause for to winne. For he, which dare nothing beginne, I not what thinge he shulde acheve. But over this thou shalt beleve, So as it fit the well to knowe, That there ben other vices flowe, Which unto love don great lette, If thou thin hert upon hem fette.

Perdit homo causam linquens sua jura sopori, Et quasi dimidium pars sua mortis habet. Est in amore vigil Venus, et quod habet vigilanti Obsequium thalamis fert vigilata suis.

Hic loquitur de fompnolencia, que accidie cameraria dicta est, cuius natura semimortua alicuius negocii vigilias observari soporifero torpore recufat, unde quatenus amorem concernit confessor aopponit.

Toward the flowe progeny There is yet one of compaigny, And he is cleped fompnolence, Which doth to flouth his reverence As he, which is his chamberlein, That many an hunderd time hath lein manti diligencius To slepe, whan he shulde wake. He hath with love trewes take, That wake who fo wake will, If he may couche adown his bill, He hath all wowed what him lift, That oft he goth to bed unkist And faith, that for no druery He woll nought leve his fluggardy. For though no man it wold allowe, To flepe lever than to wowe

Is his maner, and thus on nightes, Whan he feeth the lufty knightes Revelen, where these women are, Awey he skulketh as an hare And goth to bed and laith him fofte And of his flouth he dremeth ofte, How that he sticketh in the mire And how he fitteth by the fire And claweth on his bare shankes And how he climeth up the bankes And falleth in the flades depe. But thanne who fo take kepe, Whan he is fall in fuche a dreme, Right as a ship ayein the streme He routeth with a flepy noise And brustleth as a monkes froise, Whan it is throwe into the panne. And otherwhile felde whanne That he may dreme a lusty sweven, Him thenketh as though he were in heven And as the world were holy his. And than he speketh of that and this And maketh his exposition After his disposition Of that he wold, and in such a wife He doth to love all his fervise. I not what thank he shall deserve. But fone, if thou wolt love ferve, I rede that thou do nought fo. Ha, gode fader, certes no.

Confessio amantis.

I had lever by my trouth, Er I were fet on fuch a flouth And bere fuch a flepy fnout, Bothe eyen of my hede were out. For me were better fully deie Than I of fuche fluggardie Had any name, god me shielde. For whan my moder was with childe And I lay in her wombe clos, I wolde rather Atropos, Which is goddesse of alle deth, Anone as I had any breth, Me hadde fro my moder cast. But now I am nothing agast, I thonke god, for Lachesis Ne Cloto, which her felaw is, Me shopen no such destine, Whan they at my nativite My wierdes fetten as they wolde, But they me shopen, that I sholde Escheue of slepe the truandise, So that I hope in such a wife To love for to ben excused, That I no fompnolence have used.

For certes, fader Genius,
Yet unto now it hath be thus
At alle time if it befelle,
So that I mighte come and dwelle
In place there my lady were,
I was nought flow ne slepy there.

For than I dare well undertake, That whan her lift on nightes wake In chambre as to carole and daunce, Me thenketh I may me more avaunce, If I may gone upon her honde, Than if I wonne a kinges londe. For whan I may her hond beclippe, With fuch gladnesse I daunce and skippe, Me thenketh I touche nought the floor. The roo, which renneth on the moor, Is thanne nought fo light as I. So mow ye witen all forthy, That for the time slepe I hate. And whan it falleth other gate, So that her like nought to daunce, But on the dees to caste chaunce Or axe of love fome demaunde Or elles that her lift commaunde To rede and here of Troilus, Right as she wold or so or thus, I am all redy to confent. And if so is, that I may hent Somtime amonge a good leifer, So as I dare of my defir I telle a part, but whan I prey, Anone she biddeth me go my wey And faith: It is fer in the night. And I fwere, it is even light. But as it falleth ate laste. There may no worldes joie laste,

So mote I nedes fro her wende And of my wacche make an ende. And if she thanne hede toke, How pitouslich on her I loke, Whan that I shall my leve take, Her ought of mercy for to flake Her daunger, which faith ever nay. But he faith often: Have good day, That loth is for to take his leve. Therfore while I may beleve, I tarie forth the night alonge. For it is nought on me alonge To flepe, that I so soone go, Till that I mote algate fo And thanne I bidde: God her se, And fo down knelende on my kne I take leve, and if I shall I kisse her and go forth withall. And other while, if that I dore, Er I come fully ate dore, I torne ayein and feigne a thing, As though I hadde lost a ring Or fomwhat elles, for I wolde Kisse her eftsone, if I sholde. But selden is, that I so spede. And whan I se, that I mot nede Departe, I departe and thanne With all my herte I curse and banne, That ever slepe was made for eye. For as me thenketh I might drie

Withoute slepe to waken ever, So that I shulde nought dissever Fro her, in whom is all my light. And than I curse also the night With all the will of my corage And fay: Away thou black ymage, Which of thy derke cloudy face Makest all the worldes light deface And causest unto slepe a way, By which I mot now gone away Out of my ladies compaignie. O flepy night, I the defie And wolde that thou lay in presse With Proferpine the goddesse And with Pluto the helle king. For till I fe the daies spring, I fette flepe nought at a risshe. And with that worde I figh and wisshe And fay: Ha, why ne were it day, For yet my lady than I may Beholde, though I do no more. And efte I thenke furthermore, To some man how the night doth ese, Whan he hath thing, that may him plese The longe nightes by his fide, Where as I faile and go beside. But slepe I not wherof it serveth, Of which no man his thank deferveth To get him love in any place, But is an hindrer of his grace

H

And maketh hem dede as for a throwe, Right as a stoke were overthrowe. And so, my fader, in this wife The flepy nightes I despise And ever amiddes of my tale I thenke upon the nightingale, Which flepeth nought by wey of kinde For love, in bokes as I finde. Thus ate last I go to bedde And yet min herte lith to wedde With her, where as I came fro, Though I departe, he woll nought fo. There is no lock may shet him out, Him nedeth nought to gon about, That perce may the harde wal, Thus is he with her overall, That be her lefe, or be her loth, Into her bed min herte goth And foftly taketh her in his arme And feleth how that she is warme And wissheth, that his body were To fele, that he feleth there. And thus my felven I torment, Til that the dede slepe me hent. But thanne by a thousand score Wel more than I was to-fore I am tormented in my slepe, But that I dreme is nought on shepe, For I ne thenke nought on wulle, But I am drecched to the fulle

Of love, that I have to kepe, That now I laugh and now I wepe And now I lese and now I winne And now I ende and now beginne. And other while I dreme and mete, That I alone with her mete And that daunger is left behinde. And than in slepe such joy I finde, That I ne bede never awake. But after, whan I hede take, And shall arise upon the morwe, Than is all torned into forwe. Nought for the cause I shall arise, But for I mette in suche a wise, And ate last I am bethought, That all is vein and helpeth nought, But yet me thenketh by my wille I wold have lay and slepe stille To meten ever of fuch a fweven. For than I had a flepy heven.

My fone, and for thou tellest so, A man may finde of time ago, That many a sweven hath be certain, All be it so, that som men sain, That swevens ben of no credence. But for to shewe in evidence, That they full ofte sothe thinges Betoken, I thenke in my writinges To telle a tale therupon, Which fell by olde daies gone.

Confessor.

Hic ponit exemplum, qualiter sompnia prenostice veritatis quandoque certitudinem figurant. Et narrat, quod cum Ceix rex Trocinie pro refor-macione fratris sui Dedalionis in ancipitrem transmutati peregre proficiscens in mari longius a patria dimerfus fuerat, Juno mittens Yridem nunciam fuam in partes Chimerie ad domum Sompni jussit, quod ipse Alceone dicti regis uxori huius rei eventum per sompnia certificaret. Quo facto Alceona rem perscrutans corpus mariti sui, ubi fuper fluctus mortuus jactabatur, invenit, que pre dolore angustiata cupiens corpus amplectere, in altum mare fuper ipsum prosiliit, unde dii miserti amborum corpora in aves, que adhuc Alceones dicte funt, subito converterunt.

This finde I writen in poefy Ceix the king of Troceny Hadde Alceon to his wife, Which as her owne hertes life Him loveth. And he had also A brother, which was cleped tho Dedalion, and he par cas Fro kinde of man forshape was Into a goshauke for likenesse, Wherof this king great hevinesse Hath take and thought in his corage To gone upon a pelrinage Into a straunge region, Where he hath his devocion To done his facrifice and prey, If that he might in any wey Toward the goddes finde grace His brothers hele to purchace, So that he mighte be reformed Of that he hadde be transformed. To this purpose and to this ende This king is redy for to wende As he, which wolde go by ship. And for to done him felaship His wife unto the fee him brought With all her herte and him befought, That he the time her wolde fain, Whan that he thoughte come ayein. Within, he faith, two monthes day. And thus in alle haste he may

He toke his leve and forth he faileth Wepend, and she her self bewaileth And torneth home there she cam fro. But whan the monthes were ago, The which he fet of his coming, And that she herde no tiding, There was no care for to feche, Wherof the goddes to befeche. Tho she began in many a wife And to Juno her facrifice Above all other most she dede And for her lord she hath so hede To wite and knowe how that he ferd. That Juno the goddesse her herde Anone, and upon this matere She badde Yris her messagere To Slepes hous that she shal wende And bid him, that he make an ende By fweven and shewen all the cas Unto this lady, how it was.

This Yris fro the highe stage,
Whiche undertake hath the message,
Her reiny cope did upon,
The which was wonderly begone
With colours of diverse hewe
An hunderd mo than men it knewe,
The heven liche unto a bowe
She bende and she cam downe lowe,
The god of slepe where that she fond
And that was in a straunge lond,

Which marcheth upon Chimery. For there, as faith the poefy, The god of slepe hath made his hous, Whiche of entaile is merveilous.

Under an hill there is a cave, Which of the sonne may nought have, So that no man may knowe aright The point betwene the day and night. There is no fire, there is no sparke, There is no dore, which may charke, Wherof an eye shulde unshet, So that inward there is no let. And for to speke of that withoute, There stant no great tre nigh aboute, Wheron there mighte crowe or pie Alighte for to clepe or crie. There is no cock to crowe day Ne beste none, which noise may The hille, but all aboute round There is growend upon the ground Popy, which bereth the fede of flepe, With other herbes suche an hepe. A stille water for the nones Rennend upon the smalle stones, Which hight of Lethes the river, Under that hille in fuch maner There is, which yiveth great appetite To slepe. And thus ful of delite Slepe hath his hous, and of his couche Within his chambre if I shall touche

Of hebenus that flepy tre The bordes all aboute be, And for he shulde slepe softe Upon a fether bed alofte He lith with many a pilwe of doun, The chambre is strowed up and doun With fwevenes many a thousand fold. Thus came Yris into this holde And to the bed, whiche is all black, She goth, and ther with Slepe she spake, And in this wife as she was bede The message of Juno she dede, Full ofte her wordes she reherceth. Er she his slepy eres perceth With mochel wo. But ate laste His flombrend eyen he upcaste And faid her, that it shal be do, Wherof amonge a thousand tho Within his hous, that flepy were, In speciall he chese out there Thre, whiche shulden do this dede. The first of hem, so as I rede, Was Morpheus, the whose nature Is for to take the figure Of that persone that him liketh, Wherof that he ful ofte entriketh The life, which flepe shal by night. And Ithecus that other hight, Which hath the vois of every foune, The chefe and the condicioun

Of every life what so it is. The thridde fuend after this Is Panthasas, which may transforme Of every thing the righte forme And chaunge it in another kinde. Upon hem thre, so as I finde, Of fwevens stant all thapparence, Which other while is evidence And other while but a jape. But netheles it is so shape, That Morpheus by night alone Appereth unto Alceone In likenesse of her husbonde Al naked dede upon the stronde, And how he dreint in speciall These other two it shewen all. The tempest of the blacke cloude The wode fee, the windes loude All this she met, and figh him deien, Wherof that she began to crien Slepend a bedde there she lay. And with that noise of her affray Her women sterten up aboute, Whiche of her lady were in doubte And axen her, how that she ferde. And she right as she sigh and herde Her sweven hath tolde hem every dele. And they it halfen alle wele And fain, it is a token of good. But til she wist how that it stood.

She hath no comfort in her herte. Upon the morwe and up she sterte And to the fee, where as she met The body lay, withoute lete She drough, and whanne she cam nigh Starke dede his armes fprad she figh Her lord, fletend upon the wawe, Wherof her wittes be withdrawe. And she, which toke of deth no kepe, Anone forth lepte into the depe And wold have caught him in her arme. Wherof into this ilke day To-gider upon the fee they wone, Where many a doughter and a fone They bringen forth of briddes kinde. And for men shulden take in minde This Alceon the trewe quene, Her briddes yet as it is sene Of Alceon the name bere.

Lo thus, my sone, it may the stere Of swevens for to take kepe, For ofte time a man a slepe May se what after shall betide. Forthy it helpeth at some tide A man to slepe as it belongeth, But slouthe no life undersongeth, Whiche is to love appertenaunt.

Amans.

My fader, upon the covenaunt I dare wel make this avowe, Of all my life into nowe Als fer as I can understonde Yet took I never slepe on honde,

Whan it was time for to wake, For though min eye it wolde take, Min herte is ever there ayein. But netheles to speke it plein All this that I have faid you here Of my wakinge, as ye may here, It toucheth to my lady swete, For other wife I you behete, In straunge place whan I go Me lift no thing to wake fo. For whan the women listen play And I her fe nought in the way, Of whome I shulde merthe take, Me lift nought longe for to wake. But if it be for pure shame Of that I wolde escheue a name, That they ne shuld have cause none To fay: Ha, where goth fuch one, That hath forlore his contenaunce, And thus among I finge and daunce And feigne lust, thereas none is. For ofte fith I fele this. Of thought, which in min herte falleth, Whan it is night min hede appalleth, And that is for I fe her nought, Whiche is the waker of my thought. And thus as timelich as I may Ful oft, whan it is brode day, I take of all these other leve And go my wey, and they beleve,

That feen par cas her loves there, And I go forth as nought ne were Unto my bed, fo that alone I may there ligge, figh and grone And wisshen all the longe night, Til that I fee the daies light. I not if that be fompnolence, But upon youre conscience, Min holy fader, demeth ye.

Confessor.

My fone, I am well paid with the Of slepe, that thou the sluggardy By night in loves compaignie Escheued hast, and do thy pain So, that thy love dare nought pleine. For love upon his lust wakende Is ever and wolde that none ende Were of the longe nightes fet, Wherof that thou beware the bet To telle a tale I am bethought, How love and slepe accorden nought.

Hic dicit, quod vigilia in amantibus, et non fompnolencia laudanda est. Et po-nit exemplum de Cephalo filio Phebi, qui nocturno filencio auroram amicam fuam diligencius amplectens solem et lunam interpellabat, videlicet quod fol in circulo ab oriente distanciori currum cum luce sua retardaret, et quod luna spera sua loniens noctem continu-

For love who that lift to wake By night, he may ensample take Of Cephalus, whan that he lay With Aurora the fwete may In armes all the longe night. But whan it drough toward the light, That he within his herte figh The day, which was the morwe nigh, Anone unto the fonne he preyde giffima orbem circu- For lust of love and thus he saide:

O Phebus, which the daies light Governest til that it be night And gladdest every creature After the lawe of thy nature, But netheles there is a thing, Whiche only to thy knouleching Belongeth, as in privete To love and to his duete, Whiche axeth nought to ben apert, But in filence and in covert Defireth for to be beshaded. And thus whan that the light is faded And vesper sheweth him alofte And that the night is longe and fofte Under the cloudes derke and stille, Than hath this thing most of his wille. Forthy unto thy mightes high, As thou, whiche art the daies eye Of love and might no counseil hide, Upon this derke nightes tide With all min herte I the beseche. That I plesaunce mighte seche With her, which lieth in min armes. Withdrawe the banner of thin armes And let thy lightes ben unborne And in the figne of Capricorne The hous appropred to Satorne, I prey the, that thou wolt sojorne, Where ben the nightes derke and longe. For I my love have underfonge,

Which lith here by my fide naked As she, which wolde ben awaked, And me list no thing for to slepe, So were it good to take kepe Now at this nede of my praiere, And that the like for to stere Thy firy cart and fo ordeigne, That thou thy swifte hors restreigne Lowe under erthe in occident, That they towardes orient By cercle go the longe wey. And eke to the, Diane, I prey, Which cleped art of thy noblesse The nightes mone and the goddesse, That thou to me be gracious And in Cancro thin owne hous Ayein Phebus in opposite Stond al this time, and of delite Behold Venus with a glad eye, For than upon aftronomy Of due constellacion Thou makest prolificacion And dost that children ben begete, Which grace if that I might gete With all min herte I woll ferve By night and thy vigile observe.

Confessor.

Lo, thus this lufty Cephalus, Praid unto Phebe and to Phebus The night in lengthe for to drawe, So that he mighte do the lawe In thilke point of loves heste, Which cleped is the nightes feste Withoute slepe of sluggardy, Which Venus oute of compaigny Hath put awey, as thilke same, Which luftles fer from alle game In chambre doth full ofte wo A bedde, whan it falleth fo, That love shulde ben awaited. But flouthe, which is evil affaited, With slepe hath made his retenue, That what thinge is to love due Of all his dette he paieth none. He wot nought, how the night is gone Ne how the day is come aboute, But only for to slepe and route, Til high midday, that he arise. But Cephalus did otherwise, As thou, my fone, hast herd above.

My fader, who that hath his love A bedde naked by his fide And wolde than his eyen hide With slepe, I not what man is he. But certes as touchend of me, That fell me never yet er this. But other while whan so is, That I may cacche slepe on honde Liggend alone, than I fonde To dreme a mery sweven er day. And if so falle, that I may

Amans.

My thought with such a sweven plese,
Me thenketh I am somdele in ese,
For I none other comfort have.
So nedeth nought, that I shall crave
The sonnes carte for to tarie
Ne yet the mone, that she carie
Her cours alonge upon the heven,
For I am nought the more in even
Towardes love in no degre,
But in my slepe yet than I se
Somwhat in sweven of that me liketh,
Whiche afterward min hert entriketh,
Whan that I finde it other wise.
So wote I nought of what service
That slepe to mannes ese doth.

Confessor.

My fone, certes thou faift foth. But only that it helpeth kind Somtime in phifique as I finde, Whan it is take by mesure, But he which can no slepe mesure Upon the reule as it belongeth Ful ofte of sodein chaunce he fongeth Suche infortune, that him greveth. But who these olde bokes leveth Of sompnolence howe it is write, There may a man the sothe wite, If that he wolde ensample take, That other while is good to wake, Wherof a tale in poesy I thenke for to specify.

Ovide telleth in his fawes, How Jupiter by olde dawes Lay by a maide, whiche Yo Was cleped, wherof that Juno His wife was wrothe and the goddesse Of Yo torneth the likenesse Into a cow to gon there oute The large feldes all aboute And gette her mete upon the grene. And therupon this highe quene Betoke her Argus for to kepe, For he was felden wont to flepe And yet he had an hunderd eyen, And all aliche wel they fighen. Now herken how that he was beguiled. Mercury, which was all affiled, This cow to stell he came desguised And had a pipe wel devised Upon the notes of musique, Wherof he might his eres like. And over that he had affaited His lufty tales and awaited His time. And thus into the felde He came, where Argus he behelde With Yo, which beside him went, With that his pipe anon he hent And gan to pipe in his manere Thing, which was flepy for to here. And in his piping ever amonge He tolde him fuch a lufty fonge, Hic loquitur in amoris causa contra istos, qui sompnolencie dediti ea, que servare tenentur, amittunt, et narrat, quod cum Yo puella pulcherrima a Junone in vaccam transformata et in Argi custodiam sic deposita fuisset, superveniens Mercurius Argum dormentem occidit et ipsam vaccam a pastura rapiens, quo voluit, secum perduxit.

That he the fool hath brought a slepe,
There was none eye that mighte kepe
His hede, which Mercury of-smote
And forth with all anone foot hote
He stale the cow, whiche Argus kepte,
And all this fel for that he slepte.
Ensample it was to many mo,
That mochel slepe doth ofte wo,
Whan it is time for to wake.
For if a man this vice take
In sompnolence and him delite,
Men shuld upon his dore write
His epitaphe and on his grave,
For he to spille and nought to save
Is shape, as though he were dede.

Forthy my sone, hold up thin hede And let no slepe thin eye englue, But whan it is to reson due.

My fader, as touchend of this Right so as I you tolde it is, That ofte a bedde, whan I sholde, I may nought slepe, though I wolde. For love is ever faste byme, Which taketh none hede of due time, For whan I shall min eyen close, Anone min hert he woll oppose And hold his scole in such a wise, Till it be day that I arise, That selde it is whan that I slepe. And thus fro sompnolence I kepe

Min eye. And forthy if there be Ought elles more in this degre Now axeth forth. My fone, yis. For flouthe, whiche as moder is, The forth drawer and the norice To man of many a dredful vice, Hath yet another last of alle, Which many a man hath made to falle, Where that he might never arise, Wherof for thou the shalt avise, Er thou so with thy self missare, What vice it is, I woll declare.

Whan flouth hath don all that he may To drive forth the longe day,
Till it become to the nede,
Than ate last upon the dede
He loketh how his time is lore,
And is so wo begone therfore,
That he within his thought conceiveth
Tristesse and so him self deceiveth,
That he wanhope bringeth inne,
Where is no comfort to beginne.
But every joy him is deslaied,
So that within his herte affraied
A thousand time with one breth
Wepend he wissheth after deth,

Hic loquitur super ultima specie accidie, que tristicia sive desperacio dicitur, cuius obstinata condicio tocius consolacionis spem deponens alicuius remedii, quo liberari poterit, fortunam sibi evenire impossibile credit.

Whan he fortune fint adverse. For than he woll his hope reherfe, As though his world were all forlore, And faith: Alas, that I was bore, How shall I live? how shall I do? For now fortune is thus my fo, I wot well god me woll nought helpe, What shulde I than of joies yelpe, Whan there no bote is of my care. So overcast is my welfare, That I am shapen all to strife. Helas, that I nere of this life, Er I be fullich overtake. And thus he woll his forwe make, As god him mighte nought availe. But yet ne woll he nought travaile To helpe him felf at suche a nede, But floutheth under fuche a drede. Whiche is affermed in his herte Right as he mighte nought afterte The worldes wo, which he is inne. Also whan he is falle in sinne, Him thenketh he is fo fer coulpable, That god woll nought be merciable So great a finne to forvive. And thus he leveth to be shrive. And if a man in thilke throwe Wold him counfeile, he wol nought knowe The fothe, though a man it finde. For triftesse is of suche a kinde.

That for to mainten his foly, He hath with him obstinacy, Which is within of fuche a flouth, That he forfaketh alle trouth And woll unto no reson bowe. And yet ne can he nought abowe His owne skille, but of hede Thus dwineth he, till he be dede In hindring of his owne estate. For where a man is obstinate, Wanhope folweth ate laste, Which may nought longe after laste, Till southe make of him an ende. But god wot whider he shall wende.

My fone, and right in fuch manere, There be lovers of hevy chere, That forwen more than is nede,

Whan they be taried of her spede And conne nought hem felven rede, But lesen hope for to spede

And stinten love to pursue.

And thus they faden hide and hewe And lustles in her hertes waxe.

Herof it is that I wolde axe.

If thou, my fone, arte one of tho?

Ha, gode fader, it is so, Outtake o point, I am beknowe. For elles I am overthrowe In all that ever ye have faide, My forwe is evermore unteide

And fecheth over all my veines. But for to counseile of my peines, I can no bote do therto. And thus withouten hope I go, So that my wittes ben empeired And I as who faith am dispeired To winne love of thilke fwete, Withoute whom, I you behete, Min herte, that is fo bestadde, Right inly never may be gladde. For by my trouth I shall nought lie Of pure forwe, whiche I drie, For that she saith she will me nought, With drecchinge of min owne thought In fuche a wanhope I am falle, That I ne can unnethes calle As for to speke of any grace My ladies mercy to purchace. But yet I faie nought for this, That all in my default it is, That I cam never yet in stede, Whan time was, that I my bede Ne faide, and as I dorste tolde. But never found I, that she wolde For ought she knewe of min entent To speke a goodly worde affent. And netheles this dare I fay, That if a finfull wolde prey To god of his forvivenesse With half so great a befinesse,

As I have do to my lady
In lack of axing of mercy,
He shulde never come in helle.
And thus I may you sothly telle
Sauf only that I crie and bidde,

And therof yes me my penaunce,

My fone, of that thin herte fiketh
With forwe might thou nought amende,
Till love his grace woll the fende,
For thou thin owne cause empeirest,
What time as thou thy self despeirest.
I not what other thinge availeth
Of hope, whan the herte faileth,
For suche a sore is incurable,
And eke the goddes ben vengeable,
And that a man may right well frede
These olde bokes who so rede
Of thing, which hath befalle er this,
Now here, of what ensample it is.

Whilom by olde daies fer
Of Mese was the king Theucer,
Whiche had a knight to sone Iphis.
Of love and he so mastred is,
That he hath set all his corage
As to reward of his lignage
Upon a maide of lowe estate.
But though he were a potestate

Hic narrat, qualiter Iphis, regis Theucri filius, ob amorem cuiusdam puelle nomine Araxarathen, quam neque donis aut precibus vincere potuit, desperans ante patris ipsius puelle januas noctanter se suspendit, unde dii commoti, dictam puellam in lapidem durissimam transmutarunt, quam rex Theucer una cum filio fuo apud civitatem Salaminam in templo Veneris pro perpetua memoria fepeliri et locari fecit.

Of worldes good, he was fubgit To love and put in suche a plite, That he excedeth the mesure Of reson, that him self assure He can nought. For the more he praid, The lasse love on him she laid. He was with love unwife constreigned, And she with reson was restreigned. The lustes of his herte he sueth. And she for drede shame eschueth, And as she shulde, toke good hede To fave and kepe her womanhede. And thus the thing stood in debate Betwene his lust and her estate, He yaf, he fend, he spake by mouth, But yet for ought that ever he couth Unto his spede he found no wey, So that he cast his hope awey. Within his hert he gan despeire Fro day to day and fo empeire, That he hath lost all his delite Of lust, of slepe, of appetite, That he through strength of love lasseth His wit and reson overpasseth As he, whiche of his life ne rought. His deth upon him felf he fought, So that by night his wey he nam, There wiste none, where he becam. The night was derk, there shone no mone, To-fore the gates he cam sone,

Where that this yonge maiden was, And with this wofull worde, helas, His dedly pleintes he began So stille, that there was no man It herde, and than he faide thus: O thou Cupide, O thou Venus, Fortuned by whose ordenaunce Of love is every mannes chaunce. Ye knowen all min hole hert. That I ne may your hond aftert, On you is ever that I crie, And you deigneth nought to plie Ne toward me your ere encline. Thus for I fe no medicine To make an ende of my quarele, My deth shall be in stede of hele. Ha, thou my wofull lady dere, Which dwellest with thy fader here And slepest in thy bedde at ese, Thou wost nothing of my disese, How thou and I be now unmete. Ha lord, what fweven shalt thou mete? What dremes hast thou now on honde? Thou slepest there, and I here stonde, Though I no deth to the deferve. Here shall I for thy love sterve, Here shall I a kings sone deie For love and for no felony, Wheder thou therof have joy or forwe, Here shalt thou se me dede to morwe.

O herte hard aboven alle, This deth, which shall to me befalle, For that thou wol nought do my grace, Yet shall be tolde in many a place, That I am dede for love and trouth In thy defaulte and in thy flouth, Thy daunger shall to many mo Ensample be for evermo, Whan they my wofull deth recorde. And with that worde he toke a corde, With which upon the gate tre He henge him felf, that was pite. The morwe cam, the night is gone, Men comen out and figh anone, Where that this yonge lord was dede. There was an hous withoute rede, For no man knewe the cause why, There was wepinge, there was cry. This maiden, whan that she it herde And figh this thing howe it misferde, Anone the wifte what it ment And all the cause how it went, To all the world she tolde it out And preith to hem, that were about, To take of her the vengeaunce, For she was cause of thilke chaunce, Why that this kinges fone is spilt. She taketh upon her felf the gilt And is all redy to the peine, Whiche any man her wold ordeigne.

And but if any other wolde, She faith, that she her selve sholde Do wreche with her owne honde, Through out the worlde in every londe That every life therof shall speke, How she her self it shulde wreke. She wepeth, she crieth, she swouneth ofte, She cast her eyen up alofte And faid among full pitoufly: O god, thou wost wel it am I, For whom Iphis is thus beseine, Ordeigne fo, that men may faine A thousand winter after this. How fuche a maiden did amis, And as I didde do to me, For I ne didde no pite To him, which for my love is lore, Do no pite to me therfore. And with this word she fell to grounde A fwoune, and there she lay astounde.

The goddes, which her pleintes herd And figh how wofully she ferd, Her life they toke awey anone And shopen her into a stone After the forme of her ymage Of body both and of visage. And for the merveile of this thing Unto this place came the king And eke the quene and many mo, And whan they wisten it was so,

As I have tolde it here above, How that Iphis was dede for love, Of that he hadde be refused, They helden alle men excused And wondren upon the vengeaunce. And for to kepe remembraunce This faire ymage maiden liche With compaignie noble and riche With torche and great folempnite To Salamine the cite They lede and carie forth withall This dede corps, and faine it shall Beside thilke ymage have His fepulture and be begrave. This corps and this ymage thus Into the cite to Venus. Where that goddesse her temple had, To-gider bothe two they lad. This ilke ymage as for miracle Was fet upon an high pinacle That alle men it mighte knowe, And under that they maden lowe A tombe riche for the nones Of marbre and eke of jaspre stones, Wherin that Iphis was beloken That evermore it shall be spoken. And for men shall the sothe wite They have her epitaphe write As thing, which shulde abide stable, The letters graven in a table

Of marbre were and saiden this:
Here lith, which sloughe him self, Iphis
For love of Araxarathen,
And in ensample of tho women,
That suffren men to deie so,
Her forme a man may se also,
How it is torned sless and bone
Into the sigure of a stone.
He was to neiss and she to harde,
Beware forthy here afterwarde,
Ye men and women bothe two,
Ensampleth you of that was tho.

Lo thus, my fone, as I the fay
It greveth by diverse way
In desespeire a man to falle,
Which is the laste braunch of alle
Of slouthe, as thou hast herd devise,
Wherof that thou thy self avise.
Good is er that thou be deceived,
Wher that the grace of hope is weived.

My fader, how so that it stonde,
Now have I pleinly understonde
Of slouthes court the properte,
Wherof touchend in my degre
For ever I thenke to beware.
But over this so as I dare
With all min hert I you beseche,
That ye me wolde enforme and teche,
What there is more of your apprise
In love als well as otherwise,

Where he the cause hath undersonge,
Wherof hereafter thou shalt here
The forme bothe and the matere.

IRST whan the highe god

This worlde and that the kind of man

Was fall into no gret encress,
For worldes good was tho no press,
But all was set to the comune,
They speken than of no fortune
Or for to lese or for to winne,
Till avarice brought it inne.
And that was whan the world was woxe
Of man, of hors, of shepe, of oxe,
And that men knewen the money,
Tho wente pees out of the wey
And werre came on every side,

Hic in quinto libro intendit confessor tractare de avaricia, que omnium malorum radix esse dicitur, necnon de eiusdem vicii speciebus, et primum ipsius avaricie naturam describens amanti quatenus amorem concernit super hoc specialius opponit.

And of comun his propre made, So that in stede of shovel and spade The sharpe swerd was take on honde. And in this wife it cam to londe, Wherof men maden diches depe And highe walles for to kepe The gold, which avarice encloseth. But all to litel him supposeth, Though he might all the world purchase. For what thing, that he may embrace Of golde, of catel or of londe, He let it never out of his honde. But get him more and halt it fast, As though the world shuld ever last. So is he lich unto the helle. For as these olde bokes telle. What cometh ther in lass or more It shall departe nevermore. Thus whan he hath his cofre loken, It shall nought after ben unstoken, But whan him lift to have a fight Of gold, how that it shineth bright, That he theron may loke and muse, For otherwise he dare nought use To take his part or lasse or more. So is he pouer, and evermore Him lacketh, that he hath inough. An oxe draweth in the plough Of that him felf hath no profite, A shep right in the same plite

His wolle bereth, but on a day
An other taketh the flees away.
Thus hath he, that he nought ne hath,
For he therof his part ne tath,
To fay how suche a man hath good
Who so that reson understood
It is unproperliche said,
That good hath him and halt him taid,
That he ne gladdeth nought withall,
But is unto his good a thrall
And a subgit thus serveth he,
Where that he shulde maister be,
Suche is the kinde of thavarous.

My sone, as thou art amorous, Tell if thou fare of love so.

My fader, as it semeth no,
That avarous yet never I was,
So as ye setten me the cas.
For as ye tolden here above
In full possession of love
Yet was I never here to-fore,
So that me thenketh well therfore,
I may excuse well my dede.
But of my will withoute drede
If I that tresor mighte gete,
It shulde never be foryete,
That I ne wolde it faste holde,
Till god of love him selve wolde,
That deth us shuld departe atwo.
For leveth well, I love her so,

That even with min owne life, If I that swete lusty wife Might ones welden at my wille, For ever I wold her holde stille. And in this wife taketh kepe, If I her had, I wolde her kepe And yet no friday wolde I fast, Though I her kepte and helde fast. Fy on the bagges in the kist, I had inough, if I her kist. For certes if she were min. I had her lever than a mine Of gold, for all this worldes riche Ne mighte make me fo riche As she, that is so inly good. I fette nought of other good, For might I gette fuch a thing, I had a trefor for a king. And though I wolde it faste holde, I were thanne wel beholde. But I might pipe now with laffe And fuffre that it overpasse, Nought with my will, for thus I wolde Ben avarous if that I sholde. But fader, I you herde fay, How thavarous hath yet some way, Wherof he may be glad. For he May, whan him lift, his trefor fe And grope and fele it all aboute. But I full ofte am shet theroute,

There as my worthy trefor is,
So is my life lich unto this,
That ye me tolden here to-fore,
How that an oxe his yoke hath bore
For thing that shulde him nought availe.
And in this wise I me travaile.
For who that ever hath the welfare
I wot wel that I have the care,
For I am had and nought ne have
And am as who saith loves knave.
Now demeth in your owne thought,
If this be avarice or nought.
My sone, I have of the no wonder,

With love, which to kinde accordeth. But so as every boke recordeth, It is to finde no plesaunce, That men above his sustenaunce Unto the gold shall serve and bowe, For that may no reson avowe. But avarice netheles, If he may geten his encres Of gold, that wold he serve and kepe, For he taketh of nought elles kepe, But for to fille his bagges large, And all is to him but a charge,

For he ne parteth nought withall, But kepeth it, as a fervaunt shall, And thus though that he multiply

Though thou to ferve be put under

Confessor.

He is, for man is nought amended With gold, but if it be despended To mannes use, wherof I rede A tale and take therof good hede Of that befell by olde tide, As telleth us the clerke Ovide.

Hic loquitur contra istos avaros et narrat, qualiter Mida rex Frigie Cillenum Bachi facerdotem, quem rustici vinculis ferreis alligarunt, dissolvit et in hospicium suum benignissime recollegit, pro quo Bachus quodcunque munus nare concessit. Unde rex avaricia ductus, ut quicquid tangeret in aurum converteretur, indiscrete peciit. Quo facto postea contigit, quod cibos cum ipse sumere vellet in aurum manducare non potuit. Et sic percipiens aurum pro tunc non posse sibi valere illud auferri et tunc ea, que victui sufficerent necessaria, iteratis precibus a deo mitissime postulavit.

Bachus, which is the god of wine, Accordant unto his divine A prest, the which Cillenus hight, He had, and fell fo, that by night This prest was drunke and goth astraied, Wherof the men were evil apaied rex exigere vellet do- In Frigiland, where as he went. But ate last a cherle him hent With strength of other felaship, So that upon his drunkeship They bounden him with cheines faste conversos And forth they lad him also faste Unto the king, which highte Mide. But he that wolde his vice hide This curteis king toke of him hede And bad, that men him shulde lede Into a chambre for to kepe, Till he of leiser hadde slepe. And tho this prest was sone unbound And up a couche fro the ground To flepe he was laid foft inough. And whan he woke, the king him drough To his presence and did him chere, So that this prest in such manere,

While that him liketh, ther he dwelleth And al this he to Bachus telleth, Whan that he cam to him ayein. And whan that Bachus herde fain, How Mide hath done his curtefy, Him thenketh, it were a vilany, But he reward him for his dede. So as he might of his godhede. Unto this king this god appereth And clepeth, and that other hereth. This god to Mide thonketh faire Of that he was so debonaire Toward his prest, and bad him say What thinge it were he wolde pray, He shulde it have of worldes good. This king was glad and stille stood And was of his axinge in doubte And all the worlde he cast aboute, What thing was best for his estate. And with him felf stood in debate Upon thre pointes, which I finde Ben levest unto mannes kinde. The first of hem it is delite. The two ben worship and profite. And than he thought, if that I crave Delite, though I delite may have, Delite shall passen in my age That is no fiker avauntage. For every joie bodely Shall ende in wo, delite forthy

Woll I nought chefe, and if worship I axe and of the world lordship, That is an occupation Of proude ymagination, Which maketh an herte vein withinne, There is no certain for to winne, For lorde and knave is all o wey, Whan they be bore, and whan they deie. And if I profite axe wolde, I not in what maner I sholde Of worldes good have fikernesse, For every thefe upon richesse Awaiteth for to robbe and stele. Such good is cause of harmes fele, And also though a man at ones Of all the world within his wones The trefor might have every dele, Yet had he but one mannes dele Toward him felf, fo as I thinke Of clothing and of mete and drinke, For more out take vanite There hath no lord in his degre.

And thus upon these points diverse
Diverselich he gan reherce,
What point it thought him for the best.
But pleinly for to get him rest
He can no siker waie cast,
And netheles yet ate laste
He fell upon the covetise
Of gold, and than in sondry wise

He thought, as I have faid to-fore, How trefor may be fone lore, And hadde an inly great defir Touchende of fuch recoverir, How that he might his cause availe To gete him gold withoute faile. Within his hert and thus he preiseth The gold and faith, how that he peifeth Above all other metal most, The gold, he faith, may lede an hoste To make werre ayein a king, The gold put under alle thing, And fet it whan him lift above, The gold can make of hate love And werre of pees and right of wrong And long to short and short to long, Withoute gold may be no fest, Gold is the lord of man and best And may hem bothe beie and felle, So that a man may fothly telle That all the world to golde obeieth.

Forthy this king to Bachus preieth
To graunt him gold, but he excedeth
Mesure more than him nedeth.
Men tellen, that the malady,
Which cleped is ydropesy
Resembled is unto this vice
By way of kinde of avarice,
The more ydropesy drinketh,
The more him thursteth, for him thinketh,

That he may never drink his fille. So that there may no thing fulfille The lustes of his appetite. And right in such a maner plite Stant avarice and ever stood. The more he hath of worldes good, The more he wolde it kepe streite And ever more and more coveite, And right in fuch condicion Withoute good discrecion This king with avarice is fmitte, That all the worlde it mighte witte. For he to Bachus thanne preide, That therupon his honde he leide, It shulde through his touche anone Become gold, and therupon This god him graunteth as he bad. Though was this kinge of Frige glad. And for to put it in affay With all the haste that he may He toucheth that, he toucheth this, And in his hond all gold it is, The stone, the tre, the leef, the gras, The flour, the fruit all gold it was. Thus toucheth he, while he may laste To go, but hunger ate laste Him toke so, that he must nede By wey of kinde his hunger fede. The cloth was laid, the bord was fet And all was forth to-fore him fet

His dissh, his cup, his drink, his mete, But whan he wolde or drinke or ete Anone as it his mouth cam nigh It was all gold, and than he figh Of avarice the folie. And he with that began to crie And preide Bachus to forvive His gilt and fuffre him for to live And be fuch, as he was to-fore, So that he were nought forlore. This god which herd of this grevaunce Toke routhe upon his repentaunce And bad him go forth redely Unto a flood was faste by, Which Paceole thanne hight, In whiche als clene as ever he might He shuld him wasshen overall, And faid him thanne that he shall Recover his first estate ayein. This king right as he herde fain Into the flood goth fro the lond And wish him bothe fote and hond And so forth all the remenaunt As him was fet in covenaunt, And than he figh merveiles straunge, The flood his colour gan to chaunge, The gravel with the smale stones To gold they torne both atones, And he was quite of that he hadde, And thus fortune his chaunce ladde.

And whan he figh his touch awey, He goth him home the right wey And liveth forth as he did er And put all avarice afer And the richesse of gold despiseth And faith, that mete and cloth fuffifeth. Thus hath this king experience, How fooles done the reverence To gold, which of his owne kinde Is lasse worth than is the rinde To fustenaunce of mannes food. And than he made lawes good And all his thing fet upon skille, He bad his people for to tille Her lond and live under the lawe, And that they shulde also forth drawe Bestaile and seche none encrees Of gold, whiche is the breche of pees. For this a man may finde write, To-fore the time, er gold was smite In coigne, that men the florein knewe, There was wel nighe no man untrewe, Tho was there nouther shield ne spere Ne dedly wepen for to bere, Tho was the town withouten walle. Which nowe is closed over alle. Tho was there no brocage in lond,

Was moder first of malengin

Which now taketh every cause on hond. So may men knowe, how the florein

And bringer in of alle werre,
Wherof this world stant out of herre,
Through the counseil of avarice,
Whiche of his owne propre vice
Is as the helle wonderful,
For it may nevermore be full,
That what as ever cometh therinne
A wey ne may it never winne.

But fone min, do thou nought fo, Let all suche avarice go And take thy part of that thou hast, I bidde nought that thou do wast, But hold largesse in his mesure. And if thou se a creature. Which through pouerte is falle in nede, Yef him some good, for this I rede To him that wol nought yeven here, What peine he shal have elles where, There is a pein amonges alle Benethe in helle, which men calle The wofull peine of Tantaly, Of which I shall the redely Devise how men therin stonde. In helle thou shalt understonde There is a flood of thilke office, Which ferveth all for avarice. What man that stonde shall therinne He stant up even to the chinne. Above his hede also there hongeth A fruit, which to that peine longeth, Nota de pena Tantali, cuius amara sitis dampnatos torquet avaros.

And that fruit toucheth ever in one His overlippe, and therupon Such thirst and hunger him assaileth, That never his appetite ne faileth. But whan he wolde his hunger fede, The fruit withdraweth him at nede, And though he heve his hede on high, The fruit is ever aliche nigh, So is the hunger wel the more. And also though him thurste sore And to the water bowe adown, The flood in fuch condicion Avaleth, that his drinke arecche He may nought. Lo now, whiche a wreche, That mete and drinke is him fo couth And yet ther cometh none in his mouth. Lich to the peines of this flood Stant avarice in worldes good, He hath inough and yet him nedeth, For his scarcenesse it him forbedeth And ever his hunger after more Travaileth him aliche fore, So is he peined overall. Forthy thy goodes forth withal, My fone, loke thou despende, Wherof thou might thy felf amende Both here and eke in other place. And also if thou wolt purchace To be beloved, thou must use Largesse, for if thou refuse

To vive for thy loves fake, It is no reson that thou take Of love, that thou woldest crave. Forthy if thou wolt grace have, Be gracious and do largesse, Of avarice, and the fikenesse Escheue above all other thinge And take ensample of Mide the kinge And of the flood of helle also, Where is inough of alle wo. And though there were no matere But onely that we finden here, Men oughten avarice eschue, For what man thilke vice fue, He gete him felf but litel rest. For how so that the body rest, The hert upon the gold travaileth, Whom many a nightes drede affaileth. For though he ligge a bedde naked, His herte is evermore awaked And dremeth, as he lith to flepe, How befy that he is to kepe His trefor, that no thefe it stele. Thus hath he but a wofull wele, And right fo in the same wise, If thou thy felf wolt wel avise, There be lovers of fuche inow, That wolle unto reson bowe. If so be that they come above, Whan they ben maisters of her love

And that they shulden be most glad With love, they ben most bestad, So fain they wolden it holden all. Her herte, her eye is overall, And wenen every man be a thefe To stele awey that hem is lefe, Thus through her owne fantafy They fallen into jeloufy. Than hath the ship to-brok his cable With every winde and is mevable.

Amans.

My fader, for that ye now telle, I have herd oftetime telle Of jelousy, but what it is Yet understode I never er this. Wherfore I wolde you befeche, That ye me wolde enforme and teche What maner thing it mighte be.

Confessor.

My fone, that is hard to me, But netheles as I have herd, Now herken and thou shalt be answerd.

Nota de Jelousia, cuius fantastica susamorem picio quemvis fidelissimum multociens tum ymaginatur.

Among the men lack of manhode In mariage upon wif-hode Maketh that a man him felf deceiveth, fine causa corrup- Wherof it is, that he conceiveth That ilke unfely malady, The whiche is cleped jeloufy, Of whiche if I the proprete Shall telle after the nicete, So as it worcheth on a man, A fever it is cotidian,

Whiche every day wol come aboute, Where so a man be in or oute, At home if that a man wol wone, This fever is than of comun wone Most grevous in a mannes eye, For than he maketh him tote and pry, Where so as ever his love go, She shall nought with her litel toe Misteppe, but he se it all. His eye is walkend overall, Where that she singe or that she daunce, He feeth the lest countenaunce, If the loke on a man afide Or with him rowne at any tide, Or that she laugh, or that she loure, His eye is there at every houre. And whan it draweth to the night, If she than be withoute light, Anone is all the game shent. For than he fet his parlement To speke it whan he cometh to bed And faith: If I were now to wed, I wolde never more have wife. And so he torneth into strife The luft of loves duete And al upon diversite. If the be freshe and well arraied, He faith her banner is desplaied To clepe in gestes by the way, And if she be nought wel besey

And that her list nought to be glad, He bereth on honde that she is mad And loveth nought her husbonde. He faith, he may wel understonde, That if she wolde his compaignie, She shulde than afore his eye Shew all the plefure that she might, So that by daie ne by night She not what thing is for the best, But liveth out of alle rest. For what as ever him lift to fain. She dare nought speke o worde ayein, But wepeth and holt her lippes close. She may wel write: Sans repose, The wife, which is to fuch one maried Of alle women be he waried, For with his fever of jeloufy His eche daies fantafy Of forwe is ever aliche grene, So that there is no love fene. While that him lift at home abide. And whan so is he woll out ride, Than hath he redy his afpy Abiding in her compaigny A jangler, an evil mouthed one, That she ne may no whider gone Ne speke o word, ne ones loke, But he ne wol it wende and croke And torne after his owne entent, Though she no thing but honour ment.

Whan that the lord cometh home ayein The jangler must somwhat sain. So what withoute and what withinne This fever is ever to beginne, For where he cometh he can nought ende, Til deth of him hath made an ende. For though so be, that he ne here Ne se ne wite in no manere But all honoure and womanhede, Therof the jelous taketh none hede, But as a man to love unkinde He cast his stafe and as the blinde And fint defaulte where is none, As who fo dremeth on a stone How he is laid and groneth ofte, Whan he lieth on his pilwes fofte, So is there nought but strife and chest, Whan love shulde make his fest. It is great thing if he her kiffe. Thus hath she lost the nightes blisse, For at fuch time he gruccheth ever And bereth on honde, there is a lever, And that she wolde another were In stede of him abedde there. And with the wordes and with mo Of jelousy he torneth fro And lith upon his other fide, And the with that draweth her afide And there she wepeth all the night. Ha, to what peine she is dight

That in her youth hath so beset The bond, which may nought ben unknet. I wot the time is ofte curfed, That ever was the gold unpurfed, The which was laid upon the boke, Whan that all other she forsoke For love of him, but all to late She pleigneth, for as than algate She mot forbere and to him bowe, Though he ne wolde it allowe, For man is lord of thilke faire, So may the woman but empeire, If she speke ought ayein his wille, And thus she bereth her peine stille. But if this fever a woman take She shall be wel more harde shake. For though she bothe se and here And finde that there is no matere. She dare but to her felve pleigne, And thus she suffreth double peine.

Confessor.

Lo thus, my fone, as I have write, Thou might of jelousie wite His fever and his condicion, Which is full of suspicion. But wherof that this fever groweth, Who so these olde bokes troweth, There may he finde how it is, For they us teche and telle this, How that this fever of jelousy Somdele it groweth of soty

Of love and fomdele of untrust. For as a fikman left his luft, And whan he may no favour gete, He hateth than his owne mete, Right fo this feverous malady, Which caused is of fantasy, Maketh the jelous in feble plite To lese of love his appetite Through feigned enformacion Of his ymaginacion. But finally to taken hede Men may wel make a liklyhede Betwene him, whiche is avarous Of golde, and him that is jelous Of love, for in o degre They stonde both, as semeth me, That one wold have his bagges still And nought departen with his will And dare nought for the theves slepe, So faine he wolde his trefor kepe, That other may nought well be glad, For he is evermore adrad Of these lovers, that gone aboute In aunter, if they put him oute. So have they bothe litel joy As wel of love as of money.

Now hast thou, sone, of my teching Of jelousy a knowleching, That thou might understonde this, Fro whenne he cometh and what he is,

And eke to whom that he is like. Beware forthy thou be nought fike Of thilke fever, as I have spoke, For it woll in him felf be wroke. For love hateth no thing more, As men may finde by the lore Of hem, that whilom were wife, How that they speke in many wise.

Amans.

My fader, foth is that ye fain, But for to loke there ayein Before this time how it is falle, Wherof there might ensample falle To fuche men as ben jelous In what maner it is grevous, Right fain I wolde ensample here.

Confessor.

My gode fone, at thy praiere Of fuche ensamples as I finde, So as they comen now to minde Upon this point of time gone, I thenke for to tellen one.

Ovide wrote of many thinges, Among the whiche in his writinges He told a tale in poefy, Which toucheth unto jeloufy Martem concipiens Upon a certain cas of love. cius explorabat, unde Among the goddes al above It felle at thilke time thus. The god of fire, which Vulcanus Is hote and hath a craft forth with tum deorum et dea- Affigned for to be the smith

Hic ponit exemplum contra istos maritos, quos jelousia maculavit, et narrat, qualiter Vulcanus, cuius uxor Venus extitit, suspicionem inter ipsam et eorum gestus diligencontigit, quod cum ipse quadam vice ambos inter se pariter amplexantes in lecto nudos invenit, ex-clamans omnem ce-

Of Jupiter, and his figure Both of visage and of stature Is lothly and malgracious. But yet he hath within his hous As for the liking of his life The faire Venus to his wife. But Mars, which of batailles is The god, an eye had unto this, As he which was chivalerous. It felle him to ben amorous. And thought it was a great pite To fe fo lufty one as she Be coupled with fo lourd a wight, So that his peine day and night He did, if he her winne might. And she, that had a good insight Toward fo noble a knightly lord, In love fel of his accord. There lacketh nought but time and place, That he nis fiker of her grace. But whan two hertes fallen in one, So wife a wait was never none. That at fometime they ne mete. And thus this faire lufty swete With Mars hath ofte compaigny. But thilke unkinde jeloufy, Which evermore the herte opposeth, Maketh Vulcanus, that he supposeth, That it is nought well overall, And to him felf he faid, he shall rum ad tantum spectaculum convocavit, super quo tamen derisum pocius quam remedium a tota cohorte consecutus est.

Aspie better, if that he may. And so it felle upon a day, That he this thing so slightly ledde, He founde hem bothe two abedde, All warme, echone with other naked. And he with crafte all redy maked Of stronge cheines hath hem bounde, As he to-gider hem had founde, And lefte hem both ligge fo And gan to clepe and crie tho Unto the goddes all aboute. And they affembled in a route Come all at ones for to fe, But none amendes hadde he. But was rebuked here and there Of hem, that loves frendes were, And faiden that he was to blame, For if there felle him any shame It was through his mifgovernaunce, And thus he loste contenaunce This god and let his cause falle. And they to scorne him laughen alle And losen Mars out of his bondes. Wherof these erthely husbondes For ever might ensample take, If fuche a chaunce hem overtake. For Vulcanus his wife bewraide. The blame upon him felf he laide, Wherof his shame was the more, Whiche oughte for to ben a lore.

For every man, that liveth here, To reulen him in this matere, Though fuch an happe of love afterte, Yet shuld he nought apoint his herte With jeloufy of that is wrought, But feigne, as though he wist it nought. For if he let it over passe, The sclaunder shall be wel the lasse. And he the more in ese stonde. For this thou might well understonde, That where a man shall nedes lese. The lefte harme is for to chefe. But jelousy of his untrist Maketh that ful many an harme arist, Which elles shulde nought arise. And if a man him wolde avise Of that befelle to Vulcanus, Him ought of reson thenke thus, That fith a god was therof shamed, Wel shuld an erthely man be blamed To take upon him fuche a vice.

Forthy my sone, in thine office Beware, that thou be nought jelous, Whiche ofte time hath shent the hous.

My fader, this ensample is hard, How such thing to the hevenward Among the goddes mighte falle. For there is but o god of alle, Which is the lord of heven and helle. But if it like you to telle Confessor.

Amans.

How fuche goddes come aplace, Ye mighten mochel thank purchace, For I shall be wel taught withall.

Confessor.

My fone, it is thus overall
With hem, that stonden misbeleved,
That suche goddes ben beleved
In sondry place, sondry wise
Amonges hem, which be unwise,
There is betaken of credence,
Wherof that I the difference
In the maner as it is write
Shall do the pleinly for to wite.

Gentibus illusis signantur templa deorum,
Unde deos cecos nacio ceca colit.
Nulla creatori racio facit esse creatum
Equiparans, quoad huc jura pagana sovent.

Quia secundum poetarum fabulas in huiusmodi libelli locis quampluribus nomina et gestus deorum falsorum intitulantur, quorum infidelitas ut Cristianis clarius innotescat, intendit de ipforum origine secundum varias paganorum fectas fcribere, consequenter et primo defecta Caldeorum tractare proponit.

Er Crist was bore among us here
Of the beleves, that tho were,
In four formes thus it was.
They of Caldee, as in this cas,
Had a beleve by hem selve,
Which stood upon the signes twelve,
Forth eke with the planetes seven,
Whiche as they sighen upon the heven
Of sondry constellacion
In her ymaginacion
With sondry kerse and portreture
They made of goddes the sigure.
In thelementes and eke also
They hadden a beleve tho.

And all was that unresonable, For thelementes ben fervicable And ofte of accidence, To man. As men may fe thexperience, They ben corrupt by fondry way, So may no mannes reson say, That they ben god in any wife. And eke if men hem wel avise, The fonne and mone eclipsen both, That be hem lef or be hem loth They fuffre, and what thing is paffible To ben a god is inpossible. These elements ben creatures, So ben these hevenly figures, Wherof may wel be justified, That they may nought ben deified. And who that taketh away thonour, Which due is to the creatour, And yiveth it to the creature,. He doth to great a forfeiture. But of Caldee netheles Upon this feith though it be leffe They holde affermed the creaunce, So that of helle the penaunce As folk, which stant out of beleve, They shall receive, as we beleve.

Of the Caldeus so in this wise Stant the beleve out of assis. But in Egipte worst of alle The seith is sals, how so it salle, Et nota, quod Nembroth quartus a Noe ignem tamquam deum in Caldea primus adorari decrevit,

De fecta Egipcio-

For they diverse bestes there Honour, as though they goddes were. And nethelesse yet forth withall Thre goddes most in speciall They have forth with a goddesse, In whome is all her fikernesse. Tho goddes be yet cleped thus Orus, Tiphon and Ifirus. They were brethren alle thre And the goddesse in her degre Her fuster was and Ysis hight, Whom Isirus forlay by night And helde her after as his wife. So it befell, that upon strife Tiphon hath Isre his brother slain, Which had a child to fone Orain, And he his faders deth to herte So toke, that it may nought afterte, That he Tiphon after ne flough, Whan he was ripe of age inough. But yet thegipciens trowe For all this errour, which they knowe, That these brethern ben of might To fette and kepe Egipt upright And overthrowe, if that hem like. But Ysis, as saith the cronique, Fro Grece into Egipte cam And she than upon honde nam To teche hem for to fowe and ere, Which no man knew to-fore there.

And whanne thegipciens figh
The feldes full afore her eye,
And that the lond began to greine,
Which whilom hadde be bareine,
For therthe bare after the kinde
His due charge, this I finde,
That she of berthe the goddesse
Is cleped, so that in distresse
The women therupon childing
To her clepe and her offring
They beren, whan that they ben light.
Lo, howe Egipt all out of sight
Fro reson stant in misbeleve
For lacke of lore as I beleve.

Among the Grekes out of the wey As they that reson put awey There was, as the cronique saith, Of misbeleve an other seith, That they her goddes and goddesses As who saith token all to gesses Of suche as weren sull of vice, To whom they made sacrifice.

The highe god, so as they saide,
To whom they moste worship laide,
Saturnus hight and king of Crete
He hadde be. But of his sete
He was put down as he, which stood
In frenesy and was so wode,
That fro his wife, which Rea hight,
His owne children he to plight

De secta Grecorum,

Nota, qualiter Saturnus deorum fummus appellatur.

And ete hem of his comune wone. But Jupiter, which was his fone And of full age, his fader bonde And kut of with his owne honde His genitals, whiche also faste Into the depe see he caste, Wherof the Grekes afferme and fay Thus, whan they were cast awey, Came Venus forth by wey of kinde. And of Saturne also I finde. Howe afterwarde into an ile This Jupiter him didde exile, Where that he stood in great mischese. Lo, what a god they maden chefe. And fithen that fuche one was he, Which stood most high in his degre Among the goddes, thou might know These other, that ben more low. Ben litel worth, as it is founde.

Jupiter deus deliciarum.

For Jupiter was the secounde,
Whiche Juno had unto his wife.
And yet a lechour all his life
He was and in avouterie
He wrought many a trecherie.
And for he was so full of vices,
They cleped him god of delices,
Of whom if thou wolt more wite
Ovide the poete hath write.
But yet her sterres bothe two Saturne and Jupiter also

They have, although they ben to blame, Attitled to her owne name.

Mars was an other in that lawe,

The which in Dace was forth drawe,

Of whom the clerk Vegecius Wrote in his boke and tolde thus,

Howe he into Itaile came

And fuch fortune there he nam,

That he a maiden hath oppressed, Whiche in her ordre was professed

As she, which was the prioresse

In Vestes temple the goddesse,

So was she well the more to blame.

Dame Ylia this lady name

Men clepe, and eke she was also

The kinges doughter, that was tho,

Which Minitor by name hight.

So that ayein the lawes right

Mars thilke time upon her that

Remus and Romulus begat,

Whiche after, whan they come in age,

Of knighthode and of vaffellage

Itaile al hole they overcome

And foundeden the grete Rome.

In armes and of fuche emprise

They weren, that in thilke wife

Her fader Mars for the merveile

The god is cleped of bataile.

They were his children bothe two,

Through hem he toke his name so,

Mars deus belli.

There was none other cause why. And yet a sterre upon the sky He hath unto his name applied, In which that he is signified.

Apollo deus sapiens.

An other god they hadden eke, To whom for counfeil they befeke, The which was brother to Venus, Apollo men him clepe thus. He was an hunt upon the hilles, There was with him no vertue elles, Wherof that any bokes carpe, But only that he couthe harpe, Which whan he walked over londe Full ofte time he toke on honde To get him with his fustenaunce For lack of other purveaunce. And otherwhile of his falshede He feigneth him to conne arede Of thing, which afterward shuld falle, Wherof among his sleightes alle He hath the leude folk deceived. So that the better he was received. Lo now, through what creacion-He hath deificacion And cleped is the god of wit, To fuche as be the fooles yet.

Mercurius deus mercatorum et furtorum. An other god, to whom they fought, Mercurie hight, and him ne rought What thing he stale, ne whom he slough. Of forcery he couthe inough, That whan he wold him felf transforme, Full ofte time he toke the forme Of woman and his owne lefte. So did he well the more thefte. A great speker in alle thinges He was also and of lesinges An autor, that men wiste none An other suche as he was one. And yet they maden of this these A god, which was unto hem lese, And cleped him in tho beleves The god of marchants and of theves. But yet a sterre upon the heven He hath of the planetes seven.

But Vulcanus, of whom I spake, He had a courbe upon the back, And therto he was hippe-halt, Of whom thou understonde shalt, He was a shrewe in al his youth And he none other vertue couth Of craft to helpe him selve with But only that he was a smith With Jupiter, whiche in his sorge Diverse thinges made him sorge, So wote I nought for what desire They clepen him the god of sire.

King of Cicile Ypolitus
A fone he had, and Eolus
He hight, and of his faders graunt
He held by way of covenaunt

Eolus deus ventorum. The governaunce of every ile,
Which was longend unto Cicile
Of hem that fro the lond forein
Lay ope the winde alle pleine.
And fro thilke iles into the londe
Full ofte cam the wind to honde,
After the name of him forthy
The windes cleped Eoly
They were, and he the god of winde.
Lo now, how this beleve is blinde.

Neptunus maris.

The king of Crete Jupiter, deus The same, whiche I spake of er, Unto his brother, which Neptune Was hote, it lift him to comune Parte of his good, so that by ship He made him stronge of the lordship Of all the see in the parties, Where that he wrought his tirannies, And the straunge iles aboute He wan, that every man hath doubte Upon his marche for to faile. For he anone hem wolde affaile And robbe what thing that they ladden, His fauf conduit but if they hadden. Wherof the comun vois aros In every lond, that fuche a los He caught, all nere it worth a stre. That he was cleped of the fee The god by name, and yet he is With hem, that so beleve amis.

This Neptune eke was thilke also, Which was the firste founder tho Of noble Troy, and he forthy Was well the more lette by.

Was well the more lette by.

The loresman of the shepherdes
And eke of hem, that ben netherdes,

Was of Archade and highte Pan, Of whom hath spoke many a man. For in the wode of Nonartigne

Enclosed with the trees of pigne And on the mount of Parasie He had of bestes the bailie.

And eke beneth in the valey, Where thilke river, as men may say,

Which Ladon highte, made his cours, He was the chefe of governours

Of hem, that kepten tame bestes, Wherof they maken yet the festes

In the citee of Stimfalides.

And forth withall yet netheles He taughte men the forth drawing Of bestaile and eke the making

Of oxen and of hors the same, How men hem shulde ride and tame,

Of foules eke, so as we finde,

Full many a fubtil craft of kinde He found, which no man knew to-fore.

Men did him worship eke therfore, That he the first in thilke londe

Was, which the melodie fonde

Pan deus nature.

Of reedes, whan they weren ripe, With double pipes for to pipe. Therof he vaf the firste lore, Till afterward men couthe more, To every crafte of mannes helpe He had a redy wit to helpe Through natural experience. And thus the nice reverence Of fooles, whan that he was dede. The foot was torned to the hede And clepen him god of nature, For so they maden his figure.

Bachus deus vini.

An other god, so as they fele, Whiche Jupiter upon Semele Begat in his avouterie, Whom for to hide his lecherie That none therof shall take kepe In a mountaigne for to kepe, Which Dion hight and was in Ynde, He fend, in bokes as I finde. And he by name Bachus hight, Which afterward, whan that he might, A wastor was and all his rent In wine and bordel he despent. But yet all were he wonder bad, Among the Grekes a name he had, They cleped him the god of wine, And thus a gloton was divine.

deus Esculapius medicine.

There was yet Esculapius A god in thilke time as thus. His craft stood upon surgerie, But for the luste of lecherie. That he to Daires doughter drough, It fell, that Jupiter him flough. And yet they made him nought forthy A god and wift no cause why. In Rome he was long time fo A god among the Romains tho, For as he faide of his presence There was destruied a pestilence, Whan they to thile of Delphos went. And that Apollo with him fent This Esculapius his sone Among the Romains for to wone, And there he dwelte for a while, Till afterwarde into that ile. Fro when he cam, ayeine he torneth, Where all his life that he fojorneth Among the Grekes, till that he deiede. And they upon him thanne leide His name and god of medicine He hatte after that ilke line.

An other god of Hercules
They made, which was netheles
A man, but that he was fo stronge
In al this world that brode and longe
So mighty was no man as he.
Merveiles twelve in his degre,
As it was couth in fondry londes,
He dide with his owne hondes

Hercules deus fortitudinis.

Ayein geaunts and monstres both,
The whiche horrible were and loth.
But he with strength hem overcam,
Wherof so great a price he nam,
That they him clepe amonges alle
The god of strengthe and to him calle.
And yet there is no reson inne,
For he a man was full of sinne,
Which proved was upon his ende,
For in a rage him self he brende.
And suche a cruell mannes dede
Accordeth nothing with godhede.

Pluto deus inferni.

They had of goddes yet an other, Which Pluto hight, and was the brother Of Jupiter, and he fro youth With every word, which cam to mouth, Of any thing, whan he was wroth, He wolde fwere his comun othe By Lethen and by Flegeton, By Cochitum and Acheron, The whiche after the bokes telle Ben the chefe floodes of the helle, By Segne and Stige he fwore also, That ben the depe pittes two Of helle, the most principall. Pluto these othes over all Swore of his comun custumaunce, Till it befelle upon a chaunce, That he for Jupiters fake Unto the goddes let do make

A facrifice, and for that dede
One of the pittes for his mede
In hell, of whiche I spake of er,
Was graunted him, and thus he there
Upon the fortune of this thinge
The name toke of helle kinge.

Lo, these goddes and well mo Among the Grekes they had tho, And of goddesses many one, Whose names thou shalt here anone, And in what wise they deceiven The sooles, whiche her seith receiven.

So as Saturne is foveraine Of false goddes, as they faine, So is Sibeles of goddesses The moder, whom withoute geffes The folke prein honour and serve As they, the whiche her lawe observe. But for to knowen upon this, Fro when she cam and what she is, Bethincia the contre hight, Where she cam first to mannes fight. And after was Saturnes wife, By whom thre children in her life She bare, and they were cleped tho Juno, Neptunus and Pluto, The which of nice fantafy The people wolde deify. And for her children weren fo Sibeles thanne was also Nota, qualiter Sibeles dearum mater et origo nuncupatur.

Made a goddesse, and they her calle The moder of the goddes alle. So was that name bore forth, And yet the cause is litel worth.

Juno dea regnorum et diviciarum.

A vois unto Saturne tolde, How that his owne fone him sholde Out of his regne put away, And he because of thilke wey, That him was shape suche a fate, Sibele his wife began to hate And eke her progenie bothe. And thus while that they were wrothe By Philerem upon a day In his avouterie he lay, On whom he Jupiter begat. And thilke child was after that, Which wrought al that was prophecied, As it to-fore is specified. So whan that Jupiter of Crete Was king, a wife unto him mete The doughter of Sibele he toke, And that was Juno, faith the boke Of his deification After the fals opinion, That have I tolde, so as they mene. And for this Juno was the quene Of Jupiter and fuster eke. The fooles unto her seke And fain, that she is the goddesse Of regnes bothe and of richesse,

And eke she, as they understonde,
The water nimphes hath in honde
To leden at her owne heste.
And whan her list the sky tempeste,
The reinbowe is her messagere.
Lo, which a misbeleve is here,
That she goddesse is of the sky,
I wot none other cause why.

An other goddesse is Minerve, To whom the Grekes obey and ferve. And she was nigh the greate lay Of Triton founde, where she lay A child for-cast, but what she was There knew no man the fothe cas. But in Aufrique she was laide In the maner as I have faide And caried fro that ilke place Into an ile fer in Trace, The which Pallene thanne hight, Where a norice hir kepte and dight. And after for the was fo wife, That the found first in her avise The cloth making of woll and line, Men faiden, that she was divine, And the goddesse of sapience They clepen her in that credence.

Of the goddesse, which Pallas Is cleped, sondry speche was. One saith her fader was Pallaunt, Whiche in his time was a geaunt, Minerva dea fapienciarum.

Pallas dea bellorum. A cruell man, a batailous.
An other faith, how in his hous
She was the cause, why he deiede.
And of this Pallas some eke saide
That she was Martes wise, and so
Among the men that weren tho
Of misbeleve in the riot
The goddesse of batailes hote
She was, and yet she bereth the name.
Now loke, how they be for to blame.

Ceres dea frugum.

Saturnus after his exile Fro Crete cam in great perile Into the londes of Itaile And there he dide great merveile, Wherof his name dwelleth yit. For he founde of his owne wit The firste crafte of plough tilling, Of ering and of corn fowing, And how men shulden sette vines And of the grapes make wines. All this he taught. And it fell fo His wife, the which cam with him tho, Was cleped Cereres by name, And for she taught also the same And was his wife that ilke throwe, As it was to the people knowe, They made of Ceres a goddesse, In whom her tilthe yet they bleffe And fain that Tricolonius Her fone goth amonges us

And maketh the corn good chepe or dere, Right as her lift from yere to yere, So that this wife because of this Goddesse of cornes cleped is.

King Jupiter, which his liking Whilom fulfilled in alle thing, So priveliche about he ladde His luft, that he his wille hadde Of Latona and on her that Diane his doughter he begat Unknowen of his wife Juno. But afterward she knewe it so, That Latona for drede fled Into an ile, where she hid Her wombe, which of childe aros. Thilke ile cleped was Delos, In which Diana was forth brought And kept so, that her lacketh nought. And after whan she was of age, She toke none hede of mariage, But out of mannes compaigny She toke her all to venery In forest and in wildernesse, For there was all her befineffe By day and eke by nightes tide With arwes brode under the fide And bow in honde, of which she slough And toke all that her list inough Of bestes, which ben chaceable, Wherof the cronique of this fable

Diana dea moncium et silvarum.

Saith that the gentils most of alle Worshippen her, and to her calle And the goddesse of high hilles, Of grene trees, of fresshe welles They clepen her in that beleve, Which that no reson may acheve.

Proserpina dea infernorum.

Proserpina, which doughter was Of Cereres, befell this cas, While she was dwelling in Cicile, Her moder in that ilke while Upon her bleffing and her hest Bad, that she shulde ben honest And lerne for to weve and spinne And dwelle at home and kepe her inne. But she cast all that lore awey, And as she went her out to pley To gader floures in a pleine, And that was under the mountaigne Of Ethna, fell the same tide That Pluto cam that waie ride. And fodeinly, er she was ware, He toke her up into his chare, And as they riden in the felde, Her grete beaute he behelde, Which was so plesaunt in his eye, That for to holde in compaignie He wedded her and helde her so To ben his wife for evermo. And as thou hast to-fore herd telle, How he was cleped god of helle,

So is she cleped the goddesse Because of him ne more ne lesse.

Lo thus, my fone, as I the tolde The Grekes whilom by daies olde Her goddes had in fondry wife, And through the lore of her apprise The Romains helden eke the same And in worshippe of her name To every god in speciall They made a temple forth withall And eche of hem his yeres day Attitled hadde. And of array The temples weren than ordeigned And eke the people was constreigned To come and done her facrifice. The prestes eke in her office Solempne maden thilke festes. And thus the Grekes lich to bestes The men in stede of god honour, Which mighten nought hem felf foccour, While that they were alive here. And over this as thou shalt here

The Grekes fulfilled of fantafy Sain eke, that of the hilles high The goddes ben in speciall, But of her name in generall They hoten alle Satiry.

There ben of nimphes proprely In the beleve of hem also, Oreades they saiden tho Confessor.

Nota, quod dii moncium Satiri vocantur.

Oreades nimphe

Driades filvarum.
Naiades foncium.
Nereides marium.

Attitled ben to the montaignes. And for the wodes in demeines To kepe the ben Driades, Of fresshe welles Naiades. And of the nimphes of the fee I finde a tale in proprete, How Dorus whilom king of Grece, Whiche had of infortune a piece, His wife forth with his doughter alle So as the happes shulden falle With many a gentilwoman there Dreint in the falte fee they were, Wherof the Grekes that time faiden And fuch a name upon hem laiden, Nereides that they ben hote, The nimphes whiche that they note To regne upon the stremes salte. Lo now, if this beleve halte. But of the nimphes as they telle, In every place where they dwelle They ben all redy obeifaunt As damiselles attendaunt To the goddesses, whose servise They mote obey in alle wife, Wherof the Grekes to hem beseke With tho, that ben goddesses eke, And have in hem a great credence. And yet without experience Saufe onely of illusion, Which was to hem dampnacion.

For men also that were dede
They hadden goddes as I rede,
And tho by name Manes highten,
To whom ful great honour they dighten,
So as the Grekes lawe saith,
Which was ayein the righte feith.

Thus have I tolde a great partie,
But all the hole progenie
Of goddes in that ilke time
To longe it were for to rime.
But yet of that, which thou hast herde,
Of misbeleve, howe it hath ferde,
There is a great diversite.

My fader, right so thenketh me. But yet o thinge I you beseche, Which stant in alle mennes speche, The god and the goddesse of love, Of whom ye nothing here above Have told ne spoken of her fare, That ye me wolde now declare, How they first come to that name.

My fone, I have it left for shame, Because I am her owne prest. But for they stonde nigh thy brest Upon the shrifte of thy matere, Thou shalt of hem the sothe here And understond now well the cas. Venus Saturnes doughter was, Which alle daunger put awey Of love and found to lust a wey,

Manes dii mortuo-

Amans.

Qualiter Cupido et Venus deus et dea amoris nuncupantur.

So that of her in fondry place Diverse men fell into grace, And fuch a lufty life she ladde, That she diverse children hadde, Now one by this, now one by that. Of her it was that Mars begat A child, which cleped was Armene, Of her cam also Andragene, To whom Mercurie father was. Anchises begat Eneas Of her also, and Ericon Biten begatte, and therupon Whan that she figh ther was none other By Jupiter her owne brother She lay, and he begat Cupide. And thilke fone upon a tide, Whan he was come unto his age, He had a wonder fair visage And founde his mother amorous. And he was also lecherous. So whan they weren bothe alone, As he whiche eyen hadde none To fe reson, his mother kist, And she also that nothing wist But that, whiche unto his lust belongeth, To bene her love him underfongeth. Thus was he blinde, and she unwis. But netheles this cause it is. Which Cupide is the god of love, For he his mother derste love.

And she, which thought her lustes fonde, Diverse loves toke on honde Wel mo than I the telle here. And for she wolde her selve skere, She made comun that disporte And fet a lawe of fuch a porte, That every woman mighte take What man her lift and nought forfake To ben as comun as she wolde. She was the first also, which tolde, That women shulde her body selle. Semiramis fo as men telle Of Venus kepte thilke apprise. And fo did in the fame wife Of Rome faire Neabolie, Which lift her body to Regolie. She was to every man felawe And held the lust of thilke lawe. Which Venus of her felf beganne, Wherof that she the name wanne, Why men her clepen the goddesse Of love and eke of gentilesse, Of worldes lust and of plesaunce. Se now the foule miscreaunce

Se now the foule miscreaunce Of Grekes in thilke time tho, Whan Venus toke her name so. There was no cause under the mone Of which they hadden tho to done, Of wel or wo where so it was, That they ne token in that cas

A god to helpe or a goddesse, Wherof to take my witnesse,

Nota de epistola Dindimi regis Bragmannorum Alexandro magno directa, ubi dicit, quod Greci tunc ad corporis conservacionem pro singulis membris singulos deos specialiter appropriari credunt.

The king of Bragman Dindimus
Wrote unto Alisaundre thus
In blaminge of the Grekes feith
And of the misbeleve he saith,
How they for every membre hadden
A sondry god, to whom they spradden
Her armes and of help besoughten.

Minerve for the hede they foughten, For she was wise, and of a man The wit and reson which he can Is in the celles of the brain, Wherof they made her soverain.

Mercurie, which was in his dawes A great speker of false lawes, On him the keping of the tunge They laiden, whan they speke or sunge.

For Bachus was a gloton eke Him for the throte they befeke, That he it wolde was shen ofte With suote drinkes and with softe.

The god of shulders and of armes Was Hercules, for he in armes The mightiest was to sight, To him tho limmes they behight. The god whom that they clepen Mart The brest to kepe hath for his part, For with the herte in his ymage That he addresse to his corage.

And of the galle the goddesse, For she was ful of hastinesse, Of wrath and light to greve also, They made and said, it was Juno.

Cupide, which the brond of fire Bare in his hond, he was the fire Of the stomack, which boileth ever, Wherof the lustes ben the lever.

To the goddesse Cereres, Whiche of the corn yas her encres, Upon the seith that the was take The wombes cure was betake.

And Venus through the lechery, For whiche they her deify, She kepte all down the remenaunt To thilke office appertenaunt.

Thus was dispers in sondry wise
The misbeleve as I devise
With many an ymage of entaile,
Of suche as might hem nought availe,
Forthy withoute lives chere
Unmighty ben to se or here
Or speke or do or elles sele,
And yet the sooles to hem knele,
Whiche is her owne handes werke.
Ha lord, how this beleve is derke
And fer fro resonable wit,
And netheles they don it yit.
That was o day a ragged tre
To morwe upon his mageste

Nota de prima ydolorum cultura, que ex tribus precipue statuis exorta est, quarum prima fuit illa, quam in filii sui memoriam
quidam princeps
nomine Cirophanes a sculptore
Prometheo fabricari constituit.

Stant in the temple wel besein, How might a mannes reson sain, That fuch a flock may helpe or greve? But they, that ben of fuch beleve And unto fuche goddes calle, It shall to hem right so befalle And failen ate moste nede. But if the lift to taken hede And of the first ymage wite, Petronius therof hath write And eke Nigargorus also, And they afferme and write fo, That Prometheus was to-fore And founde the first craft therfore. And Cirophanes, as they telle, Through counfeil, which was take in helle, In remembraunce of his lignage Let setten up the first ymage. Of Cirophanes faith the boke, That he for forwe, which he toke, Of that he figh his fone dede, Of comfort knew none other rede But let do make in remembraunce A faire ymage of his femblaunce And fet it in the market place, Which openly to-fore his face Stood every day to done him ese. And they that thanne wolde plese The fader, shulden it obey, Whan that they comen thilke wey.

And of Ninus king of Affire I rede, how that in his empire He was next after the fecound Of hem, that first ymages found. For he right in femblable cas Of Belus, which his fader was Fro Nembroth in the righte line, Let make of gold and stones fine A precious ymage riche After his fader evenliche, And therupon a law he fette, That every man of pure dette With facrifice and with truage Honoure shulde thilk ymage, So that withinne time it felle Of Belus cam the name of Belle, Of Bel cam Belzebub and for The misbeleve wente tho.

The thrid ymage next to this
Was, whan the king of Grece Apis
Was dede, they maden a figure
In refemblaunce of his stature.
Of this king Apis saith the boke,
That Serapis his name toke,
In whom through long continuaunce
Of misbeleve a great creaunce
They hadden and the reverence
Of sacrifice and of encence
To him they made. And as they telle
Among the wonders that befelle,

Secunda statua fuit illa, quam ad sui patris Beli culturam rex Ninus sieri et adorari decrevit, et sic de nomine Beli postea Bel et Belzebub ydolum accrevit.

Tercia statua suit illa, que ad honorem Apis regis Grecorum sculpta suit, cui postea nomen Serapis imponentes ipsum quasi deum pagani coluerunt.

Whan Alifaundre fro Candace Cam ridend in a wilde place Under an hille a cave he fond, And Candalus, whiche in that lond Was bore and was Candaces fone, Him told, how that of comun wone The goddes were in thilke cave. And he that wolde affay and have A knoulechinge, if it be foth, Light of his hors and in he goth And fond therinne that he fought. For through the fendes fleight him thought Amonges other goddes mo, That Serapis spake to him tho, Whom he figh there in great array. And thus the fend fro day to day The worship of ydolatrie Drough forth upon the fantafy Of hem, that weren thanne blinde And couthen nought the trouthe finde. Thus hast thou herd in what degre Of Grece, Egipte and Caldee The mifbeleves whilom flood, And how fo that they be nought good Ne trewe, yet they sprongen oute, Wherof the wide worlde aboute His parte of misbeleve toke. Til so befelle, as faith the boke, That god a people for him felve Hath chose of the lignages twelve, Wherof the fothe redely, As it is write in Genefy, I thenke telle in fuche a wife, That it shall be to thin apprise.

After the flood, fro which Noe Was fauf, the worlde in his degre Was made as who faith new ayein Of flour, of fruit, of gras, of grein, Of beeft, of brid and of mankinde, Whiche ever hath be to god unkinde. For nought withstonding all the fare Of that this world was made fo bare. And afterward it was restored, Among the men was nothing mored Towardes god of good living, But all was torned to liking After the flessh, so that foryete Was he, which vaf hem life and mete, Of heven and erthe creatour. And thus cam forth the great errour, That they the highe god ne knewe, But maden other goddes newe, As thou hast herd me said to-fore. There was no man that time bore. That he ne had after his chois A god, to whom he yaf his vois, Wherof the misbeleve cam Into the time of Abraham. But he found out the righte wey, Howe only men shuld obey

De Hebreorum seu Judeorum secta, quorum sinagoga, ecclesia Christi superveniente, desecit.

The highe god, which weldeth all And ever hath done and ever shall In heven, in erth and eke in helle. There is no tunge his might may telle. This patriarch to his lignage Forbad, that they to none ymage Encline sholden in no wife, But her offrende and facrifife With all the hole hertes love Unto the mighty god above They shulde yive and to no mo. And thus in thilke time tho Began that fect upon this erthe, Whiche of beleves was the ferthe, Of rightwisnesse it was conceived, So must it nedes be received Of him, that alle right is inne, The highe god, which wolde winne A people unto his owne feith. On Abraham the ground he laith And made him for to multiply Into fo great a progeny, That they Egipte all over spradde. But Pharao with wrong hem ladde In fervitude agein the pees, Til god let fende Moifes To make the deliveraunce. And for his people great vengeaunce He toke, which is to here a wonder. The king was flain, the lond put under,

God bad the redde fee devide, Which stood upright on every side And yaf unto his people a wey, That they on foot it passed drey And gone fo forth into defert, Where for to kepe hem in covert The daies whan the fonne brent A large cloude hem over went, And for to wiffen hem by night A firy piller hem alight. And whan that they for hunger pleigne, The mighty god began to reine Manna fro heven down to grounde, Wherof that eche of hem hath founde His food, fuch right as him lift. And for they shuld upon him trist Right as who fet a tonne abroche, He percede the harde roche And fpronge out water all at wille, That man and beste hath dronk his fille. And afterward he yaf the lawe To Moifes, that hem withdrawe They shulde nought fro that he bad. And in this wife they be lad, Til they toke in possession The londes of promission, Where that Caleph and Josue The marches upon fuch degre Departen after the lignage, That eche of hem as heritage

His purparty hath underfonge.
And thus stood this beleve longe,
Whiche of prophetes was governed.
And they had eke the people lerned
Of great honour, that shuld hem falle,
But ate moste nede of alle
They faileden, whan Crist was bore.
But how that they her feith have lore,
It nedeth nought to tellen all,
The matere is so generall.

Whan Lucifer was best in heven And ought most have stonde in even, Towardes god he toke debate, And for that he was obstinate And wolde nought to trouth encline He fel for ever into ruine.

And Adam eke in paradis,
Whan he stood most in all his pris
After the state of innocence,
Ayein the god brake his defence
And fell out of his place awey.
And right by such a maner wey
The Jewes in her beste plite,
Whan that they sholden most parsite
Have stonde upon the prophecy,
Tho fellen they to most foly
And him, which was fro heven come
And of a maid his sless hath nome
And was among hem bore and fed,
As men that wolden nought be sped

Of goddes fone with o vois They heng and flough upon the crois, Wherof the parfite of her lawe Fro thenne forth hem was withdrawe, So that they stonde of no merit, But in a truage as folk fubgit Withoute proprete of place They liven oute of goddes grace, Dispers in alle londes oute. And thus the feith is come aboute, That whilome in the Jewes stood, Whiche is nought parfitliche good. To fpeke as it is now befalle There is a feith aboven alle, In which the trouthe is comprehended, Wherof that we ben all amended.

The high almighty mageste
Of rightwisnesse and of pite
The sinne, which that Adam wrought,
Whan he sigh time agein he bought
And send his sone fro the heven
To sette mannes soule in even,
Which thanne was so sore fall
Upon the point which was befall,
That he ne might him self arise.

Gregoire faith in his apprife:
It helpeth nought a man be bore,
If goddes fone were unbore,
For thanne through the firste sinne,
Which Adam whilom brought us inne,

De fide Christiana, in qua persecte legis complementum, summi misterii sacramentum nostreque salvacionis sundamentum infallibiliter consister creditur.

Gregorius. O neceffarium Ade peccatum. O felix culpa, que talem ac tantum meruit habere redemptorem.

There shulden alle men be lost, But Crift restoreth thilke lost And bought it with his flesshe and blood. And if we thenken, how it stood Of thilke raunson, which he paid, As faint Gregoire it wrote and faid, All was behovely to the man. For that, wherof his wo began, Was after cause of all his welth, Whan he, which is the welle of helth, The highe creatour of life Upon the nede of fuch a strife So wolde he for his creature Take on him felf the forfeiture And fuffre for the mannes fake. Thus may no reson wel forsake, That ilke finne original Ne was the cause in speciall Of mannes worship ate last, Which shall withouten ende last. For by that cause the godhede Affembled was to the manhede In the virgine, where he nome Our flesshe and verray man become Of bodely fraternite, Wherof the man in his degre Stant more worth, as I have told, Than he stood erst by many fold, Through baptisme of the newe lawe, Of which Crift lord is and felawe.

And thus the highe goddes might, Which was in the virgine alight, The mannes foule has reconciled, Which hadde longe ben exiled. So stant the feith upon beleve, Withoute which may non acheve. But this beleve is fo certain To bigge mannes foule ayein, So full of grace and of vertu, That what man clepeth to Jesu In clene life forth with good dede, He may nought faile of heven mede, Which taken hath the righte feith. For elles, as the gospel faith, Salvacion there may be none. And for to preche therupon Crist bad to his apostles alle, The whos power as now is falle On us, that ben of holy chirche, If we the gode dedes werche, For feith only fufficeth nought, But if good dede also be wrought.

Now were it good, that thou forthy, Which through baptisme proprely Art unto Cristes feith professed, Beware that thou be nought oppressed With anticristes lollardie. For as the Jewes prophecie Was set of god for avauntage, Right so this newe tapinage

Jacobus. Fides fine operibus mortua est. Confessor.

Of lollardie goth aboute To fette Cristes feith in doubte. The faints, that weren us to-fore, By whom the feith was first up bore, That holy chirche stood releved, That oughten better be beleved Than these, whiche that men knowe Nought holy, though they feigne and blowe Her lollardy in mennes ere. But if thou wolt live out of fere, Such newe lore I rede escheue And hold forth right the wey and fue, As thin auncestres did er this. So shalt thou nought beleve amis. Incipit Jesus facere Crist wroughte first and after taught So that the dede his word araught, He yaf ensample in his persone, And we tho wordes have alone Like to the tree with leves grene, Upon the which no fruit is sene.

Nota, quod cum Anthenor palladium Troie a templo Minerve abstulit, Thoas ibidem fummus facerdos auro corruptus oculos avertit et sic malum quasi non vipermifit.

The prest Thoas, which of Minerve The temple hadde for to ferve And the palladion of Troy Kept under keie, for monaie Of Anthenor, whiche he hath nome, dens scienter sieri Hath suffred Anthenor to come And the palladion to stele, Wherof the worship and the wele Of the Troians was overthrowe. But Thoas ate same throwe,

Whan Anthenor this jeuele toke, Winkende cast awey his loke For a deceipte and for a while, As he that shuld him self beguile, He hid his eyen fro the fight And wende wel, that he fo might Excuse his false conscience. I wot nought if thilke evidence Now at this time in her estates Excuse mighte the prelates, Knowend how that the feith discreseth And alle moral vertu ceseth, Wherof that they the keies bere. But yet hem liketh nought to stere Her gostlich eye for to se The worlde in his advertite. They wol no laboure undertake To kepe that hem is betake. Crift deide him felf for the feith, But now our ferful prelate faith: The life is fwete, and that he kepeth So that the feith unholpe slepeth, And they unto her ese entenden And in her lust her life despenden, And every man doth what him lift. Thus stant this world fulfilled of mist, That no man feeth the righte wey. The wardes of the chirche key Through mishandlinge ben miswreint, The worldes wawe hath welnigh dreint

The ship, which Peter hath to stere, The forme is kept, but the matere Transformed is in other wife. But if they weren gostly wise And that the prelats weren good, As they by olde daies stood, It were thanne litel nede Among the men to taken hede Of that they heren pseudo telle, Which now is come for to dwelle To fowe cockel with the corn. So that the tilthe is nigh forlorn, Which Crift sew first his owne hond. Now stant the cockel in the lond, Where stood whilom the gode greine, For the prelats now, as men fain, Forflouthen that they sholden tille. And that I trowe be the skille. Whan there is lacke in hem above, The people is straunged to the love Of trouth in cause of ignoraunce. For where there is no purveaunce Of light, men erren in the derke. But if the prelats wolden werke Upon the feith, which they us teche, Men sholden nought her waie seche Withoute light as now is used, Men se the charge all day refused, Whiche holy chirche hath undertake. But who that wolde ensample take,

And therupon gat none encres. But at his time netheles, What other man his thank deferve, The world fo lufty is to ferve, That we with him ben all accorded. And that is wist and well recorded Through out this erthe in alle londes, Let knightes winne with her hondes, For oure tunge shall be still And stande upon the flesshes will, It were a travail for to preche The feith of Crist, as for to teche The folke painim, it woll nought be. But every prelate holde his see With alle fuch as he may gete Of lufty drinke and lufty mete, Wherof the body fat and full Is unto gostly labour dull And flough to handle thilke plough. But elles we ben fwifte inough Toward the worldes avarice. And that is as a facrifice, Which after that thapostle saith Is openly agein the feith Unto the ydols yove and graunted, But netheles as it is now haunted And vertue chaunged into vice, So that largesse is avarice, In whose chapitre now we trete. So far, that ever while I live I shall the better hede yive Unto my self by many wey. But over this now wolde I prey To wite, what the braunches are Of avarice, and how they fare Als well in love as otherwise.

My fone, and I the shall devise In suche a maner as they stonde, So that thou shalt hem understonde.

Agros jungit agris cupidus domibusque domosque Possideat totam sic quasi solus humum. Solus et innumeros mulierum spirat amores, Ut sacra millenis sit sibi culta Venus.

Dame avarice is nought foleine, Which is of gold the capiteine. But of her courte in fondry wife After the scole of her apprise She hath of fervaunts many one, Wherof that covetife is one, Which goth the large worlde about To feche thavauntages out, Where that he may the profit winne To avarice and bringeth it inne. That one halt and that other draweth, There is no day which hem bedaweth No more the sonne than the mone, Whan there is any thing to done, And namely with covetife, For he stant out of all assise

Of resonable mannes fare, Where he purposeth him to fare Upon his lucre and his beyete. The smalle path, the large strete, The furlonge and the longe mile, All is but one for thilke while. And for that he is fuch one holde, Dame avarice him hath witholde, As he which is the principall Outward, for he is over all A purveiour and an efpy. For right as of an hungry py The storve bestes ben awaited, Right so is covetise affaited To loke where he may purchace, For by his will he wolde embrace All that this wide world beclippeth. But ever he fomwhat overhippeth, That he ne may nought all fulfille The lustes of his gredy wille. But where it falleth in a londe, That covetife in mighty honde Is fet, it is full hard to fede. For than he taketh none other hede, But that he may purchace and gete, His conscience hath all foryete And nought what thing it may amounte, That he shall afterwarde accompte. But as the luce in his degre Of tho, that lasse ben than he,

The fisshes gredily devoureth,
So that no water hem soccoureth,
Right so no lawe may rescowe
Fro him, that woll no right allowe.
For where that such one is of might,
His will shall stonde in stede of right.
Thus be the men destruied full ofte,
Till that the grete god alofte
Ayein so great a covetise
Redresse it in his owne wise.
And in ensample of all tho
I finde a tale write so,
The which for it is good to lere
Herasterward thou shalt it here.

Whan Rome stood in noble plite, Virgile, which was tho parfite, A mirrour made of his clergie And fette it in the townes eye Of marbre on a piller without, That they by thritty mile about By day and eke also by night In that mirrour beholde might Her ennemies, if any were, With all her ordenaunce there, Which they agein the citee cast. So that while thilke mirrour last, Ther was no lond, which might acheve With werre Rome for to greve, Wherof was great envie tho. And fell that ilke time fo.

Hic ponit exemplum contra magnates cupidos et narrat de Crasso Romanorum imperatore, qui turrim, in qua speculum Virgilii Rome fixum extiterat, dolosa circumventus cupiditate evertit, unde non solum sui ipsius perdicionem, sed tocius civitatis intollerabile dampnum contingere causavit.

That Rome hadde werres stronge Ayein Cartage, and stoden longe The two citees upon debate. Cartage figh the strong estate Of Rome in thilke mirrour stonde And thought all prively to fonde To overthrowe it by fome wile. And Hanibal was thilke while The prince and leader of Cartage, Which hadde fet all his corage Upon knighthode in such a wise, That he by worthy and by wife And by none other was counseiled, Wherof the world is yet merveiled Of the maistries that he wrought Upon the marches, which he fought. And fell in thilke time also, The kinge of Puile, which was tho, Thought ayein Rome to rebelle, And thus was take the quarelle, How to destruie the mirrour. Of Rome tho was emperour Craffus, which was fo covetous, That he was ever defirous Of gold to gete the pilage, Wherof that Puile and eke Cartage With philosophres wife and great Beginne of this matere to treat. And ate last in this degre There weren philosophres thre

To do this thing whiche undertoke, And therupon they with hem toke A great trefure of gold in cofres To Rome, and thus these philosophres To-gider in compaignie went, But no man wiste what they ment. Whan they to Rome come were, So prively they dwelte there, As they that thoughten to deceive. Was none, that might of hem perceive, Till they in fondry stedes have Her gold under the erth begrave In two trefors that to beholde They sholden seme as they were olde. And fo forth than upon a day All openly in good array To themperour they hem present And tolden, it was her entent To dwellen under his fervise. And he hem axeth in what wife. And they him told in such a plite, That eche of hem had a spirite, The which flepend anight appereth And hem by fondry dremes lereth After the world that hath betid, Under the grounde if ought be hid Of olde trefor at any throwe, They shall it in her swevenes knowe. And upon this condition They fain, what gold under the town

Of Rome is hid, they woll it finde, There shulde nought be left behinde, Be so that he the halve dele Hem graunt and he affenteth wele. And thus cam fleighte for to dwelle With covetife as I the telle. This emperour bad redely, That they be logged faste by, Where he his owne body lay. And whan it was at morwe day, That one of hem faith, that he mette, Where he a gold hord shulde fette, Wherof this emperour was glad. And therupon anone he bad His minours for to go and mine, And he him felf of that covine Goth forth withall and at his honde The trefor redy there he fonde, Where as they faid it shulde be. And who was thanne glad but he?

Upon that other day fecounde They have an other gold hord founde, Which the feconde maister toke Upon his fweven and undertoke. And thus the foth experience To themperour yaf fuch credence, That all his trust and all his feith So fikerliche on hem he laith. Of that he found him so releved. That they ben parfitly beleved,

As though they were goddes thre. Now herken the subtilite The thridde maister shulde mete. Whiche as they faiden was unmete Above hem all, and couthe most, And he withoute noise or bost All privelich, so as he wolde, Upon the morwe his fwevenes tolde To themperour right in his ere And faid him, that he wiste where A trefor was fo plenteous Of golde and eke fo precious Of jeuelles and of rich stones, That unto all his hors at ones It were a charge suffisaunt. This lord upon this covenaunt Was glad and axeth where it was. The maister said, under the glas, He tolde him eke as for the mine He wolde ordeigne fuch engine, That they the werk shulde undersette With timber, and withoute lette Men may the trefor faufly delve, So that the mirrour by him felve Without empeirement shal stonde. All this the maister upon honde Hath undertake in alle wey. This lord, whiche had his wit awey And was with covetise blent, Anone therto yaf his affent.

And thus they mine forth withall, The timber fet up over all, Wherof the piller stood upright, Till it befell upon a night These clerkes, whan they were ware, How that the timber only bare The piller, where the mirrour stood, Her sleighte no man understood, They go by night unto the mine With pitch, with fulphre and rofine, And whan the citee was aslepe, A wilde fire into the depe They cast among the timber werke And so forth while the night was derke Desguised in a pouer array They passeden the towne er day. And whan they come upon an hille, They fighen how the mirrour felle, Wherof they made joy inough, And eche of hem with other lough And faiden: Lo, what covetife May do with hem that be nought wife? And that was proved afterwarde, For every lond to Rome warde, Whiche hadde be fubgit to-fore, Whan this mirrour was fo forlore And they the wonder herde fay, Anone begunne disobey With werres upon every fide. And thus hath Rome lost his pride

And was defouled over all.
For this I finde of Hanibal,
That he of Romains in a day,
Whan he hem found out of array,
So great a multitude flough,
That of gold ringes, which he drough
Of gentil hondes, that ben dede,
Busshelles fulle thre, I rede,
He filled and made a brigge also,
That he might over Tiber go
Upon the corps that dede were
Of the Romains, whiche he flough there.

But now to speke of the juise, The which after the covetife Was take upon this emperour, For he destruied the mirrour, It is a wonder for to here The Romains maden a chaiere And fet her emperour therinne And faiden, for he wolde winne Of gold the superfluite, Of golde he shulde such plente Receive, till he saide ho. And with gold, which they hadde tho Boilende hot within a panne, Into his mouth they poure thanne. And thus the thurst of gold was queint With gold, whiche hadde ben atteint.

Wherof, my fone, thou might here, Whan covetife hath lost the stere Of resonable governaunce, There falleth ofte great grevaunce. For there may be no worse thing Than covetife about a king, If it in his persone be, It doth the more advertite. And if it in his counseil stonde, It bringeth all day mischese to honde Of comun harme, and if it growe Within his court, it woll be knowe, For thanne shall the king be piled. The man, whiche hath his londe tilled, Awaiteth nought more redely The hervest, than they gredily Ne maken thanne warde and wacche, Where they the profit mighten cacche. And yet full oft it falleth fo, As men may fene among hem tho, That he, which most coveiteth fast, Hath leest avauntage ate last. For whan fortune is there ayein, Though he coveite, it is in veine, The happes ben nought alle liche, One is made pouer, an other riche, The court to some it doth profite, And some ben ever in o plite. And yet they both aliche fore Coveite, but fortune is more Unto that o part favourable, And though it be nought resonable,

This thing a man may sene al day, Wherof that I the telle may After ensample in remembraunce, How every man may take his chaunce Or of richesse or of pouerte, How so it stonde of the deserte. Here is nought every thing acquit, For oft a man may fe this yit, That who best doth, lest thank shal have, It helpeth nought the world to crave, Whiche out of reule and of mesure Hath ever stonde in aventure Als well in court, as elles where, And how in olde daies there It stood so as the thinges felle, I thenke a tale for to telle.

In a cronique this I rede
About a kinge, as must nede,
There was of knightes and squiers
Great route and eke of officers.
Some of long time him hadden served
And thoughten, that they have deserved
Avauncement and gone withoute,
And some also ben of the route,
That comen but a while agone,
And they avaunced were anone.
These olde men upon this thing,
So as they durst ayein the king
Among hem self compleignen ofte.
But there is nothing said so softe,

Hic ponit exemplum contra illos, qui in domibus regum fervientes pro co, quod ipfi fecundum eorum cupiditatem promoti non exiftunt, de regio fervicio quamvis in eorum defectu indiferete murmurant.

That it ne cometh out at last. The king it wist anone als fast As he, which was of high prudence. He shope therfore an evidence Of hem that pleignen in that cas, To knowe in whose default it was. And all within his owne entent. That no man wiste what it ment Anone he let two cofres make Of one semblaunce and of o make So lich, that no life thilke throwe That one may fro that other knowe. They were into his chambre brought, But no man wot why they be wrought. And netheles the king hath bede, That they be set in prive stede, As he that was of wisdom sligh. Whan he therto his time figh All privelich, that none it wist, His owne hondes that o kift Of fine golde and of fine perrie, The which out of his tresorie Was take, anone he filde full, That other cofre of strawe and mull With stones meind he filde also. Thus be they fulle bothe two. So that erliche upon a day He bad withinne where he lay, There shulde be to-fore his bedde A borde up set and faire spredde.

And than he let the cofres fet
Upon the borde and did hem fet.
He knew the names well of tho,
The whiche ayein him grucche fo
Both of his chambre and of his halle,
Anone and fende for hem alle
And faide to hem in this wife:

There shall no man his hap despise, I wot well ye have longe ferved, And god wot what ye have deserved. But if it is along on me Of that ye unavaunced be Or elles it belonge on you, The fothe shall be proved now To stoppe with your evil worde. Lo here two cofres on the borde, Chefe whiche you lift of bothe two And witeth well, that one of tho Is with trefor fo full begon, That if ye happe therupon, Ye shal be riche men for ever. Now chefe and take whiche you is lever. But be well ware, er that ye take, For of that one I undertake, There is no maner good therinne, Wherof ye mighten profit winne. Now goth to-gider of one affent And taketh your advisement, For but I you this day avaunce, It stant upon your owne chaunce.

All only in default of grace So shall be shewed in this place Upon you alle well and fine, That no defaulte shall be mine.

They knelen all and with one vois
The king they thonken of this chois.
And after that they up arife
And gon afide and hem avife
And ate laste they accorde,
Wherof her tale to recorde
To what issue they be falle
A knight shall speke for hem alle.
He kneleth down unto the king
And saith, that they upon this thing
Or for to winne or for to lese
Ben all avised for to chese.

Tho toke this knight a yerd on hond And goth there as the cofres stond And with thassent of everychone He laith his yerde upon one And saith the king, how thilke same They chese in reguerdon by name And preith him, that they might it have. The king, which wold his honour save, Whan he hath herd the comun vois, Hath graunted hem her owne chois And toke hem therupon the key. But for he wolde it were say What good they have, as they suppose, He bad anone the cofre unclose,

Which was fulfilled with straw and stones, Thus be they served all at ones.
This king than in the same stede
Anone that other cofre undede,
Where as they sighen great richesse
Wel more than they couthen gesse.
Lo, saith the king, now may ye se,
That there is no defaulte in me,
Forthy my self I woll acquit
And bereth ye your owne wit
Of that fortune hath you resused.
Thus was this wise king excused,
And they leste of her evil speche
And mercy of her king beseche.

Somdele to this matere like I finde a tale, how Frederike, Of Rome that time emperour, Herde, as he went, a great clamour Of two beggers upon the way, That one of hem began to fay: Ha lord, wel may the man be riche, Whom that a king lift for to riche. That other faid no thinge so: But he is riche and wel bego, To whom that god wol fende wele. And thus they maden wordes fele, Wherof this lord hath hede nome And did hem bothe for to come To the paleis, where he shall ete, And bad ordeigne for her mete

Nota hic de diviciarum accidencia, ubi narrat, qualiter Fre-dericus Romanorum imperator duos pauperes audivit litigantes, quorum unus dixit: bene potest ditari, quem rex vult ditare. Et alius dixit: quem deus vult ditare dives erit, que res cum ad experimentum postea probata fuisset, ille qui deum invocabat pastellum auro plenum fortitus est, alius vero caponis pastellum sorte preelegit.

Two pastees which he let do make, A capon in that one was bake, And in that other for to winne Of floreins all that may withinne He let do put a great richesse, And even aliche as man may gesse Outward they were bothe two. This begger was commaunded tho, He that which held him to the king, That he first chese upon this thing. He figh hem, but he felt hem nought, So that upon his owne thought He chese the capon and forsoke That other, which his felaw toke. But whan he wist, how that it ferde, He said aloud, that men it herde: Now have I certainly conceived, That he may lightly be deceived, That trifteth unto mannes helpe. But wel is him, that god wol helpe, For he stant on the fiker side, Whiche elles shulde go beside. I se my felaw wel recouer, And I mot dwelle still pouer. Thus spake the begger his entent, And pouer he cam, and pouer he went, Of that he hath richesse sought, His infortune it wolde nought. So may it shewe in fondry wife Betwene fortune and covetife

The chaunce is cast upon a dee, But yet full oft a man may see Inough of suche netheles, Which ever put hem self in pres To get hem good, and yet they saile.

And for to speke of this entaile Touchend of love in thy matere, My gode fone, as thou might here, That right as it with tho men stood Of infortune of worldes good, As thou hast herd me tell above. Right fo full ofte it stant by love, Though thou coveite it evermore, Thou shalt nought have o dele the more, But only that, which the is shape, The remenaunt is but a jape. And netheles inough of tho There ben, that now coveiten fo, That where as they a woman se, Ye ten or twelve though there be, The love is now fo unavifed, That where the beaute stant affised. The mannes herte anone is there And rouneth tales in her ere And faith, how that he loveth streite. And thus he fet him to coveite. An hundred though he figh a day, So wolde he more than he may. So for the grete covetife Of foty and of fool emprise

In eche of hem he fint fomwhat, That pleseth him, or this or that. Some one, for she is white of skinne, Some one, for the is noble of kinne, Some one, for she hath a rody cheke, Some one, for that she semeth meke, Some one, for she hath eyen grey, Some one, for she can laugh and pley, Some one, for she is longe and small, Some one, for she is lite and tall, Some one, for she is pale and bleche, Some one, for she is softe of speche, Some one, for that she is camused, Some one, for she hath nought ben used, Some one, for she can daunce and sing, So that some thing of his liking He fint, and though no more he fele, But that she hath a litel hele, It is inough, that he therfore Her love, and thus an hundred fcore. While they be new, he wolde he had, Whom he forfaketh, she shall be bad. Cecus non judicat The blinde man no colour demeth, But all is one right as him femeth, So hath his lust no jugement, Whom covetise of love blent.

If that it mighte so befall.

Him thenketh, that to his covetife, How all the world ne may fuffife, For by his will he wolde have all,

So is he comun as the strete, I sette nought of his beyete. My sone, hast thou such covetise?

Nay fader, fuch love I despise,
And while I live shal don ever,
For in good feith yet had I lever
Than to coveite in suche a wey
To ben for ever till I deie
As pouer as Job and loveles
Out taken one, for haveles
His thonkes is no man alive,
For that a man shulde all unthrive,
There ought no wise man coveite,

The lawe was nought fet so streite. Forthy my self with all to save Suche one there is I wolde have And none of all this other mo.

My fone, of that thou woldest so,
I am nought wroth, but over this
I woll the tellen, howe it is.
For there be men, which other wise
Right only for the covetise
Of that they seen a woman riche,
There wol they all her love affiche.
Nought for the beaute of her sace
Ne yet for vertu ne for grace,
Which she hath elles right inough,
But for the parke and for the plough
And other thing, which therto longeth,
For in none other wise hem longeth

Confessio amantis.

Min holy fader, nay iwis, Condicion such have I none. For truly fader, I love one So well, with all min hertes thought, That certes though she hadde nought And were as pouer as Medea, Which was exiled for Creufa, I wolde her nought the lasse love, Ne though she were at her above, As was the riche quene Candace, Which to deferve love and grace To Alifaundre, that was king, Yaf many a worthy riche thing, Or elles as Pantafilee. Which was the quene of Feminee And great richesse with her nam, Whan she for love of Hector cam To Troy, in rescousse of the town, I am of fuch condicion, That though my lady of her felve Were also riche, as suche twelve, I couthe nought, though it were fo, No better love her, than I do.

For I love in so pleine a wife, That for to speke of covetise As for pouerte or for richesse, My love is nouther more ne lesse. For in good feith I trowe this, So covetous no man there is. For why and he my lady figh, That he through loking of his eye Ne shuld have such a stroke withinne. That for no gold he mighte winne He shulde nought her love afterte, But if he lefte there his herte Be so it were such a man. That couthe skille of a woman. For there ben men fo rude fome, Whan they among the women come, They gon under protection, That love and his affection Ne shal nought take hem by the sleve, For they ben out of that beleve, Hem lusteth of no lady chere, But ever thenken there and here, Where that her golde is in the cofre And wol none other love profer. But who fo wot what love amounteth And by reson truliche accompteth, Than may he knowe and taken hede, That all the lust of womanhede, Which may ben in a ladies face, My lady hath and eke of grace,

If men shuld yiven her apprise, They may wel fay, how she is wife And fober and fimple of countenaunce And all that to good governaunce Belongeth of a worthy wight She hath pleinly. For thilke night That she was bore as for the nones Nature fet in her at ones Beaute with bounte so besein, That I may well afferme and fain, I figh yet never creature Of comly hede and of feture In any kinges region Be liche her in comparison. And therto, as I have you tolde, Yet hath she more a thousand folde Of bounte, and shortly to telle She is pure hede and welle And mirrour and ensample of good, Who so her vertues understood Me thenketh it ought inough suffise Withouten other covetife To love suche one and to serve. Which with her chere can deferve To be beloved better iwis. Than she par cas that richest is And hath of golde a million. Suche hath be min opinion And ever shall. But netheles I fay she is nought haveles,

That she nis riche and well at ese And hath inough, wherwith to plese Of worldes good, whom that her list. But o thing wold I wel ye wist, That never for no worldes good Min hert unto ward her stood, But only right for pure love, That wot the highe god above. Now fader, what say ye therto?

My fone, I fay it is wel do. For take of this right good beleve, What man that wol him felf releve To love, in any other wife He shall wel finde his covetise, Shall fore greve him ate laste, For fuch a love may nought laste. But now men sain in oure daies, Men maken but a few assaies. But if the cause be richesse Forthy the love is well the leffe. And who that wold ensamples telle By olde daies as they felle, Than might a man wel understonde Such love may nought longe stonde. Now herken, sone, and thou shalt here A great ensample of this matere.

To trete upon the cas of love, So as we tolden here above, I finde write a wonder thing. Of Puile whilom was a king, Confessor.

Hic ponit exemplum contra istos, qui non propter amorem sed propter divicias sponfalia sumunt. Et narrat de quodam regis Apulie sensscalo, qui non folum propter pecuniam uxorem duxit, sed eciam pecunie commercio uxorem sibi desponsatam vendidit. A man of high complexion And yong, but his affection After the nature of his age Was yet not falle in his corage The lust of women for to knowe. So it betid upon a throwe, This lord fell into great sikenesse. Phisique hath done the befinesse Of fondry cures many one To make him hole and therupon A worthy maister, which there was, Yaf him counfeil upon this cas, That if he wolde have parfite hele, He shulde with a woman dele, A fresshe, a yonge, a lusty wight To don him compaigny a night. For than he faid him redely, That he shal be al hole therby, And other wife he knew no cure. The king, which stood in aventure Of life and deth for medicine, Affented was and of covine His steward, whom he trusteth well, He toke and told him every dele, How that this maister hadde said. And therupon he hath him praid And charged upon his legeaunce, That he do make purveaunce Of fuch one as be covenable For his plefaunce and delitable

And badde him, how that ever it stood, That he shall spare for no good, For his will is right well to pay. The steward said, he wolde assay.

But now here after thou shalt wite, As I finde in the bokes write. What covetife in love doth. This steward, for to telle foth, Amonges all the men alive A lusty lady hath to wive, Which netheles for gold he toke And nought for love, as faith the boke. A riche marchaunt of the londe Her fader was, and he her fonde So worthely and fuch richesse Of worldes good and fuch largesse With her he yaf in mariage, That only for thilke avauntage Of good the steward hath her take For lucre and nought for loves fake. And that was afterward wel fene. Nowe herken, what it wolde mene. This steward in his owne hert Sigh, that his lord may nought aftert His maladie, but he have A lusty woman him to save, And though he wolde yive inough Of his trefor, wherof he drough Great covetise into his minde And fet his honour fer behinde.

Thus he, whom gold hath oversette, Was trapped in his owne nette. The gold hath made his wittes lame, So that fechend his owne shame He rouneth in the kinges ere And faid him, that he wiste where A gentil and a lufty one Tho was, and thider wold he gone, But he mote yive yeftes great, For but it be through great beyete Of gold, he said, he shuld nought spede. The king him bad upon the nede, That take an hundred pound he sholde And yive it, where that he wolde, Be fo it were in worthy place. And thus to stonde in loves grace This king his gold hath abandoned. And whan this tale was full rouned, The steward toke the gold and went Within his herte and many a went Of covetife than he caste. Wherof a purpos ate laste Ayein love and ayein his right He toke and faide, how thilke night His wife shall ligge by the king. And goth thenkend upon this thing Toward his inn till he cam home Into the chambre and than he nome His wife and tolde her al the cas. And she, which red for shame was,

With bothe her hondes hath him praid Knelend and in this wife faid, That she to reson and to skill In what thing that he bidde will Is redy for to done his hefte, But this thing that were nought honeste, That he for gold her shulde selle. And he tho with his wordes felle Forth with his gastly countenaunce Saith, that she shall done obeisaunce And folwe his wille in every place. And thus through strength of his manace Her innocence is overladde. Wherof the was fo fore adradde. That she his will mot nede obey. And therupon was shape a wey, That he his owne wife by night Hath out of alle mennes fight So prively that none it wist Brought to the king, which as him lift May do with her what he wolde. For whan the was there as the sholde With him abedde under the cloth, The steward toke his leve and goth Into the chambre faste by. But how he flept that wot nought I, For he figh cause of jelousy.

But he, which hath the compaigny Of fuch a lufty one as she, Him thoughte that of his degre

There was no man so wel at ese. She doth all that she may to plese, So that his hert all hole she had And thus this kinge his joie lad, Till it was nigh upon the day The steward thanne where she lay Cam to the bed and in this wife Hath bidde she shulde arise. The king faith: Nay, she shall nought go. The steward said ayein: Nought so, For she mot gone er it be knowe, And fo I fwore at thilke throwe, Whan I her fette to you here. The king his tale wol nought here And faith, how that he hath her bought, Forthy she shall departe nought, Till he the brighte day beholde. And caught her in her armes folde, As he which lifte for to pley And bad his steward gone awey. And fo he did ayein his will, And thus his wife abedde still Lay with the king the longe night, Till that it was high fonne light. But who she was he knew nothing. Tho cam the steward to the king And praid him that withoute shame In faving of her gode name He mighte leaden home ayeine This lady, and hath told him pleine,

How that it was his owne wife. The king his ere unto this strife Hath leid, and whan that he it herde, Well nigh out of his wit he ferde And faid: Ha, caitif most of alle. Where was it ever er this befalle, That any cokard in this wife Betoke his wife for covetife. Thou hast bothe her and me beguiled And eke thin own estate reviled, Wherof that buxom unto the Here after shall she never be. For this avow to god I make After this day, if I the take, Thou shalt be honged and to-drawe. Now loke anone thou be withdrawe, So that I fe the never more. This steward thanne drad him fore With all the haste that he may And fled awey the fame day And was exiled out of lond.

Lo, there a nice husbond,
Which thus hath loste his wife for ever.
But netheles she hadde a lever,
The king her weddeth and honoureth,
Wherof her name she soccoureth,
Which erst was lost through covetise
Of him, that lad her other wise
And hath him self also forlore.

My fone, be thou ware therfore,

Confessor.

Where thou shalt love in any place, That thou no covetife embrace, The which is nought of loves kinde. But for all that a man may finde Now in this time of thilke rage Full great disese in mariage, Whan venim medleth with the fucre And mariage is made for lucre Or for the lust or for the hele, What man that shall with other dele, He may nought faile to repent.

My fader, fuch is min entent. But netheles good is to have, For good may ofte time fave The love, which shulde elles spille. But god, which wot min hertes wille, I dar wel take to witnesse. Yet was I never for richesse Beset with mariage none, For all min herte is upon one So frely, that in the persone Stant all my worldes joy alone. I axe nouther park ne plough, If I her hadde, it were inough, Her love shulde me suffise Withouten other covetise. Lo now, my fader, as of this Touchend of me right as it is My shrifte I am beknowe plein, And if ye wol ought elles sain

Of covetise if there be more In love, agropeth out the sore.

Fallere cum nequeat, propria vir fraude subornat Testes, sitque eis vera retorta sides. Sicut agros cupidus dum querit amans mulieres, Vult testes falsos falsus habere suos. Non sine vindicta perjurus abibit in eis, Visu qui cordis intima cuncta videt. Fallere perjuro non est laudanda puellam Gloria, sed false condicionis opus.

My fone, thou shalt understonde, How covetife hath yet on honde In special two counseilors, That ben also his procurors. The first of hem is fals witnesse, Which ever is redy to witnesse What thing his maister woll him hote. Perjurie is the fecond hote, Which spareth nought to swere an othe, Though it be fals and god be wrothe, That one shall fals witnesse bere, That other shall the thing forswere, Whan he is charged on the boke. So what with hepe, and what with croke They make her maister ofte winne And woll nought knowe, what is finne For covetife, and thus men fain, They maken many a fals bargein. There may no trewe quarel arise In thilke queste of thilke affise, Where as they two the people enforme. For they kepe ever o maner forme,

Hic tractat super illis avaricie speciebus, que falsum testimonium et perjurium nuncupantur, quorum fraudulenta circumvencio tam in cupiditatis quam in amoris causa sui desiderii propositum quam sepe fallaciter attingit.

That upon golde her conscience They founde and take her evidence. And thus with fals witnesse and othes They winne hem mete, drink and clothes. Right fo there be, who that hem knewe, Of these lovers ful many untrewe. Now may a woman finde inow, That eche of hem, whan he shall wowe, Anone he woll his hand down lain Upon a boke and fwere and fain, That he woll feith and trouthe bere. And thus he profreth him to fwere To serven ever till he deie, And all is verray trechery. For whan the foth him felven trieth. The more he fwereth, the more he lieth. Whan he his feith maketh allthermest, Than may a woman trust him lest, For till he may his will acheve, He is no lenger for to leve. Thus is the trouth of love exiled, And many a good woman beguiled.

Confessor.

And eke to speke of fals witnesse There be now many such I gesse, That lich unto the provisours They make her prive procurors To tell how there is such a man, Which is worthy to love and can All that a good man shulde conne, So that with lesing is begonne

The cause, in which they woll procede. And also siker as the crede
They make of that they knowen sals,
And thus sull oft about the hals
Love is of salse men embraced.
But love, which is so purchaced,
Cometh afterward to litel prise.
Forthy, my sone, if thou be wise,
Now thou hast herd this evidence,
Thou might thin owne conscience
Oppose, if thou hast be such one.

A mans.

Nay god wot, fader, I am none Ne never was, for as men faith, Whan that a man shall make his feith, His hert and tunge must accorde. For if so be that they discorde, Than is he fals and elles nought, And I dare fay, as of my thought In love it is nought discordable Unto my word, but accordable. And in this wife, fader, I May right well fwere and faufly, That I my lady love well, For that accordeth every dele, It nedeth nought to my foth fawe, That I witnesse shulde drawe Into this day, for ever yit Ne might it finke into my wit, That I my counfeil shulde say To any wight or me bewrey

To fechen helpe in fuch manere, But onely for my lady dere. And though a thousand men it wiste, That I her love, and than hem lifte With me to fwere and to witnesse, Yet were that no fals witnesse. For I dare unto this trouth dwelle, I love her more, than I can telle. Thus am I, fader, gilteles, As ye have herde, and netheles In your dome I put it all.

Confessor.

My fone, wite in speciall It shall nought comunliche faile, All though it for a time availe, That fals witnesse his cause spede Upon the point of his falshede, It shall well afterward be kid. Wherof fo as it is betid Enfample of fuch thinges blinde In a cronique write I finde.

The goddesse of the see Thetis, She had a fone, and his name is Achilles, whom to kepe and warde, While he was yonge, and into warde She thought him faufly to betake afferens esse puellam As she, which dradde for his sake inter regis Lichome-Of that was faid of prophecie, That he at Troie sholde deie. Whan that the citee was belein. Forthy fo as the bokes fain,

Hic ponit exemplum de illis, qui falsum testificantes, amoris innocenciam circumveniunt, et narrat, qualiter Thetis Achillem filium suum adulescentem muliebri vestitum apparatu dis filias ad educandum produxit, et sic Achilles decepto rege filie sue Deidamie socia et cubicularia effectus super ipsam

She cast her wit in sondry wise, How she him mighte so desguise, That no man shuld his body knowe. And so befell that ilke throwe, While that she thought upon this dede, There was a king, which Lichomede Was hote, and he was well begone With faire doughters many one And dwelte fer out in an ile. Now shalt thou here a wonder wile. This quene, which the mother was Of Achilles, upon this cas Her fone, as he a maiden were, Let clothen in the same gere, Which longeth unto womanhede. And he was yonge and toke none hede, But fuffreth all that she him dede. Wherof she hath her women bede And chargeth by her othes alle, How so it afterward befalle, That they discover nought this thing, But feigne and make a knouleching Upon the counfeil, which was nome, In every place where they come To telle and to witnesse this, Howe he her ladies doughter is. And right in fuch a maner wife She bad they shuld her don servise, So that Achilles underfongeth As to a yong lady belongeth

Pirrum genuit, qui postea mire probitatis miliciam assecutus mortem patris sui apud Trojam in Polixenem tirannice vindicavit.

Honour, fervice and reverence. For Thetis with great diligence Him hath fo taught and fo affaited, That how fo that he were awaited With fobre and goodly contenaunce He shuld his womanhede avaunce. That none the fothe knowe might, But that in every mannes fight He shulde seme a pure maide. And in fuch wife, as she him faid, Achilles, which that ilke while Was yonge, upon him felfe to fmile Began, whan he was so besein. And thus after the bokes fain With frette of perle upon his hede All fresshe betwene the white and red As he, which tho was tender of age, Stood the colour in his visage, That for to loke upon his cheke And feen his childly maner eke He was a woman to beholde. And than his moder to him tolde, That she him hadde so begone By cause that she thoughte gone To Lichomede at thilke tide. Where that she said, he shulde abide Amonge his doughters for to dwelle. Achilles herd his moder telle And wifte nought the cause why. And netheles full buxomly

He was redy to that she bad, Wherof his moder was right glad. To Lichomede and forth they went, And whan the king knewe her entent And figh this yonge doughter there, And that it came unto his ere Of such record, of such witnesse, He hadde right a great gladnesse Of that he bothe figh and herde As he, that wot nought how it ferde Upon the counseil of the nede. But for all that king Lichomede Hath toward him his doughter take And for Thetis his moder fake, He put her into compaigny To dwelle with Deidamy, His owne doughter the eldest, The fairest and the comliest Of al his doughters, which he had. Lo, thus Thetis the cause lad And lefte there Achilles feigned, As he, which hath him felf restreigned In all that ever he may and can Out of the maner of a man And toke his womanisshe chere, Wherof unto his bedfere Deidamy he hath by night, Where kinde will him felve right After the philosophres sain, There may no wight be there ayein.

And that was thilke time fene, The longe nightes hem betwene Nature, which may nought forbere, Hath made hem bothe for to stere, They kiffen first and overmore The highe wey of loves lore They gone, and all was done in dede, Wherof lost is the maidenhede. And that was afterward well knowe. For it befell that ilke throwe At Troie, where the fiege lay Upon the cause of Menelay And of his quene dame Heleine, The Gregois hadden mochel peine All day to fight and to affaile. But for they mighten nought availe So noble a citee for to winne A prive counfeil they beginne In fondry wife where they treat And ate last among the great They fellen unto his accorde, That Protheus of his recorde. Which was an astronomien And eke a great magicien, Shulde of his calculation Seche of constellation. How they the citee mighten gette. And he, which hadde nought foryete Of that belongeth to a clerke, His study set upon this werke,

So longe his wit about he caste, Till that he founde out at laste, But if they hadden Achilles Her werre shall ben endeles. And over that he tolde hem pleine, In what maner he was beseine And in what place he shall be founde, So that within a litel founde Ulixes forth with Diomede Upon this point to Lichomede Agamenon to-gider fente. But Ulixes, er he forth wente. Which was one of the most wife Ordeined hath in fuch a wife, That he the most riche array, Wherof a woman may be gay, With him he toke manifolde And overmore, as it is tolde, An harneis for a lufty knight, Which burned was as filver bright, Of fwerde, of plate and eke of maile, As though he shulde do bataile, He toke also with him by ship. And thus to-gider in felaship Forth gone this Diomede and he In hope till they mighten fe The place, where Achilles is. The wind stood thanne nought amis, But every topsailecole it blewe, Till Ulixes the marches knewe,

Where Lichomede his regne had.
The stiresman so well him lad,
That they ben comen sauf to londe,
Where they gone out upon the stronde
Into the burgh, where that they sounde
The king, and he which hath sacounde
Ulixes dide the message.
But the counseile of his corage,
Why that he came, he tolde nought,
But underneth he was bethought,
In what maner he might aspie
Achilles fro Deidamy
And fro these other, that there were,
Full many a lusty lady there.

They plaide hem there a day or two, And as it was fortuned fo. It fell that time in suche a wife To Bachus that a facrifice These yonge ladies shulden make. And for the straunge mennes sake, That comen fro the siege of Troy, They maden well the more joy. There was revell, there was dauncing, And every life, which couthe fing Of lufty women in the route A fressh caroll hath song aboute. But for all this yet netheles The Grekes unknowe of Achilles So weren, that in no degre They couthen wite, which was he

Ne by his vois, ne by his pas. Ulixes than upon the cas A thing of high prudence hath wrought. For thilk array, which he hath brought, To yive among the women there He let do fetten all the gere Forth with a knightes harneis eke. In all the contre for to feke Men sholden nought a fairer se. And every thing in his degre Endelong upon a bourde he laide. To Lichomede and than he preide, That every lady chefe sholde What thing of alle that she wolde And take it as by way of yift, For they hem felf it shulde shift He saide after her owne wille. Achilles thanne flood nought stille, Whan he the brighte helm behelde, The fwerd, the hauberk and the shelde, His herte fell therto anone. Of all that other wold he none, The knightes gere he underfongeth And thilke array, which that belongeth Unto the women he forfoke. And in this wife, as faith the boke, They knowen thanne whiche he was, For he goth forth the grete pas Into the chambre, where he lay, Anone and made no delay,

He armeth him in knightly wife, That better can no man devise. And as fortune shulde falle, He came so forth to-fore hem alle As he, which tho was glad inough. But Lichomede nothing lough, Whan that he figh, how that it ferde. For than he wiste well and herde, His doughter hadde be forlain. But that he was so oversein, The wonder overgoth his wit. For in cronique is write yit Thing, which shall never be foryete, How that Achilles hath begete Pirrus upon Deidamy, Wherof came out the trechery Of fals witnesse when he saide. How that Achilles was a maide. But that was nothing fene tho, For he is to the fiege go Forth with Ulixes and Diomede.

Confessor.

Lo, thus was proved in the dede
And fully spoke at thilke while,
If o woman an other beguile,
Where is there any sikernesse,
Whan Thetis which was than the goddesse
Deidamy hath so bejaped,
I not how it shall bene escaped
With the women, whose innocence
Is now all day through such credence

Deceived ofte, as it is sene
With men, that such untrouthe mene.
For they ben sligh in suche a wise,
That they by sleight and by queintise
Of sals witnesse bringen inne
That doth hem ofte for to winne,
Where they ben nought worthy therto.
Forthy, my sone, do nought so.

My fader, as of fals witnesse
The trouth and the matere expresse
Touchend of love, howe it hath ferde,
As ye have tolde, I have well herde.
But for ye saiden other wise,
How thilke vice of covetise
Hath yet perjurie of his accorde,
If that you list of some recorde
To tellen an other tale also
In loves cause of time ago,
What thing it is to be forswore,
I wolde preie you therfore,
Wherof I might ensample take.

My gode sone, and for thy sake Touchend of this I shall sulfill Thin axing at thin owne will And the matere I shall declare, How the women deceived are, Whan they so tendre hertes bere, Of that they heren men so swere. But whan it cometh unto thassay, They finde it sals another day,

Amans.

Confessor.

As Jason did unto Medee,
Which stant yet of auctorite
In token and in memoriall,
Wherof the tale in speciall
Is in the boke of Troie write,
Which I shall do the for to wite.

Hic in amoris causa ponit exemplum contra perjuros et narrat, qualiter Jason, prius-quam ad insulam Colchos pro aureo vellere ibidem conquestando transmearet, in amorem et conjugium Medee regis Othonis filie juramento firmius fe astrinxit, sed suo postea completo negocio cum ipsam secum navigio in Greciam perduxisset, ubi illa senectam patris sui Efonis in floridam juventutem mirabili sciencia reformavit, ipse Jason fidei sue ligamento aliisque beneficiis postpositis, dictam Medeam pro quadam Creusa regis Creontis filia perjurus dereliquit.

In Grece whilom was a king, Of whom the fame and knouleching Beleveth yet, and Peleus He highte, but it fell him thus, That his fortune her whele so lad, That he no childe his owne had To regnen after his decess. He had a brother netheles. Whose righte name was Eson, And he the worthy knight Jason Begat, the which in every londe All other passed of his honde In armes, so that he the best Was named and the worthiest. He foughte worship over all. Now herken, and I telle shall An adventure that he fought, Which afterward full dere he bought.

There was an ile, which Colchos Was cleped, and therof aros Great speche in every londe aboute, That such merveile was none oute In all the wide world no where, As tho was in that ile there.

There was a shepe, as it was tolde, The which his flees bare all of golde, And so the goddes had it sette, That it ne might away be fette By power of no worldes wight. And yet full many a worthy knight It had affaied, as they dorste, And ever it fell hem to the worste. But he that wolde it nought forfake, But of his knighthode undertake To do, what thing therto belongeth, This worthy Jason sore alongeth To fe the straunge regions And knowe the conditions Of other marches, where he went. And for that cause his hole entent He fette Colchos for to feche And therupon he made a speche To Peleus his eme the king. And he wel paid was of that thing And shope anone for his passage And fuch as were of his lignage With other knightes, whiche he chees, With him he toke, and Hercules, Which full was of chivalerie, With Jason went in compaignie, And that was in the month of may, Whan colde stormes were away, The wind was good, the ship was yare, They toke her leve, and forth they fare

Toward Colchos. But on the way What hem befelle is long to fay, How Lamedon the king of Troy, Which ought well have made hem joy, Whan they to rest a while him preide, Out of his lond he them congeide. And so fell the diffention, Whiche after was destruction Of that citee, as men may here. But that is nought to my matere, But thus the worthy folke Gregois Fro that king, which was nought curtois, And fro his londe with fail updrawe They went hem forth and many a fawe They made and many a great manace, Till ate last into that place, Which as they foughte, they arrive And striken fail and forth as blive They fent unto the king and tolden, Who weren there and what they wolden.

Oetes, which was thanne king,
Whan that he herde this tiding
Of Jason, which was comen there,
And of these other, what they were,
He thoughte done hem great worship.
For they anone come out of ship
And straught unto the king they wente
And by the honde Jason he hente,
And that was at the paleis gate,
So fer the king came on his gate

Toward Jason to done him chere.
And he, whom lacketh no manere,
Whan he the king figh in presence,
Yas him ayein such reverence
As to a kinges state belongeth.
And thus the king him undersongeth
And Jason in his arme he caught
And forth into the hall he straught,
And there they sit and speke of thinges.
And Jason tolde him tho tidinges,
Why he was come, and faire him preide
To haste his time, and the kinge saide:

Jason, thou art a worthy knight, But it lieth in no mannes might To done, that thou art come fore. There hath bene many a knight forlore Of that they wolden it assaie. But Jason wolde him nought esmaie And faide: Of every worldes cure Fortune flant in aventure Paraunter well, paraunter wo. But how as ever that it go, It shall be with min honde assaied. The king tho helde him nought wel paied For he the Grekes fore dredde, In aunter if Jason ne spedde, He mighte therof bere a blame, For the was all the worldes fame In Grece, as for to speke of armes. Forthy he drad him of his harmes

And gan to preche and to prey. But Jason wolde nought obey, But said, he wolde his purpos holde For ought that any man him tolde. The king whan he these wordes herde And figh how that this knight answerde, Yet for he wolde make him glad, After Medea gone he bad, Which was his doughter, and she cam And Jason, which good hede nam, Whan he her figh, ayein her goth. And she, which was him nothing loth, Welcomed him into that londe And fofte toke him by the honde And down they fetten bothe fame. She had herd spoken of his name And of his grete worthinesse, Forthy she gan her eye impresse Upon his face and his stature And thought, how never creature Was fo welfarend, as was he. And Jason right in such degre Ne mighte nought witholde his loke, But so good hede on her he toke, That him ne thought under the heven Of beaute figh he never her even With all that felle to womanhede. Thus eche of other token hede, Though there no word was of recorde. Her hertes both of one accorde

Ben fette to love, but as tho There mighten ben no wordes mo. The king made him great joy and fest, To all his men he yaf an hest, So as they wolde his thank deferve, That they shulde alle Jason serve, While that he wolde there dwelle. And thus the day, shortly to telle, With many merthes they dispent, Till night was come, and tho they went, Echone of other toke his leve, Whan they no lenger mighten leve. I not how Jason that night slepe, But well I wot, that of the shepe, For which he cam into that ile, He thoughte but a litel while, All was Medea that he thought, So that in many wife he fought His wit wakend, er it was day, Some time ye, fome time nay, Some time thus, some time so. As he was stered to and fro Of love and eke of his conquest. As he was holde of his beheft. And thus he rose up by the morwe And toke him felf feint John to borwe And faide, he wolde first beginne At love, and after for to winne The flees of gold, for which he come, And thus to him good herte he nome.

Medea right the same wise Till day cam, that she must arise, Lay and bethought her all the night, How she that noble worthy knight By any waie mighte wedde. And wel she wist, if he ne spedde Of thing, which he had undertake, She might her felf no purpose take. For if he deiede of his bataile, She muste than algate faile To geten him, whan he were dede. Thus she began to sette rede And torne about her wittes all To loke how that it mighte fall, That she with him had a leiser To speke and telle of her desir. And so it fell the same day That Jason with that swete may To-gider fet and hadden space To fpeke, and he befought her grace. And she his tale goodly herde And afterward the him answerde And faide: Jason, as thou wilt Thou might be fauf, thou might be spilt, For wite well, that never man, But if he couthe that I can, Ne mighte that fortune acheve, For which thou comest. But as I leve, If thou wolt holde covenaunt To love of all the remenaunt,

I shall thy life and honour save,
That thou the flees of gold shalt have.
He said: Al at your owne wille,
Madame, I shall truly fulfille
Your heste, while my life may last.
Thus longe he praid and ate last
She graunteth and behight him this,
That whan night cometh and it time is,
She wolde him sende certainly
Such one, that shulde him prively
Alone into her chambre bringe.
He thonketh her of that tidinge,
For of that grace is him begonne,
Him thenketh al other thinges wonne.

The day made ende and lost his fight And comen was the derke night, The whiche all the daies eye blent.

Jason toke leve and forth he went,
And whan he cam out of the prees,
He toke to counseil Hercules
And tolde him, how it was betid,
And praide it shulde well ben hid,
And that he wolde loke about
The whiles that he shall be out.
Thus as he stood and hede name,
A maiden fro Medea came
And to her chambre Jason ledde,
Where that he found redy to bedde
The fairest and the wisest eke.
And she with simple chere and meke,

Whan she him sigh, wax all asshamed. Tho was her tale newe entamed For fikernesse of mariage, She fette forth a riche ymage, Which was the figure of Jupiter, And Jason swore and saide there, That also wis god shuld him helpe, That if Medea did him helpe, That he his purpose mighte winne, They shulde never part atwinne, But ever while him lasteth life, He wolde her holde for his wife. And with that word they kisten both. And for they shulde hem uncloth There come a maid and in her wife She did hem bothe full fervise, Till that they were in bedde naked, I wot that night was well bewaked. They hadden bothe what they wolde. And than at leifer she him tolde And gan fro point to point enforme Of this bataile and all the forme. Whiche as he shulde finde there. Whan he to thile come were. She saide, at entre of the pas How Mars, which god of armes was, Hath fet two oxen sterne and stoute. That casten fire and flame aboute Both ate mouth and at the nase. So that they fetten all on blase

What thing that passeth hem betwene. And furthermore upon the grene There goth the flees of gold to kepe A ferpent, which may never slepe. Thus who that ever it shulde winne, The fire to stoppe he mot beginne Which that the fierce bestes caste. And daunt he mot hem ate laste, So that he may hem yoke and drive, And there upon he mot as blive The ferpent with fuch strength assaile, That he may fleen him by bataile Of which he mot the teeth outdrawe, As it belongeth to that lawe. And than he must the oxen yoke, Til they have with a plough to-broke A furgh of lond, in which a row The teeth of thadder he must sow. And therof shull arise knightes Well armed at alle rightes, Of hem is nought to taken hede, For eche of hem in hastihede Shall other slee with dethes wounde. And thus whan they ben laid to grounde Than mot he to the goddes pray And go so forth and take his pray. But if he faile in any wife Of that ye here me devise, There may be fet non other wey, That he ne must algates deie.

Now have I told the peril all, I woll you tellen forth withall, Quod Medea to Jason tho, That ye shull knowen er ye go Ayein the venim and the fire, What shall be the recoverir. But, fire, for it is nigh day, Ariseth up, so that I may Deliver you what thing I have, That may your life and honour fave. They weren bothe loth to rife, But for they weren bothe wife Up they arisen ate last. Jason his clothes on him cast And made him redy right anon, And she her sherte did upon And cast on her a mantel close Withoute more, and than arose. Tho toke she forth a riche tie Made all of gold and of perrie, Out of the which she nam a ring, The stone was worth all other thing. She faide, while he wold it were, There mighte no peril him dere, In water may it nought be dreint, Where as it cometh the fire is queint, It daunteth eke the cruel heste, There may none quad that man areste, Where so he be on see or londe, That hath this ring upon his honde.

And over that she gan to sain, That if a man will ben unsein. Within his hond hold close the stone And he may invisible gone. The ring to Jason she betaught And so forth after she him taught, What facrifice he shulde make. And gan out of her cofre take Him thought an hevenly figure, Which all by charme and by conjure Was wrought, and eke it was through-writ With names, which he shulde wite, As she him taughte tho to rede And bad him as he wolde spede Withoute rest of any while, Whan he were londed in that ile, He shulde make his facrifice And rede his carect in the wife. As she him taught on knees down bent Thre fithes toward orient. For fo shuld he the goddes plese And win him felven mochel ese. And whan he had it thries radde To open a buist she him badde, That she there toke him in present, And was full of fuch oignement, That there was fire ne venim none. That shulde fastne him upon, Whan that he were anoint withall. Forthy she taught him how he shall Anoint his armes all aboute, And for he shulde nothing doubte She toke him than a maner glue, The which was of fo great vertue, That where a man it shulde cast It shulde binde anon so fast. That no man might it done away. And that she bad by alle way He shulde into the mouthes throw Of the twein exen that fire blow. Therof to stoppen the malice The glue shall serve of that office. And over that her oignement Her ring and her enchauntement Ayein the ferpent shulde him were, Till he him flee with fwerd or spere. And than he may faufly inough His oxen yoke into the plough And the teeth fowe in fuch a wife, Till he the knightes se arise And eche of other down be laide. In fuche a maner as I have faide.

Lo, thus Medea for Jason Ordeineth and praieth therupon, That he nothing foryete sholde, And eke she praieth him that he wolde, Whan he hath all his armes done, To grounde knele and thonke anone The goddes, and so forth by ese The flees of golde he shulde sefe.

And whan he had it fefed fo, That than he were fone ago Withouten any tarieng. Whan this was faid into weping She fel, as she that was through-nome With love, and fo fer overcome, That all her worlde on him she sette. But whan she figh there was no lette, That he mot nedes part her fro, She toke him in her armes two An hunderd times and gan him kiffe And faid: O, all my worldes bliffe, My trust, my lust, my life, min hele, To ben thin helpe in this quarele I pray unto the goddes alle. And with that word she gan down falle Of fwoune, and he her uppe nam, And forth with that the maiden cam. And they to bed anone her brought, And thanne Jason her besought And to her faide in this manere: My worthy lusty lady dere, Comforteth you, for by my trouth It shall nought fallen in my south, That I ne woll throughout fulfille Your hestes at your owne wille. And yet I hope to you bringe Within a while fuch tidinge, The which shall make us bothe game. But for he wolde kepe her name,

Whan that he wist it was nigh day, He faide: Adewe my fwete may. And forth with him he nam his gere, Which as she hadde take him there. And straught unto his chambre went And goth to bedde and slepe him hent And lay, that no man him awoke, For Hercules hede of him toke, Till it was underne high and more. And than he gan to fighe fore And fodeinlich he braide of flepe, And they than token of him kepe, His chamberleins ben sone there And maden redy all his gere, And he arose and to the king He went and faid, how to that thing, For which he cam, he wolde go. The king therof was wonder wo And for he wolde him fain withdraw, He told him many a dredefull lawe. But Jason wolde it nought recorde And ate laste they accorde, Whan that he wolde nought abide, A bote was redy ate tide, In which this worthy knight of Grece Full armed up at every piece To his bataile which belongeth Toke ore in hond and fore him longeth, Till he the water passed were.

He fet him on his knees down straught And his carecte, as he was taught, He rad and made his facrifice And fith anoint him in that wife. As Medea him hadde bede, And than arose up fro that stede And with the glue the fire he queint And anone after he atteint The grete ferpent and him flough. But erst he hadde sorwe inough, For that ferpent made him travaile So hard and fore of his bataile, That now he stood and nowe he fell. For longe time it so befell, That with his fwerd and with his spere He mighte nought that serpent dere, He was fo sherded all aboute It held all egge tole withoute, He was so rude and hard of skin, There might no thinge go therein. Venim and fire to-gider he cast, That he Jason so fore ablast, That if ne were his oignement, His ring and his enchauntement, Which Medea toke him before, He hadde with that worm be lore. But of vertu, which therof cam, Jason the dragon overcam And he anone the teeth out drough And fet his oxen in his plough,

With which he brake a piece of lond And fewe hem with his owne hond. Tho might he great merveile se, Of every toth in his degre Sprong up a knight with spere and sheld, Of which anone right in the feld Echone flough other, and with that Jason Medea not foryat, On both his knees he gan down falle And yaf thank to the goddes alle. The flees he toke and goth to bote, The fonne shineth bright and hote, The flees of gold shone forth with all, The water gliftred over all. Medea wept and fighed ofte And stood upon a toure alofte All prively within her selve, There herd it nouther ten ne twelve. She praid and faid: O, god him spede, The knight, which hath my maidenhede. And ay she loketh toward thile, But whan she figh within a while The flees glistrend agein the sonne, She said: Ha lord, now all is wonne, My knight the feld hath overcome, Now wolde god, he were come. Ha lord, I wold he were a londe. But I dare take this on honde. If that she hadde winges two, She wold have flowe unto him tho

Straught there he was unto the bote. The day was clere, the fonne hote, The Gregois weren in great doubt The while that her lord was out, They wisten nought what shuld betide, But waited ever upon the tide To se what ende shulde falle. There stoden eke the nobles alle Forth with the comunes of the town, And as they loken up and down, They weren ware within a throwe, Where cam the bote, which they wel knowe, And figh, how Jason brought his prey. And tho they gonnen alle fay And criden alle with o steven: Ha, where was ever under the heven So noble a knight, as Jason is? And wel nigh alle faiden this, That Jason was a faire knight, For it was never of mannes might The flees of gold fo for to winne, And thus tellen they beginne. With that the king cam forth anone And figh the flees, how that it shone. And whan Jason cam to the londe, The kinge him felve toke his honde And kist him, and great joy him made. The Gregois weren wonder glade And of that thing right merry hem thought And forth with hem the flees they brought,

And eche on other gan to ligh. But wel was him that mighte nigh To se there of the proprete, And thus they passen the citee And gone unto the paleis straught.

Medea, which foryat her nought, Was redy there and faid anon: Welcome, O worthy knight Jason. She wolde have kist him wonder fain. But shame torned her ayein, It was nought the maner as tho. Forthy she dorste nought do so She toke her leve, and Jason went Into his chambre and she him sent Her maiden to fene how he ferde. The which whan that he figh and herde, How that he hadde faren out And that it stood well all about. She tolde her lady what she wist, And she for joy her maiden kist. The bathes weren than araied With herbes tempred and affaied And Jason was unarmed sone And dide, as it befell to done, Into his bathe he went anone And wisshe him clene as any bone, He toke a foppe and out he cam And on his best array he nam And kempt his hede, whan he was clad, And goth him forth all merry and glad Right straught into the kinges halle. The king cam with his knightes alle And maden him glad welcoming. And he hem tolde tho tiding Of this and that, how it befell, Whan that he wan the shepes fell. Medea whan she was asent Come fone to that parlement, And whan she mighte Jason se, Was none fo glad of all as she. There was no joie for to feche, Of him made every man a speche, Some man faid one, fome faid other, But though he were goddes brother And mighte make fire and thonder, There mighte be no more wonder Than was of him in that citee. Echone taught other this is he, Whiche hath in his power withinne, That all the world ne mighte winne, Lo, here the best of alle good. Thus saiden they, that there stood And eke that walked up and down Both of the court and of the town.

The time of fouper cam anon, They wisshen and therto they gon, Medea was with Jason set, Tho was there many a deinte set And set to-fore hem on the bord, But none so liking as the word,

Which was there spoke among hem two, So as they dorste speke tho. But though they hadden litel space, Yet they accorden in that place, How Jason shulde come at night, Whan every torche and every light Were out, and than of other thinges They speke aloud for supposinges Of hem that stoden there aboute, For love is evermore in doubte, If that it be wifly governed Of hem that ben of love lerned. Whan al was done, that dissh and cup And cloth and bord and all was up, They waken, while hem lift to wake, And after that they leve take And gon to bedde for to reste. And whan him thoughte for the beste, That every man was fast a slepe, Jason, that wolde his time kepe, Goth forth stalkend all prively Unto the chambre and redely There was a maide, which him kept, Medea woke and no thing flept, But netheles she was a bedde, And he with alle hafte him spedde And made him naked and all warm. Anone he toke her in his arm. What nede is for to speke of ese, Hem list eche other for to plese,

So that they hadden joy inow.
And tho they fetten, whan and how,
That she with him awey shal stele,
With wordes such and other fele.
Whan all was treted to an ende,
Jason toke leve and gan forth wende
Unto his owne chambre in pees.
There wist it non but Hercules.

He flept and ros, whan it was time, And whan it fel towardes prime, He toke to him fuch as he trifte In fecre, that none other wiste, And told hem of his counfeil there And faide, that his wille were, That they to ship had alle thing So privelich in thevening, That no man might her dede aspie But the that were of compaignie, For he woll go withoute leve And lenger woll he nought beleve, But he ne wolde at thilke throwe The king or quene shulde it knowe. They faid, all this shall well be do. And Jason truste well therto.

Medea in the mene while, Which thought her fader to beguile, The trefor, which her fader hadde, With her all prively she ladde And with Jason at time set Away she stale and sound no let

And straught she goth her into ship Of Grece with that felaship. And they anone drough up the faile, And all that night this was counseil, But erly whan the sonne shone, Men figh, how that they were gone And come unto the kinge and tolde. And he the fothe knowe wolde And axeth, where his doughter was. There was no word, but out alas, She was ago, the moder wept, The fader as a wodeman lept And gan the time for to warie And fwore his othe he wold nought tarie, That with caliphe and with galey The same cours, the same wey, Which Jason toke, he wolde take, If that he might him overtake. To this they faiden alle ye. Anone as they were ate fee And all as who faith at one worde, They gone withinne shippes borde, The fail goth up, and forth they straught, But none esploit therof they caught, And so they tornen home ayein, For all that labour was in vein. Jason to Grece with his pray Goth through the fee the righte way. Whan he there come and men it tolde. They maden joie yong and olde.

Eson whan that he wist of this, How that his fone comen is And hath acheved that he fought And home with him Medea brought, In all the wide world was none So glad a man as he was one. To-gider ben these lovers tho, Till that they hadden fones two, Wherof they weren bothe glade And olde Eson great joie made To feen thencrees of his lignage, For he was of so great an age, That men awaiten every day, Whan that he shulde gone away. Jason, which figh his fader olde, Upon Medea made him bolde Of art magique, which she couth, And praieth her, that his faders youth She wolde make ayeinward newe. And she that was toward him trewe, Behight him, that she wolde it do, Whan that she time sigh therto. But what she did in that matere It is a wonder thing to here, But yet for the novelrie I thenke tellen a great partie.

Thus it befell upon a night, Whan there was nought but sterre light, She was vanisshed right as her list, That no wight but her self it wist. Nota, quibus medicamentis Esonem senectute decrepitum ad sue juventutis adoles cenciam prudens Medea reduxit. And that was ate midnight tide, The world was still on every side, With open hede and foot all bare Her hair to-sprad she gan to fare, Upon her clothes gert she was All specheles and on the gras She glode forth as an adder doth. None other wife she ne goth, Till she came to the fresshe flood, And there a while she withstood, Thries she torned her aboute And thries eke she gan down loute And in the flood she wete her hair. And thries on the water there She gaspeth with a drecchinge onde And the fine toke her speche on honde. First she began to clepe and calle Upwarde unto the sterres alle, To winde, to air, to fee, to londe She preide and eke helde up her honde To Echates and gan to crie, Whiche is goddesse of sorcerie, She saide: Helpeth at this nede, And as ye maden me to spede, Whan Jason came the flees to seche, So help me now, I you beseche. With that she loketh and was ware, Down fro the sky there came a chare,

The which dragons aboute drowe. And tho she gan her hede down bowe

And up she stighe and faire and well She drove forth by chare and wheel Above in thaire among the skies, The londe of Crete in tho parties She fought, and faste gan her hie, And therupon the hulles high Of Othrin and Olimpe also And eke of other hulles mo She founde and gadreth herbes suote, She pulleth up some by the rote And many with a knife she shereth And all into her char she bereth. Thus whan she hath the hulles sought, The floodes there foryate she nought Eridian and Amphrifos, Peneie and eke Spercheidos, To hem she went and there she nome Both of the water and of the fome, The fonde and eke the smalle stones, Whiche as she chese out for the nones, And of the redde fee a part, That was behovelich to her art, She toke, and after that about She foughte fondry fedes out In feldes and in many greves And eke a part she toke of leves. But thing, which might her most availe, She found in Crete and in Thessaile In daies and in nightes nine, With great travaile and with peine

She was purveyed of every piece And torneth homward into Grece. Before the gates of Eson Her chare she let away to gone And toke out first that was therinne, For the she thoughte to beginne Such thing, as femeth impossible And made her selven invisible, As she, that was with thaire enclosed And might of no man be desclosed. She toke up turves of the londe Withoute helpe of mannes honde And heled with the grene gras, Of whiche an alter made there was Unto Echates the goddesse Of art magique and the maistresse. And efte an other to invent, As she, which did her hole intent, Tho toke she feldwode and verveine. Of herbes ben nought better tweine, Of which anone withoute let These alters ben aboute set. Two fondry pittes faste by She made and with that hastely A wether, which was black, she flough, And out therof the blood she drough And did into the pittes two, Warm milk she put also therto With hony meind, and in fuch wife She gan to make her facrifice

And cried and praide forth withall To Pluto the god infernal And to the quene Proferpine. And so she sought out all the line Of hem, that longen to that craft, Behinde was no name laft. And praid hem all, as she well couth To graunt Eson his firste youth. This olde Eson brought forth was tho, Away she bad all other go Upon peril, that mighte falle, And with that word they wenten alle And left hem there two alone. And the san to gaspe and gone And made fignes many one And faid her wordes therupon, And with spellinge and her charmes She toke Eson in both her armes And made him for to slepe fast And him upon her herbes cast. The blacke wether the she toke And hew the flesshe, as doth a coke, On either alter part she laide, And with the charmes that she saide A fire down fro the sky alight And made it for to brenne light. And whan Medea figh it brenne, Anone she gan to sterte and renne The firy alters all about. There was no beste, which goth out,

More wilde, than she semeth there. Aboute her shulders heng her hair, As though the were oute of her minde And torned into another kinde. Tho lay there certain wode cleft, Of which the pieces now and eft She made hem in the pittes wete And put hem in the firy hete And toke the bronde with all the blase And thries she began to rase About Eson, there as he slept. And eft with water, which she kept, She made a cercle about him thries And eft with fire of fulphre twies Full many another thing she dede, Whiche is nought writen in the stede. But tho she ran so up and doune, She made many a wonder foune, Somtime lich unto the cock. Somtime unto the laverock. Somtime cacleth as an hen. Somtime speketh as don men. And right so as her jargon straungeth In fondry wife her forme chaungeth, She femeth faire and no woman. For with the craftes that she can She was as who faith a goddeffe, And what her lifte more or leffe She did, in bokes as we finde, That passeth over mannes kinde.

But who that woll of wonders here, What thing she wrought in this matere To make an ende of that she gan Such merveil herde never man.

Apointed in the newe mone, Whan it was time for to done. She fet a caldron on the fire. In which was al the hole attire, Whereon the medicine stood, Of juse, of water and of blood, And let it boile in fuche a plite, Till that she figh the spume white. And the fhe cast in rinde and rote And fede and floure, that was for bote With many an herbe and many a stone, Wherof she hath there many one. And eke Cimpheius, the serpent, To her hath all her scales lent, Chelidre her yafe her adders skin, And she to boilen cast hem in. And parte eke of the horned oule, The which men here on nightes houle, And of a raven, which was tolde Of nine hundred winter olde, She toke the hede with all the bille. And as the medicine it wille. She toke her after the bowele Of the feewolf, and for the hele Of Eson with a thousand mo Of thinges, that she hadde tho,

In that caldron to-gider as blive She put and toke than of olive A drie braunche hem with to stere, The which anon gan floure and bere And waxe all fresshe and grene ayein. Whan she this vertue hadde sene, She let the leeste droppe of alle Upon the bare floure down falle. Anon there fprong up floure and gras, Where as the droppe fallen was, And waxe anone all medow grene, So that it mighte well be fene. Medea thanne knewe and wist Her medicine is for to trift And goth to Eson there he lay And toke a fwerd was of affay, With which a wounde upon his fide She made, that there out may slide The blood withinne, which was olde And fike and trouble and feble and colde. And the she toke unto his use Of herbes of all the best juse And poured it into his wounde, That made his veines full and founde. And the fhe made his woundes close And toke his honde, and up he rose. And the fine yaf him drinke a draught, Of which his youth agein he caught, His hede, his herte and his visage Lich unto twenty winter age,

His hore haires were away And lich unto the fresshe may, Whan passed ben the colde shoures, Right so recovereth he his sloures.

Lo, what might any man devise,
A woman shewe in any wise
More hertely love in any stede
Than Medea to Jason dede.
First she made him the flees to winne
And after that fro kith and kinne
With great tresor with him she stale
And to his fader forth with all
His elde hath torned into youthe,
Which thing none other woman couthe.
But how it was to her aquit,
The remembraunce dwelleth yit.

King Peleus his eme was dede,
Jason bare croune on his hede,
Medea hath fulfilled his will,
But whan he shuld of right fulfill
The trouthe, which to her afore
He had in thile of Colchos swore,
Tho was Medea most deceived.
For he an other hath received,
Which doughter was to king Creon,
Creusa she hight, and thus Jason,
As he, that was to love untrewe,
Medea left and toke a newe.
But that was after sone abought.
Medea with her art hath wrought

Of cloth of golde a mantel riche, Which femeth worth a kinges riche, And that was unto Creusa sent In name of yeft and of present, For fusterhode hem was betwene. And whan that yonge fresshe quene That mantel lapped her aboute, Anon therof the fire sprang oute And brent her bothe fleshe and bon. Tho cam Medea to Jason With both his fones on her honde And faid: O thou of every londe The most untrewe creature, Lo, this shall be thy forfeiture. With that she both his sones slough Before his eye, and he out drough His fwerd and wold have flain her tho, But farewell she was ago Unto Pallas the court above. Where as she pleigneth upon love, As she, that was with that goddesse, And he was lefte in great distresse.

Thus might thou fe, what forwe it doth To swere an oth, which is nought soth, In loves cause namely. My fone, be well ware forthy And kepe, that thou be nought forfwore. For this, whiche I have told to-fore, Ovide telleth every dele.

My fader, I may leve it wele, Amans.

For I have herde it ofte fay,
How Jason toke the flees awey
Fro Colchos, but yet herde I nought,
By whom it was first thider brought.
And for it were good to here,
If that you list at my praiere
To telle I wold you beseche.

My fone, who that woll it feche, In bokes he may finde it write. And netheles, if thou wolt wite In the maner as thou hast preide, I shall the tell, how it is saide.

The fame of thilke shepes selle, Whiche in Colchos, as it beselle, Was all of gold, shal never deie, Wherof I thenke for to say, Howe it cam first into that ile. There was a king in thilke while Towardes Grece, and Athemas The cronique of his name was. And had a wif, which Philen hight, By whom, so as fortune it dight, He had of children yonge two.

Frixus the firste was of tho,
A knave child, right faire with all.
A doughter eke, the which men call
Hellen, he hadde by his wife.
But for there may no mannes life
Endure upon this erthe here,
This worthy quene, as thou might here,

Confessor.

Er that the children were of age,
Toke of her ende the passage
With great worship and was begrave.
What thing it liketh god to have
It is great reson to ben his.
Forthy this king, so as it is,
With great suffrance it undersongeth.
And afterward, as him belongeth,
Whan it was time for to wedde,
A newe wife he toke to bedde,
Whiche Yno hight and was a maide
And eke the doughter, as men saide,
Of Cadme, whiche a king also
Was holde in thilke daies tho.

Whan Yno was the kinges make, She cast, how that she mighte make These children to her fader loth And shope a wile ayein hem both, Which to the king was all unknowe. A yere or two she let do sowe The lond with fode whete aboute. Wherof no corn may springen oute. And thus by fleight and by covine Aros the derth and the famine Through out the londe in fuch a wife, So that the king a facrifice Upon the point of this distresse To Ceres, which is the goddesse Of corne, hath shape him for to vive To loke, if it may be forvive

The mischese, which was in his londe. But she, which knewe to-fore the honde, The circumstance of all this thing, Ayein the coming of the king Into the temple hath shape so Of her accord, that alle tho, Which of the temple prestes were, Have faid and full declared there Unto the king, but if so be, That he deliver the contre Of Frixus and of Hellen bothe. With whom the goddes ben so wrothe, That while the children ben withinne, Such tilthe shall no man beginne, Wherof to get him any corne. Thus was it faid, thus was it fworne Of all the prestes, that there are. And she, which causeth all this fare, Said eke therto, what that she wolde. And every man than after tolde So as the quene had hem preide.

The king, which hath his ere leide And leveth all, that ever he herde, Unto her tales thus answerde And saith, that lever him is to chese His children bothe for to lese Than him and all the remenaunt Of hem, which are appertenaunt Unto the lond, whiche he shall kepe. And bade his wife to take kepe

In what manere is best to done, That they delivered were fone Out of this worlde. And she anone Two men ordeineth for to gone, But first she made hem for to swere, That they the children shulde bere Unto the see, that none it knowe, And hem therinne bothe throwe. The children to the fee ben lad. Where in the wife, as Yno bad, These men be redy for to do. But the goddesse, which Juno Is hote, appereth in the stede And hath unto the men forbede, That they the children nought ne slee, But bad hem loke into the fee And taken hede of that they fighen. There swam a shepe to-fore her eyen, Whose flees of burned gold was all. And this goddesse forth with all Commaundeth, that withoute let They shulde anon the children set Above upon the shepes back. And all was do, right as she spak, Wherof the men gone home ayein.

And fell so, as the bokes sain,
Hellen the yonge maiden tho,
Whiche of the see was wo bego,
For pure drede her hert hath lore,
That fro the shepe, which hath her bore,

As she, that was swounende feint,
She fell and hath her self adreint.
With Frixus and this shepe forth swam,
Till he to thile of Colchos cam,
Where Juno the goddesse he fonde,
Which toke the shepe unto the londe
And set it there in such a wise,
As thou to-fore hast herd devise,
Wherof cam after all the wo,
Why Jason was forswore so
Unto Medee, as it is spoke.

My fader, who that hath to-broke His trouth, as ye have tolde above, He is nought worthy for to love Ne be beloved, as me semeth. But every newe love quemeth To him, that newe fangel is. And netheles now after this, If that you list to taken hede Upon my shrifte to procede In loves cause ayein the vice Of covetise and avarice, What there is more I wolde wite.

My fone, this I finde write, There is yet one of thilke brood, Which only for the worldes good To make a trefor of money Put alle conscience awey. Wherof in thy consession The name and the condition Amans.

I shall here afterward declare, Which maketh one riche, an other bare.

Plus capit usura sibi, quam debetur, et illud Fraude collocata sepe latenter agit. Sic amor excessus quam sepe suos ut avarus Spirat et unius tres capit ipse loco.

Hic tractat de illa specie avaricie, que usura dicitur, cuius creditor in pecunia tantum numerata plus quam fibi de jure debetur increauget.

Upon the bench fittend on high With avarice usure I sigh, Ful clothed of his owne fuite. Which after gold maketh chase and suite mentum lucri ad- With his brocours, that renne aboute, Liche unto racches in a route. Such lucre is none above grounde, Which is nought of the racches founde. For where they se beyete sterte, That shall hem in no wife afterte, But they it drive into the net Of lucre, whiche usure hath set.

Usure with the riche dwelleth. To all that ever he bieth and felleth, He hath ordeined of his fleight Mesure double and double weight. Outward he felleth by the laffe And with the more he maketh his taffe. Wherof his hous is full withinne. He recheth nought be so he winne, Though that there lefe ten or twelve. His love is all toward him felve And to none other but he fe, That he may winne suche thre.

For where he shall ought vive or lene, He woll ayeinward take a bene, There he hath lent the smalle pese. And right fo there ben many of these Lovers, that though they love a lite, That scarsly wolde it weie a mite, Yet wol they have a pound ayein, As doth usure in his bargain. But certes fuch usure unliche It falleth more unto the riche Als well of love as of beyete, Than unto hem, that ben nought grete. And as who faith ben fimple and pouer, For felden is, whan they recouer, But if it be through great deferte And netheles men se pouerte With pursuit of contenaunce Full ofte make a great chevaunce And take of love his avauntage Forth with the helpe of his brocage, That maken feme where it is nought. And thus full ofte is love bought For litel what and mochel take With false weightes that thy make.

Now fone, of that I faide above Thou wost what usure is of love. Tell me forthy what so thou wilt, If thou therof hast any gilt?

My fader nay, for ought I here. For of the points ye tolden here

I will you by my trouth affure, My weight of love and my mesure Hath be more large and more certeine Than ever I toke of love ayeine. For so yet couthe I never of sleighte To take ayein by double weighte Of love more than I have yive. For also wis mote I be shrive And have remission of sinne. As fo yet couth I never winne Ne yet so mochel soth to sain, That ever I might have half ayein Of fo full love, as I have lent. And if mine hap were fo well went, That for the hole I might have half, Me thenketh I were a goddes half. For where usure wold have double. My conscience is nought so trouble, I bidde never as to my dele But of the hole an halven dele. That is none excess as me thenketh. But netheles it me forthenketh. For well I wot, that wol nought be, For every day the better I fe, That how so ever I yive or lene My love in place that I mene, For ought that ever I axe or crave I can nothing ageinwarde have. But yet for that I wol nought lete What so befall of my beyete,

That I ne shall her yive and lene My love and all my thought fo clene, That toward me shall nought beleve. And if she of her gode leve Rewarde wol me nought ayein, I wot the last of my bargein Shall stonde upon so great a lost, That I may never more the cost Recouer in this world till I deie, So that touchend of this partie I may me well excuse and shall And for to speke forth withall, If any brocour for me went, That point come never in min entent, So that the more me merveileth What thing it is, my lady eileth, That all min herte and all my time She hath and do no better byme.

I have herd faid, that thought is free And netheles in privete
To you, my fader, that bene here
Min hole shrifte for to here,
I dare min herte well disclose
Touchend usurie, as I suppose,
Whiche, as ye telle, in love is used.
My lady may nought ben excused,
That for o loking of her eye
Min hole herte till I deie
With all that ever I may and can
She hath me wonne to her man,

Wherof me thenketh, good refon wolde, That the fomdele rewarde sholde And yive a part, there she hath all, I not what falle herafter shall. But into now yet dare I fain, Her liste never yive ayein A goodly word in fuch a wife, Wherof min hope might arise My grete love to recompense, I not how she her conscience Excuse wol of this usure By large weight and great mesure. She hath my love and I have nought Of that, which I have dere abought And with min herte I have it paide, But all this is aside laide, And I go loveles aboute. Her oughte stonde in full great doubte, Till she redresse suche a sinne. That she wol al my love winne And yiveth me nought to live by. Nought al fo moch as graunt mercy Her lift to fay, of which I might Some of my grete peine alight. But of this point, lo, thus I fare, As he, that paieth for his chaffare And bieth it dere and yet hath none, So mote he nedes pouer gone. Thus bie I dere and have no love. That I ne may nought come above

To winne of love none encrese,
But I me wille nethelese
Touchend usure of love aquite,
And if my lady be to wite,
I pray to god such grace her sende,
That she by time it mot amende.

Confessor.

My fone, of that thou hast answerde Touchend usure I have al herde. How thou of love hast wonne smale. But that thou tellest in thy tale And thy lady therof accusest, Me thenketh tho wordes thou misusest. For by thin owne knouleching Thou faift, how she for one loking Thy hole hert fro the she toke, She may be fuch, that her o loke Is worth thine herte many folde, So hast thou well thin herte solde, Whan thou hast that is more worthe. And eke of that thou tellest forthe. How that her weight of love uneven Is unto thine, under the heven Stood never in even that balaunce, Which stont in loves governaunce. Such is the statute of his lawe, That though thy love more drawe And peife in the balaunce more, Thou might nought axe ayein therfore Of duete, but all of grace. For love is lorde in every place,

There may no lawe him justify By reddour ne by compaigny, That he ne wol after his wille, Whom that him liketh spede or spille. To love a man may well beginne, But whether he shall lese or winne, That wot no man, til ate last. Forthy coveite nought to fast, My fone, but abide thin ende, Parcas all may to good wende. But that thou hast me tolde and saide Of o thing I am right well paide, That thou by fleighte, ne by guile Of no brocour hast otherwhile Engined love, for fuche dede Is fore venged as I rede.

Hic ponit exemplum contra istos maritos, qui ultra id quod proprias habent uxores ad nove voluptatis incrementum alias mulieres superflue lucrari non verentur. Et narrat, qualiter Juno vindictam suam in Eccho in huiusmodi mulierum lucris adquirendis de consilio mariti sui Jovis mediatrix exstiterat.

Brocours of love, that deceiven,
No wonder is though they receiven
After the wrong, that they deserven
For whom as ever that they serven
And do plesaunce for a while.
Yet ate last her owne guile
Upon her owne hede descendeth,
Which god of his vengeaunce sendeth.
As by ensample of time ago
A man may finde it hath be so.
It fell some time, as it was sene,
The high goddesse and the quene
Juno tho had in compaigny
A maiden full of trechery.

For the was ever in accorde With Jupiter, that was her lorde, To get him other loves newe Through fuch brocage and was untrewe, All other wife than him nedeth. But she, the which no shame dredeth, With queinte wordes and with flie Blent in fuch wife her ladies eye As she, to whom that Juno trist, So that therof she nothing wist. But so prive may be nothing, That it ne cometh to knouleching, Thing done upon the derke night Is after knowe on daies light. So it befell, that ate last All that this flighe maiden cast Was overcast and overthrowe. For as the fothe mot be knowe, To Juno it was done understonde, In what manere her husbonde With fals brocage hath take usure Of love more than his mesure, Whan he toke other than his wife, Wherof this maiden was giltife, Whiche hadde ben of his affent. And thus was all the game shent. She fuffred him, as she mot nede, But the brocour of his misdede, She, which her counseil yaf therto, On her is the vengeaunce do,

For Juno with her wordes hote, This maiden, which Eccho was hote, Reproveth and faith in this wife:

O traiteresse, of which service Hast thou thin owne lady served, Thou hast great peine well deserved, That thou canst maken it so queint. Thy flighe wordes for to peint Towardes me, that am thy quene, Wherof thou madest me to wene, That my husbonde trewe were, Whan that he loveth elles where, All be it so him nedeth nought. But upon the it shall be bought Whiche art prive to the doinges, And me full ofte of thy lefinges Deceived hast. Nowe is the day, That I thy wile quite may, And for thou hast to me conceled. That my lorde hath with other deled, I shall the sette in suche a kinde, That ever unto the worldes ende All that thou herest thou shalt telle And clappe it out as doth a belle. And with that word she was forshape, There may no vois her mouthe escape, What man that in the wodes crieth, Withouten faile Eccho replieth. And what word, that him lust to sain, The fame word she faith ayein.

Thus she, which whilome hadde leve To dwelle in chambre, mot beleve In wodes and on hilles both. For such brocage as wives loth, Which doth her lordes hertes chaunge And love in other places straunge.

Forthy if ever it so befalle,
That thou, my sone, amonges alle
Be wedded man, hold that thou hast.
For than all other love is waste,
O wife shal wel to the suffise,
And than if thou for covetise
Of love woldest axe more,
Thou shuldest don ayein the lore
Of alle hem that trewe be.

My fader, as in this degre
My conscience is nought accused,
For I no such brocage have used,
Wherof that lust of love is wonne.
Forthy speke forth, as ye begonne,
Of avarice upon my shrifte.

My fone, I shall the braunches shifte By order so as they ben set, On whom no good is wel beset.

Pro verbis verba, munus pro munere reddi Convenit, ut pondus equa statera gerat. Propterea cupido non dat sua dona Cupido. Nam qui nulla serit, gramina nulla metet.

Hic tractat super illa specie avaricie, que parcimonia di-

citur, cuius natura tenax aliqualem cionem aut deo aut hominibus participare nullatenus consentit.

To be witholde agein largesse fue substancie por- Hath one, whose name is said scarsnesse, The which is keper of his hous And is so throughout avarous, That he no good let out of honde, Though god him felf it wolde fonde, Of yifte shuld he no thing have. And if a man it wolde crave, He muste thanne faile nede. Where god him felve may nought spede. And thus scarsnesse in every place By refon may no thank purchace. And netheles in his degre Above all other most prive With avarice stant he this. For he governeth that there is In eche estate of his office. After the reule of thilke vice He taketh, he kepeth, he halt, he bint, That lighter is to fle the flint Than gete of him in hard or neisshe Only the value of a reisshe Of good in helping of an other Nought, though it were his owne brother. For in the cas of yift and lone Stant every man for him alone. Him thenketh of his unkindship, That him nedeth no felaship Be fo the bagge and he accorden, Him reccheth nought, what men recorden Of him or be it evil or good. For all his truste is on his good, So that alone he falleth ofte. Whan he best weneth stonde alofte Als well in love as other wife. For love is ever of some reprise To him that woll his love holde. Forthy my fone, as thou art holde Touchend of this tell me thy shrifte, Hast thou be scarse or large of yifte Unto thy love, whom thou fervest. For after that thou well deservest Of yifte, thou might be the bet. For that good holde I well be fet, For which thou might the better fare, Than is no wisdom for to spare. For thus men fain in every nede, He was wife, that first made mede. For where as mede may nought spede, I not what helpeth other dede. Full ofte he faileth of his game, That will with idel hond reclame His hawke, as many a nice doth. Forthy my fone, tell me foth And fay the trouth, if thou hast be Unto thy love or scarse or fre?

My fader, it hath stonde thus, That if the tresor of Cresus And all the golde of Octavien, Forth with the richesse of Yndien Amans.

Of perles and of riche stones Were all to-gider min at ones, I fet it at no more accompt Than wolde a bare straw amount To yive it her all in a day, Be fo that to that fwete may It mighte like or more or lesse. And thus because of my scarsnesse Ye may well understond and leve, That I shall nought the worse acheve The purpos, which is in my thought, But yet I yaf her never nought Ne therto durst a profre make. For well I wot, she woll nought take And vive woll she nought also, She is escheue of bothe two. And this I trowe be the skill Towardes me, for she ne will, That I have any cause of hope, Nought also mochel as a drope. But toward other as I may fe, She taketh and yiveth in fuch degre, That as by wey of frendelyhede She can so kepe her womanhede, That every man speketh of her wele. But she wol take of me no dele, And yet she wot wel, that I wolde Yive and do bothe what I sholde To plesen her in all my might, By refon this wote every wight.

For that may by no wey afterte,
There she is maister of the herte,
She mot be maister of the good.
For god wot wel, that all my mood
And all min herte and all my thought
And all my good, while I have ought,
Als frely as god hath it yive,
It shall be hers, while I live,
Right as her list her self commaunde.
So that it nedeth no demaunde
To axe me, if I have be scarse
To love, for as to tho parse
I will answere and say no.

My fone, that is right well do. For often time of scarsnesse It hath ben seen, that for the lesse Is lost the more, as thou shalt here A tale, lich to this matere.

Scarsnesse and love accorden never,
For every thing is wel the lever,
Whan that a man hath bought it dere.
And for to speke in this matere
For sparing of a litel cost
Full ofte time a man hath lost
The large cote for the hood.
What man that scarse is of his good
And wol nought yive, he shall nought take,
With yift a man may undertake
The highe god to plese and queme,
With yift a man the world may deme.

Hic loquitur contra istos, qui avaricia stricti largitatis beneficium in amoris causa confundunt. Et ponit exemplum, qualiter Croceus largus et hillaris Babionem avarum et tenacem de amore Viole, que pulcherrima fuit, donis largissimis circumvenit.

For every creature bore, If thou him yive, is glad therfore, And every gladship, as I finde, Is comfort unto loves kinde And causeth ofte a man to spede. So was he wife, that first yaf mede. For mede kepeth love in hous, But where the men ben coveitous And sparen for to yive a parte, They knowen nought Cupides arte. For his fortune and his apprife Disdeigneth alle covetise And hateth alle nigardie. And for to loke of this partie A fothe enfample, howe it is fo, I finde write of Babio. Which had a love at his menage, There was no fairer of her age, And highte Viola by name, Which full of youth and full of game Was of her felfe and large and free. But such an other chinche as he Men wisten nought in all the londe, And had affaited to his honde His fervant, the which Spodius Was hote. And in this wife thus The worldes good of fuffifaunce Was had, but liking and plefaunce Of that belongeth to richesse Of love stode in great distresse,

So that this yonge lufty wight Of thing, which fell to loves right, Was evil ferved over all, That she was wo bego withall. Til that Cupide and Venus eke A medicine for the feke Ordeine wolden in this cas. So as fortune thanne was Of love upon the destine It fell right, as it shulde be. A fresshe, a free, a frendly man, That nought of avarice can, Which Croceus by name hight, Toward this fwete cast his fight And there she was cam in presence, She figh him large of his despense, And amorous and glad of chere, So that her liketh well to here The goodly wordes, which he faide, And therupon of love he praide. Of love was all that he ment. To love and for she shulde affent. He yaf her yiftes ever among. But for men fain, that mede is strong, It was well fene at thilke tide For as it shulde of right betide, This Viola largesse hath take And the nigard she hath forsake. Of Babio she will no more, For he was grucchend evermore,

There was with him none other fare, But for to pinche and for to spare, Of worldes muck to get encres. So goth the wrecche loveles Bejaped for his scarsite. And he that large was and fre And set his herte to despende, This Croceus his bowe bende, Which Venus toke him for to holde, And shot as ofte as ever he wolde.

Lo, thus departeth love his lawe, That what man woll nought be felawe To yive and spende, as I the telle, He is nought worthy for to dwelle In loves court to be relieved. Forthy my sone, if I be leved, Thou shalt be large of thy despense.

I am, and further if I shall

Of avarice the progenie,
What vice sueth after this,
Thou shalt have wonder how it is
Among the solke in any regne,
That such a vice mighte regne,

7.

Whiche is comune at all affaies, As men may finde now a daies.

Cuncta creatura, deus et qui cuncta creavit, Damnant ingrati dictaque facta viri. Non dolor a longe stat, quo sibi talis amicam Traxit, et in sine deserit esse suam.

The vice like unto the fende, Which never yet was mannes frende, And cleped is unkindeship, Of covine and of felaship With avarice he is witholde. Him thenketh he shuld nought ben holde Unto the moder, which him bare. Of him may never man beware, He wol nought knowe the merite, For that he wolde it nought aquite, Which in this worlde is mochel used. And fewe ben therof excused. To tell of him is endeles. But thus I faie netheles, Where as this vice cometh to londe, There taketh no man his thanke on honde, Though he with all his mightes ferve, He shall of him no thank deserve, He taketh what any man will yive, But while he hath o day to live, He wol nothing rewarde ayein, He gruccheth for to vive o grein, Where he hath take a berne full. That maketh a kinde herte dull,

Hic loquitur supra illa aborta specie avaricie, que ingratitudo dicta est, cuius condicionem non solum creator, sed eciam cuncte creature abhominabilem detestantur.

To fet his trust in such frendship, There as he fint no kindeship. And for to speke wordes pleine, Thus here I many a man compleigne, That howe on daies thou shalt finde At nede fewe frendes kinde. What thou hast done for hem to-fore, It is foryeten, as it were lore. The bokes speken of this vice And telle how god of his justice By way of kinde and eke nature And every liflich creature, The lawe also, who that it can, They dampnen an unkinde man.

It is all one, to fay unkinde As thing, which done is ayein kinde, For it with kinde never stood A man to yielden evil for good. For who that wolde taken hede, A beste is glad of a good dede And loveth thilke creature After the lawe of his nature And doth him ese. And for to se Of this matere auctorite. Full ofte time it hath befalle. Wherof a tale amonges alle, Which is of olde ensamplarie, I thenke for to specifie.

Hic dicit, qualiter bestie in suis benefi-

To speke of an unkinde man ciis hominem ingra. I finde, how whileme Adrian

Of Rome, which a great lorde was, Upon a day as he par cas To wode in his hunting went, It hapneth at a fodein went, After the chase as he pursueth, Through happe, which no man escheueth, He felle unware into a pit, Where that it mighte nought be let. The pit was depe, and he fell lowe, That of his men none mighte knowe, Where he became, for none was nigh, Which of his fall the mischese sigh. And thus alone there he lay Clepende and criend all the day For focoure and deliverance, Till ayein eve it fell per chance, A while er it began to night, A pouer man, which Bardus hight, Cam forth walkend with his affe And hadde gadered him a taffe Of grene stickes and of drie To felle, whom that wolde hem bie, As he, which had no livelode, But whan he mighte suche a lode To towne with his affe carie. And as it fel him for to tarie, That ilke time nigh the pit And hath the truffe faste knit, He herde a vois, which cried dimme, And he his ere to the brimme tum naturaliter precellunt. Et ponit exemplum de Adriano Romano senatore, qui in quadam foresta venacionibus insistens, dum predam persequeretur, in cisternam profundam nescia familia corruit, ubi superperveniens quidam pauper, nomine Bardus, immissa cordula putans hominem extraxisse, primo simeam extraxit, secundo ferpentem, tercio Adrianum, qui pauperem despiciens aliquid ei pro benefacto reddere recusabat. Sed tam serpens quam simea gratuita benevolencia ipfum fingulis donis sufficienter remuneraverunt.

Hath leide and herde it was a man, Which faide: O helpe here Adrian, And I will yive half my good. The pouer man this understood, As he that wolde gladly win, And to this lord, which was within, He spake and said: If I the save, What fikernesse shall I have Of covenant, that afterwarde Thou wolt me vive fuch rewarde, As thou behightest now before? That other hath his othes fwore By heven and by the goddes alle, If that it mighte so befalle, That he out of the pit him brought, Of all the goodes, which he ought, He shall have even halven dele.

This Bardus faid, he wolde wele. And with this worde his affe anon He let untrusse and therupon Down goth the corde into the pit, To whiche he hath at ende knit A staff, wherby, he saide, he wolde, That Adrian him shulde holde. But it was tho per chaunce falle, Into that pit was also falle An ape, which at thilke throwe, Whan that the corde cam down lowe. All fodeinly therto he skipte And it in both his armes clipte.

And Bardus with his affe anone Him hath up draw, and he is gon. But whan he figh it was an ape, He wend all hadde ben a jape Of faierie and fore him dradde. And Adrian eft sone gradde For helpe and cride and preide faste. And he eftfone his corde caste. But whan it came unto the grounde, A great ferpent it hath bewounde, The which Bardus anone up drough. And than him thoughte wel inough, It was fantasme that he herde The vois, and he therto answerde: What wight art thou in goddes name? I am, quod Adrian, the same, Whose good thou shalt have even halfe. Quod Bardus than a goddes halfe, The thridde time affaie I shall. And cast his corde forth withall Into the pit, and whan it came To him, this lord of Rome it name And therupon him hath adressed And with his hond ful ofte bleffed. And than he bad to Bardus hale. And he, which understood his tale, Betwene him and his affe all fofte Hath drawe and fet him up a lofte Withouten harm all esely. He faith not ones graunt mercy,

But straught him forth to the citee And let this pouer Bardus be. And netheles this simple man His covenaunt, so as he can, Hath axed. And that other saide, If so be that he him upbraide Of ought, that hath be spoke or do, It shall be venged of him so, That him were better to be dede. And he can tho no other rede, But on his asse ayein he cast His trusse and hieth homward fast. And whan that he came home to bed, He tolde his wife, how that he sped.

But finally to speke ought more Unto this lorde, he drad him fore, So that a word ne durst he sain. And thus upon the morwe ayein In the maner, as I recorde, Forth with his affe and with his corde, To gader wode, as he did er, He goth, and whan that he cam ner Unto the place, where he wolde, He gan his ape anone beholde, Which had gadered al aboute Of stickes here and there a route And leide hem redy to his honde, Wherof he made his truffe and bonde. Fro daie to daie and in this wife This ape profreth his fervise,

So that he had of wode inough.
Upon a time and as he drough
Toward the wode, he figh befide
The greate gastly serpent glide,
Till that she cam in his presence
And in her kinde a reverence
She hath him do and forth withall
A stone more bright than a cristall
Out of her mouth to-fore his way
She let down fall and went away,
For that he shall nought ben adrad.

Tho was this pouer Bardus glad, Thonkende god and to the stone He goth and taketh it up anone And hath great wonder in his witte, How that the beste him hath aquitte, Where that the mannes fone hath failed, For whom he hadde most travailed. But all he put in goddes honde And torneth home and what he fonde Unto his wife he hath it shewed And they, that weren bothe lewed, Accorden, that he shulde it selle. And he no lenger wolde dwelle, But forth anone upon the tale The stone he profresh to the sale, And right as he him felfe it fette, The jueller anone forth fette The golde and made his paiement, Therof was no delaiement.

Thus whan this stone was bought and fold, Homward with joie many fold This Bardus goth, and whan he cam Hom to his hous and that he nam His gold out of his purs withinne, He fonde his stone also therinne. Wherof for joy his herte plaide, Unto his wife and thus he faide: Lo, here my golde, lo, here my stone. His wife hath wonder therupon, And axeth him how that may be. Now by my trouth, I not, quod he, But I dare fwere upon a boke, That to my marchant I it toke, And he it hadde whan I went. So know I nought to what entent It is now here, but it be grace. Forthy to morwe in other place I will it founde for to felle, And if it woll nought with him dwelle, But crepe into my purse ayein, Than dare I faufly fwere and fain, It is the vertue of the stone.

The morwe came, and he is gone To seche about in other stede
His stone to selle and so he dede
And lefte it with his chapman there.
But whan that he came elles where,
In presence of his wife at home,
Out of his purs and that he nome

His golde, he founde his stone withal. And thus it selle him overal, Where he it solde in sondrie place, Such was the fortune and the grace. But so well may nothing be hid, That it nis ate laste kid. This same goth aboute Rome So ferforth, that the wordes come To themperour Justinian, And he let sende for the man And axed him, how that it was.

And Bardus tolde all the cas, How that the worme and eke the beste, Al though they made no behefte, His travaile hadden well aquit. But he, which had a mannes wit And made his covenant by mouth And fwore therto all that he couth To parte and yive half his good, Hath now foryete how that it stood, As he, which wol no trouthe holde. This emperour al that he tolde Hath herde and thilke unkindenesse, He faid, he wolde him felf redresse. And thus in court of jugement This Adrian was than affent, And the quarell in audience Declared was in the presence Of themperour and many mo, Wherof was mochel speche tho

And great wondring among the press. But ate laste netheless,
For the partie, which hath pleigned,
The law hath demed and ordeigned
By hem, that were avised wele,
That he shal have the halven dele
Throughout of Adrianes good.
And thus of thilke unkinde blood
Stant the memoire unto this day,
Where that every wise man may
Ensamplen him and take in minde,
What shame it is to ben unkinde,
Ayein the which reson debateth
And every creature it hateth.

Confessor.

Forthy my sone, in thy office I rede slee that ilke vice.
For right as the cronique saith Of Adrian, how he his feith Foryat for worldes covetise, Ful oft in suche a maner wise Of lovers now a man may se Ful many, that unkinde be, For wel behote and evil last That is her life, for ate last, Whan that they have her wille do, Her love is sone after ago.
What saist thou, sone, to this cas?
My fader, I wil say helas,

Amans.

That ever such a man was bore, Which whan he hath his trouthe swore And hath of love what he wolde, That he at any time sholde Ever after in his herte finde To falsen and to ben unkinde.

But, fader, as touchend of me, I may nought stond in that degre. For I toke never of love why, That I ne may wel go therby And do my profite elles where. For any spede I finde there, I dare wel thenken all about. But I ne dare nought speke it out, And if I dorst, I wolde pleigne, That she, for whom I suffre peine And love her ever aliche hote, That nouther yive ne behote In rewarding of my fervice It list her in no maner wise. I wol nought fay, that she is kinde, And for to fay she is unkinde, That dare I nought by god above, Which demeth every herte of love, He wot, that on min owne fide Shall none unkindeship abide, If it shall with my lady dwelle, Therof dare I no more telle. Now, gode fader, as it is Tell me, what thenketh you of this? My fone, of that unkindship, The which toward thy ladisship,

Confessor.

Thou pleignest, for she woll the nought, Thou art to blamen of thy thought. For it may be, that thy defire, Though it brenne ever as doth the fire, Parcas to her honour misset. Or elles time come nought yet, Which stant upon thy destine. Forthy my fone, I rede the, Thenk well, what ever the befalle. For no man hath his lustes alle. But as thou toldest me before, That thou to love art nought forfwore And hast done non unkindenesse, Thou might therof thy grace bleffe And leve nought that continuance, For there may be no fuch grevance To love, as is unkindeship, Wherof to kepe thy worship, So as these olde bokes tale, I shall the telle a redy tale. Now herken and be ware therby, For I will telle it openly.

Hic ponit exemplum contra viros amori ingratos. Et narrat, qualiter Theseus Cad-Minos filie in domo, citur, Minotaurum ipfam una cum Fedra

Minos, as telleth the poete, The which whilom was king of Crete, mi filius confilio fuf- A fone had and Androchee fultus Adriagne regis He hight. And so befell that he que Labyrinthus di- Unto Athenes for to lere vicit, unde Theseus Was sent and so he bare him there, certiffime promittens For that he was of high lignage, forore sua a Creta Such pride he toke in his corage,

That he foryeten hath the scoles And in riot among the fooles He didde many thinges wronge And used thilke life so longe, Til ate last of that he wrought He found the mischese, which he sought, Wherof it fell, that he was flain. His fader, which it herde fain, Was wroth, and all that ever he might, Of men of armes he him dight A stronge power and forth he went Unto Athenes, where he brent The pleine contre al aboute. The cites stood of him in doubte. As they, that no defence had Ayein the power, which he lad. Egeus, which was there king, His counseil toke upon this thing, For he was than in the citee. So that of pees into tretee Betwene Minos and Egeus They fell and bene accorded thus, That king Minos fro yere to yere Receive shal as thou shalt here Out of Athenes for truage Of men, that were of mighty age, Persones nine, of which he shall His wille don in speciall For vengeaunce of his fones deth, None other grace there ne geth, fecum navigio duxit. Sed statim postea oblito gratitudinis beneficio Adriagnam ipfum falvantem in infula Chio spretam post tergum reliquie et Fedram Athenis sibi sponsatam ingratus coronavit.

But for to take the juise, And that was don in suche a wise, Upon which stood a wonder cas. For thilke time fo it was, Wherof that men yet rede and fing, King Minos had in his keping A cruel monster, as faith the gest. For he was half man and half beste, And Minotaurus he was hote, Which was begotten in a riot Upon Pasiphe, his owne wife, Whil he was out upon the strife Of thilke greate fiege at Troie. But she, which lost hath alle joie, Whan that she sigh this monster bore, Bad men ordeigne anon therfore, And fell that ilke time thus, There was a clerke one Dedalus. Which hadde ben of her affent. Of that her world was so miswent, And he made of his owne wit, Wherof the remembraunce is yit, For Minotaure fuche a hous, That was so stronge and merveilous, That what man that withinne went, There was so many a fondry went, That he ne shulde nought come out, But gone amased all about. And in this hous to locke and warde Was Minotaurus put in warde,

That what life, that therinne cam, Or man or beste, he overcam And flough and fed him therupon. And in this wife many one Out of Athenes for truage Devoured weren in that rage. For every yere they shopen hem so, They of Athenes er they go Toward that ilke wofull chaunce. As it was fet in ordenaunce, Upon fortune her lot they cast, Till that Theseus ate laste, Which was the kinges fone there, Amonges other that there were, In thilke yere, as it befell, The lot upon his chaunce fell. He was a worthy knight withall. And whan he figh his chaunce fall, He ferde, as though he toke none hede, But all that ever he might spede With him and with his felaship Forth into Crete he goth by ship, Where that the king Minos he fought And profreth all that he him ought Upon the point of her accorde. This sterne king, this cruel lorde Toke every day one of the nine And put him into the discipline Of Minotaure to be devoured. But Theseus was so favoured,

That he was kept till ate last, And in the meane while he cast. What thing him were best to do. And fell, that Adriagne tho, Which was the doughter of Minos, And hadde herd the worthy los Of Theseus and of his might And figh he was a lufty knight, Her hole herte on him she laide. And he also of love her praide So ferforth, that they were alone, And she ordeineth than anone, In what maner she shuld him save. And shope so, that she did him have A clue of threde, of which withinne First ate dore he shall beginne With him to take that one ende. That whan he wold ageinward wende He mighte go the same wey. And over this fo as I fay, Of pitch she toke him a pelote, The which he shulde into the throte Of Minotaure caste right. Such wepon also for him she dight, That he by reson may nought faile To make an ende of his bataile. For she him taught in sondry wise, Till he was knowe of thilke emprise,

How he this beste shulde quelle. And thus short tale for to telle, So as this maiden him had taught,
Theseus with this monster faught
And smote of his hede, the whiche he nam,
And by the thred, so as he cam,
He goth ayein, til he were out.
So was great wonder all about.
Minos the tribute hath relesed,
And so was all the were cesed
Betwene Athenes and hem of Crete.

But now to speke of thilke swete, Whose beaute was withoute wan, This faire maiden Adriane, Whan that she figh Theseus sounde, Was never yet upon this grounde A gladder wight than she was tho. Theseus dwelt a day or two, Where that Minos great chere him ded. Theseus in a prive sted Hath with this maiden spoke and rouned, That she to him was abandouned In al that ever that she couth, So that of thilke lufty youth All prively betwene hem twey The firste floure he toke awey. For he fo faire tho behight, That ever while he live might He shuld her take for his wife And as his owne hertes life He wolde her love and trouthe bere. And she, which mighte nought forbere,

So fore loveth him ayein, That what as ever he wold fain With all her herte she beleveth. And thus his purpos he acheveth, So that affured of his trouthe With him she went, and that was routhe. Fedra her yonge suster eke, A lusty maide, a sobre, a meke, Fulfilled of all curtefie. For fusterhode and compaignie Of love, which was hem betwene, To fen her fuster made a quene Her fader lefte and forth she went With him, which all his first entent Foryat within a litel throwe, So that it was all over throwe. Whan she best wend it shulde stonde. The ship was blowe fro the londe, Wherinne that they failend were. This Adriagne had mochel fere, Of that the wind fo loude blewe, As she, which of the see ne knewe, And praide for to reste a while. And so fell, that upon an ile, Which Chio highte, they ben drive, Where he to her leve hath yive, That she shall lond and take her rest.

But that was nothing for her best. For whan she was to londe brought, She, which that time thoughte nought

But alle trouth and toke no kepe, Hath laid her softe for to slepe, As she, which longe hath ben forwacched. But certes she was evil macched And fer from alle loves kinde. For more than the beste unkinde Theseus, which no trouthe kept, While that this yonge lady slept, Fulfilled of all unkindeship Hath all foryeten the godeship, Whiche Adriagne him hadde do, And bad unto the shipmen tho Hale up the faile and nought abide, And forth he goth the same tide Towarde Athenes, and her on londe He lefte, which lay nigh the stronde Slepend, til that she awoke. But whan that she cast up her loke Toward the stronde and figh no wight, Her herte was fo fore aflight, That she ne wiste what to thinke, But drough her to the water brinke, Where she beheld the see at large. She figh no ship, she figh no barge Als ferforth as she mighte kenne. Ha lord, she saide, which a senne, As all the world shall after here. Upon this wofull woman here This worthy knight hath done and wrought, I wend I had his love bought,

And so deserved ate nede, Whan that he stood upon his drede, And eke the love he me behight. It is great wonder, how he might Towardes me now ben unkinde, And so to let out of his minde Thing, which he faid his owne mouth. But after this, whan it is couth And drawe into the worldes fame, It shall ben hindring of his name. For well he wote and so wote I, He yafe his trouthe bodily, That he min honour shulde kepe. And with that word she gan to wepe And forweth more than inough. Her faire treffes she to-drough And with her felf toke fuch a strife, That she between the deth and life Swounende lay full oft amonge. And all was this on him alonge, Which was to love unkinde fo. Wherof the wrong shall evermo Stond in cronique of remembraunce, And eke it axeth a vengeaunce To ben unkinde in loves cas. So as Thefeus thanne was, All though he were a noble knight. For he the lawe of loves right Forfeited hath in alle way, That Adriagne he put away,

Which was a great unkinde dede.
And after this, so as I rede,
Fedra, the which her suster is,
He toke in stede of her, and this
Fell afterward to mochel tene,
For thilke vice, of whiche I mene,
Unkindeship where it falleth,
The trouthe of mannes hert it palleth,
That he can no good dede acquite,
So may he stonde of no merite
Towardes god and eke also
Men clepen him the worldes so.
For he no more than the sende
Unto none other man is frende,
But all toward him self alone.

Forthy my fone, in thy persone This vice above all other sle.

My fader, as ye techen me, I thenke don in this matere. But over this now wold I here, Wherof I shall me shrive more.

My gode fone, as for thy lore, After the reule of covetife, I shall the proprete devise Of every vice by and by. Now herken and be wel ware therby.

Viribus ex clara res tollit luce rapina, Floris et in vita virgini mella capit.

In the lignage of avarice, My fone, yet there is a vice, Amans.

Hic tractat super illa specie cupida, que rapina nuncu-

patur, cuius mater extorcio ipsam ad deserviendum magnatum curiis specialius mendavit.

His righte name it is ravine, Which hath a route of his covine. Ravine among the maisters dwelleth, And with his fervants as men telleth Extorcion is now witholde. Ravine of other mennes folde Maketh his larder and paieth nought. For where as ever it may be fought, In his hous there shall no thing lacke, And that ful ofte abieth the packe Of pouer men, that dwelle aboute. Thus stant the comune people in doubte, Which can do none amendement. For whan him faileth paiement, Ravine maketh non other skille, But taketh by strength al that he wille. So ben there in the same wife Lovers, as I the shall devise, That whan nought elles may availe, Anone with strengthe they affaile And get of love the sessine, Whan they fe time by ravine. Forthy my fone, shrive the here,

Confessor.

If thou hast ben a ravinere

Amans.

Of love. Certes fader no. For I my lady love fo. For though I were as was Pompey, That all the world me wolde obey, Or elles such as Alisaundre, I wolde nought do fuche a sclaunder. It is no good man, which so doth.

In gode feith, sone, thou saist soth. For he that woll of purveance By fuch a wey his lust avance He shall it after fore abie,

But if these olde ensamples lie.

Confessor.

Now, gode fader, tell me one, So as ye connen many one, Touchend of love in this matere.

Amans.

Now lift, my fone, and thou shalt here, Confessor. So as it hath befall er this In loves cause how that it is A man to take by ravine The preie, which is feminine.

There was a roial noble kinge, A riche of alle worldes thinge, Which of his propre enheritaunce Athenes had in governaunce, And who fo thenke therupon, His name was king Pandion. Two doughters had he by his wife, The which he loved as his life. The first doughter Progne hight, And the feconde, as she well might, Was cleped faire Philomene, To whom fell after mochel tene. The fader of his purveance His doughter Progne wolde avance, And yafe her unto mariage A worthy king of high lignage,

Hic ponit exemplum contra istos in amoris causa raptores et narrat, qualiter Pandion rex Athenarum duas filias, videlicet Prognem et Philomenam habuit. Progne autem Tereo regi Tracie desponsata contigit, quod cum Tereus, ad instanciam uxoris fue Philomenam de Athenis in Traciam fororie visitacionis causa secum quadam vice perduceret, in concupif-cenciam Philomene tanta severitate in itinere dilapfus est, quod ipse non solum sue violencia rapine vir-ginitatem eius op-pressit, sed et ipsius linguam, ne factum detegeret, forcipe mutulavit, unde in perpetue memorie croni-

cam tanti raptoris A noble knight eke of his honde, dine dii postea vindi. So was he kid in every londe. Of Trace he hight Tereus, The clerke Ovide telleth thus. This Tereus his wife home lad. A lusty life with her he had, Till it befell upon a tide, This Progne, as she lay him beside, Bethought her, how it mighte be, That she her suster mighte se, And to her lorde her will she saide With goodly wordes and him praide, That she to her mighte go. And if it liked him nought fo, That than he wolde him felve wende Or elles by some other sende, Which might her dere fuster grete And shape, how that they mighten mete. Her lorde anone to that he herde Yaf his accorde and thus answerde: I woll, he saide, for thy sake, The wey after thy fuster take My felf and bring her, if I may. And she with that, there as she lay, Began him in her armes clippe And kift him with her fofte lippe And faide: Sire, graunt mercy. And he fone after was redy And toke his leve for to go. In fory time did he fo.

This Tereus goth forth to shippe With him and his felashippe. By fea the righte cours he nam Unto the contre till he cam. Where Philomene was dwelling, And of her fuster the tiding He tolde, and tho they weren glad And mochel joie of him they made. The fader and the moder bothe To leve her doughter were lothe, But if they were in presence, And netheles at reverence Of him that wolde him felf travaile. They wolde nought he shulde faile, And that they praide yive her leve. And she that wolde nought beleve In alle haste made her yare Toward her fuster for to fare With Tereus, and forth she went. And he with al his hole entent, Whan she was fro her frendes go, Afforeth of her love fo, That his eye might he nought witholde, That he ne must on her beholde, And with the fight he gan defire And fet his owne hert a fire. And fire, whan it to tow approcheth, To him anon the strength accrocheth, Till with his hete it be devoured, The tow ne may nought be foccoured.

And so the tirann raviner, Whan that she was in his power, And he therto figh time and place, As he, that loft hath all his grace, Foryate, he was a wedded man, And in a rage on her he ran Right as a wolf, that taketh his pray. And she began to crie and pray: O fader, o moder dere, Now help, but they ne might it here, And she was of to litel might Defence ayein fo rude a knight To make, whan he was fo wode, That he no reson understode, But helde her under in such wise, That she ne mighte nought arise, But lay oppressed and disesed, As if a goshawk hadde seised A brid, which durste nought for fere Remue. And thus this tirant there Beraft her fuch thing, as men fain, May never more be yolde ayein, And that was the virginite, Of fuch ravine it was pite. But whan she to her selve come And of her mischese hede nome And knewe, how that she was no maide, With wofull herte thus she saide: O thou of alle men the worst. Where was there ever man that dorst

Do fuch a dede, as thou hast do? That day shall falle, I hope so, That I shall tell out all my fille And with my speche I shall fulfille The wide worlde in brede and length, That thou hast do to me by strength, If I among the people dwelle, Unto the people I shall it telle. And if I be withinne wall Of stones closed, than I shall Unto the stones clepe and crie, And tellen hem thy felonie. And if I to the wodes wende, There shall I telle tale and ende. And crie it to the briddes out, That they shall here it all about. For I so loude it shall reherce. That my vois shall the heven perce, That it shall soune in goddes ere. Ha false man, where is thy fere? O more cruel than any beste, How hast thou holden thy behest, Which thou unto my fuster madest? O thou, which alle love ungladest And art ensample of all untrewe, Now wolde god my fuster knewe Of thin untrouthe, how that it stood. And he than as a leon wode With his unhappy hondes strong He caught her by the treffes long,

With whiche he bonde both her armes, That was a feble dede of armes. And to the grounde anone her cast, And out he clippeth also fast Her tunge with a paire of sheres. So what with blode, and what with teres Out of her eyen and of her mouth He made her faire face uncouth, She lay fwounend unto the dethe, There was unnethes any brethe. But yet whan he her tunge refte, A litel part therof he lefte. But she withall no word may soune But chitre and as a brid jargoune. And netheles that wode hounde Her body hent up fro the grounde And fent her there, as by his will She shulde abide in prison still For ever mo. But now take hede. What after fell of this misdede. Whan all this mischese was befalle, This Tereus, that foule him falle, Unto his contre home he tigh. And whan he cam his paleis nigh, His wife alredy there him kept. Whan he her figh, anon he wept, And that he dide for deceipt, For the began to axe him streit: Where is my fuster? And he saide, That she was dede, and Progne abraide,

As she, that was a wofull wife, And stood betwene her deth and life, Because she herde such tiding. But for she figh her lord weping, She wende nought but alle trouth And hadde wel the more routh. The perles were tho forfake To her and blacke clothes take, As she that was gentil and kinde, In worship of her sufters minde She made a riche enterement, For the found none amendement To fighen or to fobbe more, So was there guile under the gore. Now leve we this king and quene, And torne ayein to Philomene. As I began to tellen erst, Whan she cam into prison ferst, It thought a kinges doughter straunge To make fo fodein a chaunge Fro welth unto fo great a wo. And she began to thenke tho, Though she by mouthe nothing praide, Within her herte thus she saide:

O thou, almighty Jupiter, That highe fittest and lokest fer, Thou suffrest many a wrong doing, And yet it is nought thy willing. To the there may nothing ben hid, Thou wost, how it is me betid.

I wolde I hadde nought be bore. For than I hadde nought forlore My speche and my virginite. But gode lord, all is in the, Whan thou therof wolt do vengeaunce And shape my deliveraunce. And ever among this lady wepte And thought that she never kepte To be a worldes woman more, And that she wissheth evermore. But ofte unto her suster dere Her herte speketh in this manere And faide: Ha fuster, if ye knewe Of min estate, ye wolde rewe, I trowe, and my deliveraunce Ye wolde shape and do vengeaunce On him, that is fo fals a man. And netheles, fo as I can, I woll you fend fome tokening, Wherof ye shall have knouleching Of thing I wot that shall you loth, The which you toucheth and me both. And tho within a while als tite She wafe a cloth of filke all white With letters and ymagery, In which was all the felony, Which Tereus to her hath do, And lapped it to-gider tho And fet her fignet therupon And fent it unto Progne anon.

The messager, which forth it bare, What it amounteth is nought ware, And netheles to Progne he goth And prively taketh her the cloth And went ayein right as he cam, The court of him none hede name.

Whan Progne of Philomene herde, She wolde knowe how that it ferde And openeth that the man hath brought And wot therby, what hath be wrought And what mischese there is befalle. In fwoune tho she gan down falle And efte arose and gan to stonde And eft she taketh the clothe on honde, Beheld the letters and thymages, But ate last of suche oultrages She faid: Weping is nought the bote, And fwereth, if that she live mote, It shall be venged other wife. And with that she gan her avise, How first she might unto her winne Her fuster, that no man withinne But only they, that were fwore, It shulde knowe, and shope therfore, That Tereus nothing it wist, And yet right as her selven list, Her fuster was delivered sone Out of prison, and by the mone To Progne she was brought by night. Whan eche of other had a fight

In chambre there they were alone, They maden many a pitous mone. But Progne most of sorwe made, Which figh her fuster pale and fade And specheles and deshonoured Of that she hadde be defloured, And eke upon her lord she thought Of that he fo untruely wrought And had his espousaile broke, She maketh a vow it shall be wroke. And with that word she kneleth down Weping in great devocion, Unto Cupide and to Venus She praid and faide thanne thus: O ye, to whom no thing afterte Of love may, for every herte Ye knowe, as ye that ben above The god and the goddesse of love, Ye witen well, that ever yit With al min herte and all my wit Sith first ye shopen me to wedde, That I lay with my lord a-bedde, I have ben trewe in my degre And ever thoughte for to be And never love in other place, But all only the king of Trace, Whiche is my lord and I his wife. But now alas this wofull strife, That I him thus ageinward finde The most untrewe and most unkinde,

That ever in ladies armes lay, And wel I wot that he ne may Amend his wronge, it is so great, For he to litel of me lete, Whan he min owne sufter toke And me that am his wife forsoke.

Lo, thus to Venus and Cupide She praid, and furthermore she cride Unto Apollo the highest And faid: O mighty god of rest, Thou do vengeaunce of this debate, My fuster and all her estate Thou wost, and how she hath forlore Her maidenhede, and I therfore In all the world shall bere a blame Of that my fuster hath a shame, That Tereus to her I fent. And well thou wost, that min entent Was all for worship and for good. O lord, that yivest the lives food To every wight, I pray the here These wofull susters, that ben here, And let us nought to the ben loth, We ben thin owne women both. Thus pleigneth Progne and axeth wreche, And though her fuster lacke speche, To him, that alle thinges wote Her forwe is nought the lasse hote. But he, that thanne herd hem two, Him ought have forwed evermo

For forwe, which was hem betwene. With fignes pleigneth Philomene, And Progne faith: It shal be wreke, That all the world therof shall speke. And Progne the fikenesse feigned, Wherof unto her lord she pleigned And preith, she mote her chambre kepe And as her liketh wake and slepe. And he her graunteth to be fo. And thus to-gider ben they two, That wold him but a litel good. Now herke hereafter, how it stood Of wofull auntres that befelle. These susters, that ben bothe felle, And that was nought on hem alonge But only on the greate wronge, Which Tereus hem hadde do, They shopen for to venge hem tho. This Tereus by Progne his wife A fone hath, which as his life He loveth, and Ithis he hight. His moder wifte well she might Do Tereus no more greve Than flee his child, which was fo leve. Thus she that was as who saith mad Of wo, which hath her overlad, Without infight of moderhede Foryat pite and loste drede And in her chambre prively This childe without noise or cry

She flough and hewe him all to pieces. And after with diverse spieces The flessh, whan it was so to-hewe, She taketh and maketh therof a fewe, With which the fader at his mete Was ferved, till he had him ete, That he ne wist, how that it stood. But thus his owne flessh and blood Him felf devoureth ayeine kinde, As he that was to-fore unkinde. And than er that he were arise, For that he shulde bene agrise To shewen him the child was dede, This Philomene toke the hede Betwene two disshes, and all wrothe Tho camen forth the fusters bothe And fetten it upon the bord. And Progne than began the word And faide: O werst of alle wicke, Of conscience whom no pricke May stere, lo, what thou hast do, Lo, here ben now we fusters two. O raviner, lo here thy prey, With whom fo falflich on the wey Thou hast thy tirannie wrought, Lo, now it is fomedele abought And bet it shall, for of thy dede The world shall ever fing and rede In remembraunce of thy defame, For thou to love hast done such shame,

That it shall never be foryete. With that he sterte up fro the mete And shove the bord into the flore And caught a fwerd anone and fwore, That they shulde of his hondes deie. And they unto the goddes crie Begunne with fo loude a steven, That they were herde unto heven, And in the twinkeling of an eye The goddes, that the mischese sigh, Her formes chaunged alle thre, Echone of hem in his degre Was torned into a briddes kinde Diverselich as men may finde. After thestate that they were inne Her formes were fet a twinne. And as it telleth in the tale The first into a nightingale Was shape, and that was Philomene, Which in the winter is nought sene, For thanne ben the leves falle And naked ben the busshes alle. For after that she was a brid Her will was ever to ben hid And for to dwelle in prive place, That no man shulde sen her face For shame, which may nought ben lassed Of thing that was to-fore passed, Whan that she lost her maidenhede. For ever upon her womanhede,

Though that the goddes wold her chaunge, She thenketh, and is the more straunge And halt her clos the winter day. But whan the winter goth away And that nature the goddeffe Woll of her owne fre largesse With herbes and with floures both The feldes and the medewes cloth, And eke the wodes and the greves Ben heled all with grene leves, So that a brid her hide may Betwene March, Aprille and May, She that the winter held her clos For pure shame and nought aros, Whan that she figh the bowes thicke And that there is no bare sticke But all is hid with leves grene, To wode cometh this Philomene And maketh her first yeres slight, Where as she singeth day and night, And in her fong all openly She maketh her pleint and faith: O why, O why ne were I yet a maide? For so these olde wise saide, Which understoden what she ment. Her notes ben of suche entent. And eke they faid, how in her fonge She maketh great joy and merth amonge And faith: Ha, now I am a brid, Ha, now my face may ben hid,

Though I have lost my maidenhede, Shall no man se my chekes rede. Thus medleth she with joie wo And with her sorwe merth also, So that of loves maladie She maketh divers melodie And saith: Love is a wofull blisse, A wisdom, which can no man wisse, A lusty sever, a wounde softe. This note she reherseth ofte To hem, which understonde her tale.

Now have I of this nightingale, Which erst was cleped Philomene, Told all that ever wolde mene. Both of her forme and of her note, Wherof men may the story note. And of her fuster Progne I finde, How she was torned out of kinde Into a swalwe swift of wing, Which eke in winter lith fwouning There as she may no thing be sene, But whan the world is woxe grene And comen is the former tide. Than fleeth she forth and ginneth to chide And chitereth out in her langage, What falshede is in mariage, And telleth in a maner speche Of Tereus the spouse breche. She wol nought in the wodes dwelle, For she wold openliche telle,

And eke for that she was a spouse Among the folk she cometh to house To do these wives understonde The falshode of her husbonde, That they of hem beware also, For there be many untrewe of tho.

Thus ben the fusters briddes both And ben toward the men so loth, That they ne woll for pure shame Unto no mannes hond be tame, For ever it dwelleth in her minde Of that they found a man unkinde, And that was false Tereus. If fuche one be amonge us, I not, but his condition Men fay in every region Withinne town and eke without Now regneth comunlich about. And netheles in remembraunce I woll declare, what vengeaunce The goddes hadden him ordeigned, Of that the fusters hadden pleigned. For anone after he was chaunged And from his owne kinde straunged, A lappewinke made he was And thus he hoppeth on the gras, And on his heed there stont upright A crest in token of a knight, And yet unto this day, men faith, A lappewinke hath lost his feith

And is the brid falsest of alle.

Beware, my fone, er the so falle, Confessor. For if thou be of fuch covine To get of love by ravine Thy lust, it may the falle thus, As it befell of Tereus.

Amans.

My fader, goddes forbode, Me were lever be fortrode With wilde hors and be to-drawe, Er I ayein love and his lawe Did any thing or loude or still, Which were nought my ladies will. Men faien, that every love hath drede, So folweth it, that I her drede, For I her love, and who so dredeth To plese his love and serve him nedeth. Thus may ye knowen by this skill, That no ravine done I will Ayein her will by such a wey. But while I live, I will obey Abiding on her courtefie, If any mercy wolde her plie.

Forthy my fader, as of this I wot nought I have do amis. But furthermore I you beseche, Some other point that ye me teche, And axeth forth if there be ought, That I may be the better taught.

Vivat ut ex spoliis grandi quam sepe tumultu, Quo graditur populus, latro perurget iter.

Sic amor ex casu poterit quo carpere predam, Si locus est aptus, cetera nulla timet.

Whan covetife in pouer estate Stont with him felf upon debate Through lacke of his mifgovernaunce, That he unto his fustenaunce Ne can non other waie finde To get him good, than as the blinde, Which feeth nought what shal after fall, That ilke vice, which men call Of robbery, he taketh on honde, Wherof by water and by londe Of thing, which other men beswinke He get him cloth and mete and drinke, Him reccheth nought, what he beginne Through thefte, fo that he may winne. Forthy to maken his purchas He lith awaitend on the pas, And what thing that he feeth ther passe He taketh his parte or more or lasse, If it be worthy to be take He can the packes well ransake. So prively bereth none about His gold, that he ne fint it out, Or other juell what it be He taketh it as his proprete In wodes and in feldes eke. Thus robberie goth to feke, Where as he may his purchas finde. And right so in the same kinde

Hic loquitur fuper illa cupiditatis specie, quam furtum vocant, cuius ministri alicuius legis offensam non metuentes tam in amoris causa quam aliter suam quam sepe conscienciam offendunt.

My gode fone, as thou might here, To speke of love in the matere And make a verray resemblance Right as a thefe maketh his chevefance And robbeth mennes goodes about In wode and felde, where he goth out, So be there of these lovers some In wilde stedes where they come And finden there a woman able And therto place covenable, Withoute leve er that they fare They take a parte of that chaffare. Ye, though she were a shepherdesse Yet woll the lorde of wantonnesse Affay, all though she be unmete. For other mennes good is fwete. But therof wot nothing the wife At home, which loveth as her life Her lord and fit all day wisshing After her lordes home coming. But whan he cometh home at eve, Anone he maketh his wife beleve. For the nought elles shulde knowe He telleth her, how his hunt hath blowe, And howe his houndes have well ronne, And how there shone a mery sonne, And how his hawkes flowen wele. But he wol telle her never a dele, How he to love untrewe was Of that he robbed in the pas

And toke his lust under the shawe Ayein love and ayein his lawe.

Accordend unto this matere.

Which thing, my sone, I the forbede,
For it is an ungoodly dede.
For who that taketh by robberie
His love, he may nought justifie
His cause, and so ful ofte sithe
For ones that he hath ben blithe
He shall ben after sory thries.
Ensamples for such robberies
I finde write as thou shalt here

I rede, how whilom was a maide The fairest, as Ovide saide, Which was in her time tho. And she was of the chambre also Of Pallas, which is the goddesse And wife to Marte, of whom prowesse Is yove to these worthy knightes, For he is of fo greate mightes, That he governeth the bataile, Withouten him may nought availe The stronge hond, but he it helpe, There may no knight of armes yelpe, But he fight under his banere. But now to speke of my matere This faire, fresshe, lusty may Alone as she went on a day Upon the stronde for to play, There came Neptunus in the way,

Hic loquitur contra istos in amoris causa predones, qui cum fuam furtive concupiscenciam aspirant, fortuna in contrarium operatur, et narrat, quod cum Neptunus quandam virginem nomine Cornicem folam juxta mare deambulantem opprimere suo furto voluisset, superveniens Pallas ipsam e manibus eius virginitate servata gracius liberavit.

Which hath the fee in governaunce, And in his herte fuch plefaunce He toke, whan he this maiden figh, That all his hert aros on high. For he fo fodeinlich unware Beheld the beaute, that she bare, And cast anone within his hert. That she him shall no way aftert, But if he take in avauntage Fro thilke maide fome pilage, Nought of the broches ne the ringes, But of some other smale thinges He thoughte parte, er that he went, And her in bothe his armes hent And put his hond toward the cofre, Wherefor to robbe he made a profre That lufty trefor for to stele, Which paffeth other goodes fele And cleped is the maidenheed, Which is the flour of womanheed. This maiden which Cornix by name Was hote, dredend alle shame, Sigh, that she mighte nought debate, And well she wist, he wolde algate Fulfill his lust of robberie. Anone began to wepe and crie And faid: O Pallas noble quene, Shew now thy might and let be fene To kepe and fave min honour, Help, that I lese nought my flour,

Which now under thy key is loke. That word was nought fo fone spoke, Whan Pallas shope recoverir After the will and the defire Of her, which a maiden was, And fodeinlich upon this cas Out of her womanishe kinde Into a briddes like I finde She was transformed forth withall. So that Neptunus nothing stal Of fuch thing that he wolde have stole. With fethers blacke as any cole Out of his armes in a throwe She fleigh before his eyen a crowe, Which was to her a more delite To kepe her maidenhede white Under the wede of fethers blacke, In perles white than forfake That no life may restore ayein. But thus Neptune his hert in vein Hath upon robberie set. The brid is flowe, and he was let, The faire maid him hath escaped, Wherof for ever he was bejaped And scorned of that he hath lore.

My fone, be thou ware therfore, That thou no maidenhede stele, Wherof men see diseses fele, So as I shall the yet devise Another tale therupon, Which fell by olde daies gone.

Hic ponit exemplum contra istos in causa virginitatis lese predones, et narrat, quod cum Calisto regis Lichaontis mire pulcritudinis filia fuam virginitatem Diane conservandam castissima vovisset et in silvam, que Tegea dicitur, inter alias ibidem nymphas moraturam se transtulisset, Jupiter virginis castitatem subtili furto surripiens, quendam filium, qui postea Archas nominatus est, ex ea genuit, unde Juno in Calistonam feviens eius pulcritudinem in urse turpissime deformitatem subito transfiguravit.

King Lichaon upon his wife A doughter had, a goodly life And clene maide of worthy fame, Calistona whose righte name Was cleped, and of many a lorde She was befought, but her accorde To love mighte no man winne, As she, whiche hath no lust therinne, But fwore within her hert and faide, That she woll ever ben a maide. Wherfore to kepe her felfe in pees With fuche, as Amadriades Were cleped wodemaidens tho, And with the nimphes eke also Upon the spring of fresshe welles She shope to dwelle and no where elles. And thus came this Calistona Into the wode of Tegea, Where she virginite behight Unto Diane, and therto plight Her trouth upon the bowes grene To kepe her maidenhede clene, Which afterward upon a day Was priveliche stole away. For Jupiter through his queintife From her it toke in suche a wise, That fodeinliche forth withall Her wombe arose and she to-swall, So that it mighte nought be hid. And therupon it is betid,

Diane, whiche it herde tell, In prive place unto a welle With nimphes al a compaigny Was come and in a ragery She faide, that she bathe wolde, And bad that every maiden sholde With her all naked bath also. And the began the prive wo, Calistona wax red for shame, But they that knewe nought the game, To whom no fuch thing was befalle, Anone they made hem naked alle, As they nothinge wolden hide. But she withdrewe her ever aside And netheles into the flood, Where that Diane her felve stood, She thought to come unapperceived. But therof she was all deceived. For whan she came a litel nigh, And that Diane her wombe figh, She faid: Away, thou foule beste, For thin estate is nought honest This chaste water for to touche, For thou hast take suche a couche. Which never may ben hole ayein. And thus goth she, which was forlein, With shame, and the nimphes fledde, Till whanne that nature her spedde, That of a fone, which Archas Was named, she delivered was.

And tho Juno, which was the wife Of Jupiter, wrothe and hastife In purpose for to do vengeaunce, Came forth upon this ilke chaunce, And to Calistona she spake And fet upon her many a lacke And faid: Ha, now thou art atake, That thou thy werk might nought forfake. Ha, thou ungoodly ypocrite, How thou art greatly for to wite. But now thou shalt full fore abie That ilke stellhe of micherie. Which thou hast bothe take and do. Wherof thy fader Lichao Shall nought be glad, whan he it wote, Of that his doughter was so hote, That she hath broken her chaste vow. But I the shall chastise now, Thy grete beaute shall be torned, Through which that thou hast be mistorned, Thy large front, thy eyen gray I shall hem chaunge in other way, And all the feture of thy face In fuch a wife I shall deface, That every man the shall forbere. With that the likenesse of a bere She toke and was forshape anone. Within a time and therupon Befell, that with a bow in honde To hunte and game for to fonde

Into that wode goth to play Her fone Archas, and in his way It hapneth that this bere came. And whan that he good hede name, Where that he stood under the bough, She knewe him well and to him drough, For though she had her forme lore, The love was nought lost therfore, Which kinde hath fet under his lawe. Whan she under the wode shawe Her child beheld, she was so glad, That she with both her armes sprad, As though she were in womanhede Toward him come, and toke none hede Of that he bare a bow bent. And he with that an arwe hath hent And gan to teife it in his bowe, As he, that can none other knowe, But that it was a beste wilde. But Jupiter, which wolde shilde The moder and the fone also, Ordeineth for hem bothe two. That they for ever were fave.

But thus, my fone, thou might have Ensample, how that it is to flee To robbe the virginite Of a yonge innocent awey. And over this by other wey In olde bokes as I rede, Such robberie is for to drede,

And namelich of thilke good, Whiche every woman that is good Defireth for to kepe and holde, As whilom was by daies olde. For if thou here my tale wele Of that was tho, thou might fomdele Of olde ensamples taken hede, How that the floure of maidenhede Was thilke time holde in pris. And so it was, and so it is, And so it shall for ever stonde, And for thou shalt it understonde. Now herken a tale next fuend. How maidenhede is to commend.

Ut rosa de spinis spineto prevalet orta, 10. Et lilii flores cespite plura valent, Sic sibi virginitas carnis sponsalia vincit, Eternos fetus que sine labe parit.

Hic loquitur de virginitatis comdicit, quod nuper imperatores tanti status dignitatem virginibus cedebant in via.

Of Rome among the gestes olde mendacione, ubi I find, how that Valery tolde, That what man tho was emperour Of Rome, he sholde done honour To the virgin and in the wey, Where he her mete, he shulde obey In worship of virginite, Which tho was a great dignite, Nought onlich of the women tho, But of the chafte men also It was commended over all. And for to speke in speciall

Touchend of men ensample I finde.

Phirinus, which was of mannes kinde Above all other the fairest Of Rome and eke the comeliest, That well was her, which him might Beholde and have of him a sight. Thus was he tempted ofte fore, But for he wolde be no more Among the women so coveited, The beaute of his face streited He hath, and thrust out both his eyen, That alle women, whiche it sein Than afterwarde of him ne rought. And thus his maidenhede he bought.

So may I prove wel forthy
Above all other under the sky,
Who that the vertues wolde peise,
Virginite is for to preise,
Which, as thapocalips recordeth,
To Criste in heven best accordeth.
So may it shewe well therfore,
As I have tolde it here to-fore,
In heven and eke in erth also
It is accept to bothe two.
[Out of his slesshe a man to live*
Gregoire hath this ensample yive
And saith: It shall rather be told

Hic loquitur, qualiter Phirinus, juvenum Rome pulcherrimus, ut illefam fuam virginitatem conservaret, ambos oculos eruens vultus sui decorem abhominabilem constituit.

Than to the life of mannes kinde, There is no reson for to finde. But only through the grace above, In flesshe without flesshly love A man to live chaste here. And netheles a man may here Of fuche, that have ben er this, And yet there ben, but for it is A vertue, which is felde wonne, Now I this matter have begonne I thenke tellen over more, Which is, my fone, for thy lore, If that the lift to taken hede To trete upon the maidenhede. The boke faith that a mannes life Upon knighthode in werre and strife Is fet among his enemies, The freile flessh, whose nature is Ay redy for to sporne and fall, The firste foman is of all. For thilke werre is redy ay, It werreth night, it werreth day, So that a man hath never rest. Forthy is thilke knight the best Through might and grace of goddess sonde, Which that bataile may withstonde, Wherof yet dwelleth the memoire Of hem, that whilome the victoire Of thilke dedly werre hadden, The high prowesse, which they ladden,

An emperour by olde daies There was, and he at all affaies A worthy knight was of his honde, There was none fuch in all the londe. But yet for all his vaffellage He stood unwedded all his age, And in cronique as it is tolde He was an hundred winter olde.] And if I shall more over this Declare what this vertue is. I finde write upon this thing Of Valentinian the king And emperour be thilke daies, A worthy knight at alle affaies, How he withoute mariage Was of an hundred winter age And hadde ben a worthy knight Both of his lawe and of his might. But whan men wolde his dedes peise And of his knighthode of armes preise, Of that he dide with his hondes. Whan he the kinges and the londes To his subjection put under, Of all that prife hath he no wonder, For he it fet of none accompte And faid, all that may nought amounte Ayein a point, whiche he hath nome, That he his flessh hath overcome.

Hic loquitur, qualiter Valentinianus imperator,cum ipse octogenarius plures provincias Romano imperio belliger subjugasset, dixit fe fuper omnia magis gaudere de eo, quod contra fue carnis concupifcenciam victoriam optinuisset, nam et ipse virgo omnibus diebus vite fue castissimus perman-

Lo now, my fone, avise the.

Ye, fader, all this may well be. But if all other dide fo,
The world of men were fone ago,
And in the lawe a man may finde,
How god to man by wey of kinde
Hath fet the world to multiply.
And who that woll him justify,
It is inough to do the lawe.
And netheles your gode fawe
Is good to kepe, who fo may,
I woll nought there ayein fay nay.

Confessor.

My fone, take it as I say, If maidenhed be take away Withoute lawes ordenaunce, It may nought failen of vengeaunce.

And if thou wolt the fothe wite, Behold a tale, which is write, How that the king Agamenon, Whan he the citee of Lesbon Hath won, a maiden there he fonde, Which was the fairest of the londe In thilke time, that men wist. He toke of her what him list Of thing which was most precious, Wherof that she was daungerous. This faire maiden cleped is Criseid, the doughter of Crise,

Which was that time speciall
Of thilke temple principall,
Where Phebus had his facrifice,
So was it well the more vice.
Agamenon was than in way
To Troie ward and toke awey
This maiden, whiche he with him lad,
So greate lust in her he had.

But Phebus, which hath great disdein Of that his maiden was forlein, Anone as he to Troie came. Vengeaunce upon this dede he name And fend a comune pestilence. They foughten than her evidence And maden calculation, To knowe in what condicion This deth cam in fo fodeinly, And ate laste redely The cause and eke the man they founde, And forth with al the same stounde Agamenon opposed was, Whiche hath beknowen all the cas Of the folie, which he wrought. And therupon mercy they fought Toward the god in fondry wife With praier and with facrifice, The maiden home agein they fende And yaf her good inough to spende, For ever whiles she shulde live, And thus the finne was for vive

And all the pestilence cesed.

Lo, what it is to ben encresed Of love, whiche is evil wonne. It were better nought begonne Than take a thing withoute leve, Which thou must after nedes leve, And yet have malgre forth with all. Forthy to robben over all In loves cause if thou beginne, I not what ese thou shalt winne. My fone, be well ware of this, For thus of robbery it is.

Amans.

My fader, your ensamplarie In loves cause of robberie I have it right well understonde. But over this how so it stonde, Yet wol I wite of your apprise, What thing is more of covetife.

Insidiando latens tempus rimatur et horam II. Fur, quibus occulto tempore furta parat. Sic amor insidiis vacat, ut sub tegmine ludos Prendere furtivos nocte favente queat.

Hic tractat super illa cupiditatis specie, que secretum latrocinium dicitur, cuius natura custode rerum nesciente ea, que cupit, tam per diem quam per noctem absque strepitu furatur.

With covetife yet I finde A fervaunt of the same kinde. Which stelth is hote and micherie With him is ever in compaignie. Of whom if I shall telle soth clanculo He stalketh as a pecock doth And taketh his preie so coverte, That no man wote it in aperte.

For whan he wot the lord from home, Than woll he stalke about and come, And what thing he fint in his wey, Whan that he feeth the men awey, He steleth it and goth forth withall, That therof no man knowe shall. And eke full ofte he goth anight Withoute mone or sterre light And with his craft the dore unpiketh And taketh therinne what him liketh. And if the dore be so shet. That he be of his entre let. He woll in ate window crepe, And while the lord is fast aslepe, He steleth what thing him best list, And goth his wey er it be wist. Full ofte also by light of day Yet woll he stele and make assay, Under the cote his honde he put, Till he the mannes purs have kut And rifleth that he fint therinne. And thus he auntreth him to winne And bereth an horn and nought ne bloweth, For no man of his counfeil knoweth, What he may get of his miching, It is all bile under the wing. And as an hound that goth to folde And hath there take what he wolde His mouth upon the gras he wipeth, And so with feigned chere him slipeth,

That what as ever of shepe he strangle, There is no man therof shall jangle, And for to knowen who it dede. Right fo doth stellhe in every stede, Where as him lift his preie take. He can fo well his cause make And so well feigne and so well glose, That there ne shall no man suppose, But that he were an innocent. And thus a mannes eye he blent, So that this crafte I may remeve Withouten helpe of any meve. There be lovers of that degre, Which all her lust in privete As who faith getten all by stelth And ofte atteignen to great welth And for the time that it lasteth. For love awaiteth ever and casteth. How he may stell and cacche his pray, Whan he therto may finde a way. For be it night, or be it day He taketh his part, whan that he may, And if he may no more do, Yet woll he stele a cuss or two.

Confessor.

My fone, what faift thou therto, Telle, if thou diddeft ever fo. My fader, how? My fone, thus, If thou hast stole any cuss Or other thing, which therto longeth, For no man suche theves hongeth, Tell on forthy and fay the trouth. My fader, nay, and that is routh. For by my will, I am a thefe, But she, that is to me most lefe, Yet durst I never in privete Nought ones take her by the kne To stele of her or this or that. And if I durst I wot well what, And netheles but if I lie By stelthe ne by robberie Of love, which fell in my thought, To her did I never nought, But as men fain, where hert is failed, There shall no castel be assailed, But though I hadde hertes ten And were as stronge as alle men, If I be nought min owne man And dare nought usen, that I can, I may my felve nought recouer, Though I be never man fo pouer. I bere an herte and here it is, So that me faileth wit in this. How that I shulde of mine accorde The fervant lede agein the lorde. For if my foot wold owhere go, Or that min hond wolde elles do, Whan that min hert is there ayein, The remenaunt is all in vein.

And thus me lacketh alle wele. And yet ne dare I nothing stele Confessio amantis.

Of thing, which longeth unto love, And eke it is so high above, I may nought well therto arecche. But if so be at time of speche Full selde, if than I stele may A worde or two and go my way, Betwene her high estate and me Comparison there may none be, So that I fele and well I wote, All is to hevy and to hote To fet on honde without leve. And thus I mot algate leve To stele that I may nought take, And in this wife I mot forfake To ben a thefe ayein my will Of thing, which I may nought fulfill.

For that ferpent, which never flept,
The flees of gold fo well ne kept
In Colchos, as the tale is tolde,
That my lady a thousand folde
Nis better yemed and bewaked,
Where she be clothed or be naked,
To kepe her body night and day.
She hath a wardein redy ay,
Which is so wounderfull a wight,
That him ne may no mannes might
With swerd ne with no wepon daunt,
Ne with no sleight of charme enchaunt,
Wherof he might be made tame,
And daunger is his righte name,

Whiche under lock and under key, That no man may it stele awey, Hath al the trefor underfonge, That unto love may belonge. The lefte loking of her eye May nought be stole, if he it sigh, And who fo gruccheth for fo lit He wolde fone fet a wite On him, that wolde stele more. And that me greveth wonder fore, For this proverb is ever newe, That stronge lockes maken trewe Of hem that wolden stele and pike. For so wel can there no man slike By him ne by no other mene, To whom daunger wol yive or lene Of that trefor he hath to kepe. So though I wolde stalke and crepe And waite on eve and eke on morwe, Of daunger shal I nothing borwe, And stele wot wel may I nought. And thus I am right wel bethought, While daunger stont in his office, Of stelthe, which ye clepe a vice, I shall be gilty never mo. Therfore I wold he were ago So fer, that I never of him herde, How fo that afterward it ferde. For than I mighte yet parcas Of love make fome purchas

By stelth or by some other way, That now fro me stont fer away.

But, fader, as ye tolde above, How stelthe goth a night for love, I may nought wel that point forfake, That ofte times I ne wake On nightes, whan that other slepe. But now, I pray you take kepe, Whan I am logged in fuch wife, That I by nighte may arise At some window and loken out And fe the houfing al about, So that I may the chambre knowe, In which my lady, as I trowe, Lith in her bed and slepeth softe, Than is min hert a thefe ful ofte, For there I stonde and behold The longe nightes, that ben cold, And thenke on her, that lieth there. And than I wisshe, that I were Als wife as was Nectanabus Or elles as was Protheus. That couthen both of nigromaunce In what likenesse, in what semblaunce Right as him lift him felf transforme. For if I were of fuche a forme, I fay, thanne I wolde flee Into her chambre for to fe, If any grace wolde falle, So that I might under the palle

Some thing of love pike and stele. And thus I thenke thoughtes fele, And though there of no thing be foth, Yet ese as for a time it doth. But ate laste whan I finde, That I am fall into my minde, And fe, that I have stonde longe And have no profit underfonge, Than stalke I to my bed withinne. And this is all that ever I winne Of love, whan I walke on night. My will is good, but of my might Me lacketh both, and of my grace, For what fo that my thought embrace, Yet have I nought the better ferde. My fader, lo, now have ye herde What I by stelth of love have do, And how my will hath be therto, If I be worthy to penaunce, I put it to your ordenaunce.

My fone, of stelth I the behete, Though it be for a time swete, At ende it doth but litel good, As by ensample how that it stood Whilom, I may the telle now.

I pray you, fader, fay me how.
My fone, of him, which goth by day
By wey of stelthe to assay
In loves cause and taketh his pray,
Ovide said, as I shall say,

And in his Methamor he tolde A tale, which is good to holde.

Hic in amoris causa super isto latrocinio, quod de die contingit, ponit exemplum. Et narrat, quod cum Leuchothoe Orchami filia in cameris sub arcta matris custodia virgo preservabatur, Phebus eius pulcritudinem concupiscens, clara luce fubintrans, virginis pudiciciam matre absente defloravit, unde ipsa inpregnata iratus pater filiam suam ad sepeliendum vivam effodit, ex cuius tumulo florem, quem solsequium vocant, dicunt tunc consequenter primitus accrevisse.

The poet upon this matere Of stelthe wrote in this manere. Venus, which hath the lawe in honde Of thing, which may nought be withstonde, As she, which the tresor to warde Of love hath within her warde, in conclave domus Phebus to love hath fo constreigned, That he withoute rest is peined With all his herte to coveite A maiden, which was warded streite Withinne chambre and kept fo clos, That felden was, whan she desclos Goth with her moder for to play. Leuchothoe, so as men say, This maiden hight and Orchamus Her fader was. And befell thus. This doughter, that was kept so dere, And hadde be from yere to yere Under her moders discipline A clene maide and a virgine, Upon the whose nativite Of comeliheed and of beaute Nature hath fet all that she may. That lich unto the fresshe may, Whiche other monthes of the yere Sourmounteth, fo withoute pere Was of this maiden the feture. Wherof Phebus out of mesure

Her loveth and on every fide Awaiteth, if so may betide, That he through any fleighte might Her lusty maidenheed unright, The which were all his worldes welth. And thus lurkend upon his stelth In his await so longe he lay, Till it befell upon a day, That he through out her chambre wall Came in all fodeinlich and stall That thing, which was to him so lefe. But wo the while, he was a thefe, For Venus, which was enemy Of thilke loves michery, Descovereth all the pleine cas To Climene, which thanne was Toward Phebus his concubine. And she to lette the covine Of thilke love dedely wrothe To pleign upon this maide she goth And tolde her fader, howe it stood, Wherof for forwe well nigh wode Unto her moder thus he saide: Lo, what it is to kepe a maide. To Phebus dare I nothing speke, But upon her it shall be wreke, So that these maidens after this Mow take ensample, what it is To fuffre her maidenheed be stole, Wherof that she the deth shall thole.

And bad with that do make a pit,
Wherin he hath his doughter fet,
As he, that woll no pite have,
So that she was all quike begrave
And deide anone in his presence.
But Phebus, for the reverence
Of that she hadde be his love,
Hath wrought through his power above,
That she sprong up out of the molde
Into a flour, was named golde,
Which stant governed of the sonne.
And thus whan love is evil wonne,
Full ofte it cometh to repentail.

My fader, that is no merveile, Whan that the counceil is bewreied. But ofte time love hath pleied And stole many a prive game, Which never yet cam into blame, Whan that the thinges weren hid. But in your tale as it betid, Venus descovereth all the cas. And eke also brode day it was, Whan Phebus fuch a stelthe wrought, Wherof the maide in blame he brought, That afterwards he was fo lore. But for ye faiden now to-fore, How stelth of love goth by night And doth his thinges out of fight, Therof me lust also to here A tale lich to the matere.

Wherof I might ensample take.

My gode sone, for thy sake
So as it befell by daies olde
And so as the poet it tolde,
Upon the nightes michery
Now herken a tale of poesy.

The mightiest of alle men,
Whan Hercules with Eolen,
Which was the love of his corage,
To-gider upon a pelrinage
Towarde Rome shulden go,
It fell hem by the waie so,
That they upon a day a cave
Within a roche founden have,
Which was real and glorious
And of entaile curious,
By name and Thophis it was hote.
The sonne shone tho wonder hote,
As it was in the somer tide.

This Hercules, which by his fide Hath Eolen his love there, Whan they at thilke cave were, He faid, he thought it for the best, That she her for the hete rest All thilke day and thilke night. And she, that was a lusty wight, It liketh her all that he saide, And thus they dwellen yet and pleide The longe day. And so befell, This cave was under the hill

Hic ponit exemplum super eodem, quod de nocte contingit. Et narrat, qualiter Hercules cum Eole in quadam spelunca nobili, Thophis dicta, fub monte Timolo, ubifilva Bachiest, hospicio pernoctarunt. Et cum ipsi variis lectis feparatim jacentes dormierunt, contigit lectum Herculis veltimentis Eole lectumque Eole pelle leonis, qua Hercules induébatur, operiri, fuper quo Faunus a filva descendens speluncam subintravit, temptans si forte cum Eole fue concupifcencie voluptatem nesciente Hercule furari posset. Et cum ad lectum Herculis muliebri palpata veste ex casu pervenisset, putans Eolen suisse, cubiculum nudo coringreditur, quem senciens Hercules manibus apprehensum ipsum ad terram ita fortiter allisit, ut impotens sui corporis effectus usque mane ibidem requievit, ubi Saba cum nimphis silvestribus superveniens ipfum sic illusum deridebat.

Of Timolus, which was begrowe
With vines, and at thilke throwe
Faunus with Saba the goddesse,
By whom the large wildernesse
In thilke time stood governed,
Were in a place, as I am lerned,
Nigh by, which Bachus wode hight.

This Faunus toke a great infight Of Eolen, that was fo nigh, For whan that he her beaute figh, Out of his wit he was affored And in his herte it hath so noted. That he forfoke the nimphes alle And faid, he wolde, how so it falle, Assay an other for to winne, So that his hertes thought withinne He fet and cast, how that it might Of love pike away by night, That he by day in other wife To stele mighte nought suffice. And therupon his time he awaiteth. Now take good hede, how love affaiteth Him, which with al is overcome. Faire Eolen whan the was come With Hercules into the cave, She faid him, that she wolde have His clothes of and hers bothe, And eche of hem shulde other clothe. And all was do right as she bad, He hath her in his clothes clad

And cast on her his gulion, Which of the skin of a leon Was made, as he upon the wey It flough, and over this to pley She toke his grete mace also And knet it at her girdel tho. So was she lich the man arraied, And Hercules than hath affaied To clothen him in her array. And thus they jape forth the day, Till that her fouper redy were. And whan they hadden fouped there, They shopen hem to go to rest, And as it thought hem for the best, They bad, as for that ilke night, Two fondry beddes shuld be dight, For they to-gider ligge nolde, By cause that they offre wolde Upon the morwe her facrifice. The fervants didden her office And fondry beddes made anone, Wherin that they to reste gone Eche by hem felf in fondry place. Fair Eolen hath fet the mace Besides her beddes heved above. And with the clothes of her love She helled all her bed aboute. And he, which had nothing in doubte, Her wimpel wonde about his cheke, Her kirtel and her mantel eke

Abrode upon his bed he spredde, And thus they flepen both a bedde. And what of travail, what of wine The fervaunts like to dronken fwine Beganne for to route faste. This Faunus, which his stellhe caste, Was thanne comen to the cave And found, they weren alle fave Withoute noise, and in he went, The derke night his fighte blent, And yet it hapned him to go, Where Eolen a bedde tho Was laid alone for to slepe. But for he wolde take kepe, Whose bed it was, he made affay And of a leon, where it lay, The cote he founde and eke he feleth The mace and than his herte keleth. That there durst he nought abide, But stalketh upon every side And fought aboute with his honde That other bed, till that he fonde, Where lay bewimpled a visage. Tho was he glad in his corage, For he her kirtel founde also And eke her mantel bothe two Bespred upon the bedde alofte. He made him naked than and fofte Into the bed unware he crepte, Where Hercules that time flepte

And wende well it were she.
And thus in stede of Eole
Anone he profreth him to love,
But he, which selte a man above,
This Hercules him threw to grounde
So fore, that they have him founde
Liggende there upon the morwe,
And tho was nought a litel sorwe,
That Faunus of him selve made.
But elles there they were all glade
And loughen him to scorne aboute,
Saba with nimphes all a route
Came down to loke, how that it ferde,
And whan that they the sothe herde,
He was bejaped over all.

My sone, be thou ware with all To seche suche micheries,
But if thou have the better aspies
In aunter, if the so betide
As Faunus dide thilke tide,
Wherof thou might be shamed so.

Min holy fader, certes no.
But if I hadde right good leve,
Such micherie I thenke leve,
My fainte herte woll nought serve,
For malgre wolde I nought deserve
In thilke place, where I love.
But for ye tolden here above
Of covetise and his pilage,
If there be more of that lignage,

Which toucheth to my shrifte, I pray, That ye therof me wolde say, So that I may the vice escheue.

Sone, if I by order sue
The vices, as they stonde a rowe
Of covetise, thou shalt knowe,
There is yet one, which is the last,
In whom there may no vertue last,
For he with god him self debateth,
Wherof that all the heven him hateth.

12. Sacrilegus tantum furto loca facra prophanat,
Ut sibi sint agri, sic domus alma dei.
Nec locus est, in quo non temptat amans que amatur,
Si que posse nequit, carpere velle capit.

Hic tractat super ultima cupiditatis specie, que sacrilegium dicitur, cuius furtum ea que altissimo fanctificantur bona depredans ecclesie tantum spoliis insidiatur.

The highe god, whiche alle good Purveied hath for mannes food Of clothes and of mete and drinke, Bade Adam, that he shulde swinke To geten him his sustenaunce, And eke he fet an ordenaunce Upon the lawe of Moises, That though a man be haveles, Yet shall he nought by thefte stele. But now a daies there ben fele. That woll no labour undertake. But what they may by stelthe take They holde it fikerliche wonne. And thus the lawe is overronne, Which god hath fet, and namely With hem that so untruely The goodes robbe of holy chirche.

The thefte, which they thanne wirche, By name is cleped facrilegge, Ayein the whom I thenke allegge, [Upon the points as we ben taught* Stont facrilege, and elles nought The firste point is for to say, Whan that a thefe shall stele away The holy thing from holy place. The seconde is, if he purchace By way of theft unholy thinge, Whiche he upon his knowlechinge Fro holy place away toke. The thirde point, as faith the boke, Is fuche, as where as ever it be, In wode, in felde or in cite, Shall no man stele by no wife That halowed is to the fervise Of god, whiche alle thinges wote, But there is nouther cold ne hote. Whiche he for god or man woll spare, So that the body may wel fare, And that he may the world escape, The heven him thinketh is but a jape Of his condicion to telle, Which rifeleth bothe boke and belle. So forth with all the remenaunt To goddes hous appurtenaunt, Where that he shulde bid his bede, He doth his theft in holy stede,

And taketh what thing he fint therin. For whan he feeth that he may win, He wondeth for no cursednesse, That he ne breketh the holinesse And doth to god no reverence. For he hath lost his conscience, That though the prest therfore curse, He faith, he fareth nought the worfe. And for to speke it other wife, What man that laffeth the fraunchife And taketh of holy chirch his pray, I not what bedes he shall pray, Whan he fro god, which hath yive all, The purpartie in speciall, Which unto Crist him self is due. Benimth, he may nought wel eschue The peine comend afterward, For he hath made his foreward With facrilegge for to dwelle, Which hath his heritage in helle.

And if we rede of tholde lawe,
I finde write in thilke lawe
Of princes, how there weren thre
Coupable fore in this degre.
That one of hem was cleped thus
The proude king Antiochus,
That other Nabuzardan hight,
Which of his cruelte behight
The temple to destruie and waste,
And so he did in alle haste,

The thridde, which was after shamed, Was Nabugodonosor named, And he Jerusalem put under Of facrilegge and many a wonder There in the holy temple he wrought, Which Baltazar his heire abought, Whan Mane Techel Phares write Was on the wall, as thou might wite, So as the bible it hath declared. But for al that it is nought spared Yet now a day, that men ne pille And maken argument and skille To facrilegge as it belongeth, For what man that there after longeth He taketh none hede what he doth. [And if a man shall telle foth,* Of guile and of fubtilite Is none fo fligh in his degre To feigne a thing for his beyete, As is this vice of whiche I trete. He can so priveliche pike, He can so well his wordes slike To put away suspicion, That in his excusation There shall no man defalte finde. And thus full ofte men be blinde, That stonden in his word deceived, Er his queintise be perceived.

But netheles yet other while For all his fleight and all his guile, Of that he wolde his werke forfake He is atteint and overtake, Wherof thou shalte a tale rede, In Rome as it befell in dede.

Hic loquitur de illis, qui larvata consciencia facrilegium sibi licere fingunt. Et narrat, quod cum quidam Lucius clericus famosus et imperatori notus deum fuum Apollinem in templo Rome de anulo suo, pallio et barba aurea spoliasset, ipse tandem apprehensus et coram imperatore accusatus taliter se excusando ait: anulum a deo recepi, quia ipse digito protenso ex sua largitate anulum hunc gratiose michi obtulit, pallium ex lamine aureo constructum tuli, quia aurum maxime ponderofum et frigidum naturaliter confistit, unde nec in estate propter pondus, nec in yeme propter frigus ad dei vestes utile fuit, barbam a deo deposui, qui ipsum patri suo assimulare volui. Nam et Apollo, qui ante ipsum in templo stetit, absque barba juvenis apparuit, et sic ea que gessi non ex furto, sed honestate processisse manifeste declaravi.

Er Rome cam to the creaunce Of Cristes seith, it sell perchaunce, Cefar, which tho was emperour, Him lifte for to done honour Unto the temple Apollinis, And made an ymage upon this, The which was cleped Apollo, Was none fo riche in Rome tho. Of plate of golde a berde he hadde, The which his brest all over spradde. Of golde also withoute faile His mantell was of large entaile Befet with perrie all about, Forth right he straught his finger out, Upon the which he had a ringe, To feen it was a riche thing, A fine carbuncle for the nones Most precious of alle stones.

And fell that time in Rome thus There was a clerke one Lucius, A courteour, a famous man, Of every wit fomwhat he can, Out take that him lacketh reule His owne estat to guide and reule. How so it stood of his speking, He was nought wife in his doing, But every riote ate last Mot nedes falle and may nought laste After the mede of his deserte. So fell this clerke in pouerte And wiste nought how for to rise, Wherof in many a fondry wife He cast his wittes here and ther, He loketh nigh, he loketh fer, Till on a time that he come Into the temple and hede he nome, Where that the god Apollo stood, He figh the richesse and the good And thought he wolde by fome way The trefor picke and stele away. And therupon fo fleighly wrought, That his purpose about he brought, And went awey unapperceived. Thus hath the man his god deceived, His ring, his mantel and his berd, As he, which nothing was aferd, All prively with him he bare. And whan the wardeins weren ware Of that her god despuiled was, Hem thought it was a wonder cas, How that a man for any wele Durst in so holy place stele, And namely so great a thing. This tale came unto the king,

And was through spoken over all. But for to knowe in speciall, What maner man hath do the dede. They foughten helpe upon the nede And maden calculation, Wherof by demonstracion The man was founde with the good, In jugement and whan he stood, The king hath axed of him thus: Say thou, unfely Lucius, Why hast thou don this facrilegge? My lord, if I the cause allegge, Quod he ayein, me thenketh this, That I have do nothing amis. Thre points ther ben, which I have do, Wherof the first point stant so, That I the ring have take away, As unto that this woll I fay, Whan I the god behelde about, I figh, how he his hond straught out And profred me the ring to yive. And I, which wolde gladly live, Out of pouerte, through his largesse It underfang, so that I gesse, As therof I am nought to wite. And overmore I woll me quite Of gold that I the mantel toke, Gold in his kind, as faith the boke, Is hevy both and colde also. And for that it was hevy fo,

Me thought it was no garnement Unto the god convenient To clothen him the fomer tide, I thought upon that other side, How gold is colde, and fuch a clothe By reson oughte to be lothe In winter time for the chele. And thus thenkende thoughtes fele As I min eie aboute cast, His large berd than ate last I figh and thought anone therfore, How that his fader him before, Which stood upon the same place, Was berdles with a yongly face. And in fuch wife, as ye have herde, I toke away the fones berde For that his fader hadde none To make hem liche, and here upon I axe for to ben excused.

Lo thus, where facrilegge is used,
A man can seigne his conscience
And right upon such evidence
In loves cause if I shall trete,
There ben of suche small and great,
If they no leiser sinden elles,
They wol nought wonden for the belles,
Ne though they sen the prest at masse,
That wol they leten overpasse,
If that they sinden her love there,
They stande and tellen in her ere

And axe of god none other grace, While they ben in that holy place. But er they gon, some avauntage There will they have, and some pilage Of goodly word or of behefte, Or elles they take ate leste Out of her honde a ring or glove, So nigh the weder they will hove, As who faith she shall nought foryete, Now I this token of her have gete. Thus halwe they the highe feste, Such thefte may no chirch areste, For all is lefull that hem liketh, To whom that elles it misliketh. And eke right in the felve kinde In great citees men may finde This lufty folk, that make hem gay, And waite upon the haliday, In chirches and in minstres eke They gon the women for to feke, And where that fuch one goth about To-fore the fairest of the route, Where as they fitten all a rewe, There will he moste his body shewe, His croket kempt and theron fet An ouche, with a chapelet Or elles one of grene leves, Which late came oute of the greves, All for he shulde seme fressh. And thus he loketh on his flessh

Right as an hawke which hath a fight Upon the fowl, there he shall light, And as he were a fairie, He sheweth him to-fore her eye In holy place where they fitte Al for to make her hertes flitte. His eye no where woll abide But loke and pry on every fide On her and her, as him best liketh, And other while among he fiketh, Thenketh one of hem that was for me, And fo there thenken two or thre, And yet he loveth none of alle, But where as ever his chaunce falle. And netheles to fay a foth The cause, why that he so doth, Is for to stele an herte or two Out of the chirche er that he go. And as I faid it here above, All is that facrilegge of love, For well may be he steleth awey, That he never after yelde may. Tell me forthy, my sone, anone, Hast thou do sacrilegge or none, As I have faid in this manere.

My fader, as of this matere
I woll you tellen redely
What I have do, but truely
I may excuse min entent,
That I never yet to chirche went,

Confessio amantis.

In fuch maner as ye me shrive, For no woman that is on live. The cause why I have it last May be, for I unto that craft Am nothing able for so stele, Though there be women nought fo fele. But yet woll I nought faie this, Whan I am there my lady is, In whom lith holy my quarele, And she to chirche or to chapele Woll go to matins or to messe, That time I waite well and gesse, To chirche I come and there I stonde, And though I take a boke on honde, My contenaunce is on the boke, But toward her is all my loke. And if so falle, that I pray Unto my god and fomwhat fay Of pater noster or of crede, All is for that I wolde spede, So that my bede in holy chirche There mighte fome miracle wirche My ladies herte for to chaunge, Which ever hath be to me fo straunge, So that all my devocion And all my contemplacion With all min herte and my corage Is only fet on her ymage. And ever I waite upon the tide, If she loke any thing aside,

That I me may of her avise, Anone I am with covetife So fmite, that me were lefe To be in holy chirche a thefe, But nought to stele a vestement, For that is nothing my talent. But I wol stele, if that I might, A glad word or a goodly fight, And ever my service I profre, And namely whan she woll gone offre, For than I lede her, if I may. For fomwhat wold I stele away, Whan I beclippe her on the waste, Yet ate last I stele a taste, And other while graunt mercy She faith, and so win I therby A lusty touch, a good worde eke, But all the remenaunt to feke Is fro my purpos wonder fer. So may I say, as I said er, In holy chirch if that I wowe, My conscience I wolde allowe Be fo that up amendement I mighte get affignement, Where for to spede in other place Such facrilegge I hold a grace.

And thus, my fader, foth to fay In chirche right as in the way If I might ought of love take, Such hansel have I nought forsake.

But finally I me confesse, There is in me no halinesse. While I her se in haly stede. And yet for ought that ever I dede No facrilegge of her I toke, But if it were of worde or loke Or elles if that I her fredde, Whan I toward offring her ledde, Take therof what I take may, For elles bere I nought away, For though I wolde ought elles have All other thinges ben so save And kept with fuch a privilegge, That I may do no facrilegge. God wot my wille netheles, Though I must nedes kepe pees And malgre min so let it passe, My will therto is nought the lasse, If I might other wife away. Forthy, my fader, I you pray, Tell what you thenketh therupon, If I therof have gilt or none.

Thy will, my sone, is for to blame, The remenaunt is but a game, That I have herd the telle yit. But take this lore into thy wit, That alle thing hath time and stede, The chirche serveth for the bede, The chambre is of an other speche, But if thou wistest of the wreche, How facrilegge it hath abought, Thou woldest better ben bethought. And for thou shalt the more amende, A tale I will on the despende.

To alle men as who faith knowe It is and in the world through blowe, How that of Troie Lamedon To Hercules and to Jason, Whan toward Colchos out of Grece By fee failend upon a piece Of londe of Troie reste preide. But he hem wrothfully congeide, And for they found him so villein, Whan they came into Grece ayein With power, that they gette might, Towardes Troie they hem dight And there they token fuch vengeaunce, Wherof stant yet the remembraunce. For they destruied king and all And leften but the brente wall. The Grekes of Troians many flow And prisoners they toke inow, Among the whiche there was one The kinges doughter Lamedon Efiona the faire thing, Which unto Thelamon the king By Hercules and by thaffent Of all the hole parlement Was at his wille yove and graunted. And thus hath Grece Troie daunted, Hic in amoris causa super istius vicii articulo ponit exemplum, et narrat pro eo, quod Paris Priami regis filius Helenam Menelai uxorem in quadam Grecie insula a templo Veneris facrilegus abduxit, illa Troie famolissima obsidio per universa orbis climata divulgata precipue causabatur, ita quod huiusmodi sacrilegium non solum ad ipfius regis Priami omniumque fuorum interitum, sed eciam ad perpetuam urbis desolacionem vindicte fomitem ministrabat.

And home they torne in such manere. But after this, now shalt thou here The cause, why I this tale telle, Upon the chaunce that befelle.

King Lamedon, which deide thus, He had a fone one Priamus. Which was nought thilke time at home, But whan he herd of this, he come And found how the citee was falle, Which he began anon to walle And made there a citee newe, That they, which other londes knewe, Tho faiden that of lime and stone In all the world fo faire was none. And on that o fide of the town The king let make Ylion, That highe toure, that stronge place, Which was adrad of no manace, Of quarele nor of none engine. And though men wolde make a mine, No mannes craft it might approche, For it was fet upon a roche The walles of the towne about. Hem stood of all the world no doubt. And after the proportion Six gates were there of the town Of fuch a forme, of fuch entaile, That hem to fe was great merveile. The diches weren brode and depe, A fewe men it mighte kepe

From all the world, as semeth tho.
But if the goddes weren so,
Great prees unto that citee drough,
So that there was of people inough
Of burgeis that therinne dwellen,
There may no mannes tunge tellen,
How that citee was riche and good.

Whan all was made and all well stood, King Priamus tho him bethought, What they of Grece whilom wrought, And what was of her fwerd devoured, And how his fuster deshonoured With Thelamon away was lad. And tho thenkend he wax unglad And fet anone a parlement, To which the lordes were affent. In many wife there was spoke, How that they mighten bene awroke. But ate laste netheles They faiden all, accorde and pees To setten every parte in rest It thought hem thanne for the best With resonable amendement. And thus was Anthenor forth fent To axen Efiona ayein And witen what they wolden fain.

So passeth he the see by barge To Grece for to say his charge, The which he saide redely Unto the lordes by and by.

But where he spake in Grece aboute, He herde nought but wordes stoute And nameliche of Thelamon. The maiden wolde he nought forgon He saide for no maner thing, And bad him gone home to his king, For there gate he none amende For ought he couthe do or sende.

This Anthenor agein goth home Unto his king, and whan he come, He tolde in Grece of that he herde, And how that Thelamon answerde. And how they were at her above, That they wol nouther pees ne love, But every man shall done his best. But for men saien, that night hath rest, The king bethought him all that night, And erly whan the day was light, He toke his counseil of this matere. And they accorde in this manere, That he withouten any let A certain time shulde set A parlement to ben avised, And in this wife it was avifed. Of parlement he set a day, And that was in the month of may. This Priamus had in his ight A wife and Hecuba she hight, By whom that time eke had he Sones five and doughters thre

And weren knightes alle tho,
But nought upon his wife begete,
But elles where he might hem gete
Of women, which he hadde knowe.
Such was the world that ilke throwe,
So that he was of children riche,
So therof was no man him liche.

Of parlement the day was come. There ben the lordes all and fome, Tho was pronounced and purposed And all the cause hem was desclosed, How Anthenor in Grece ferde. They fitten alle still and herde, And tho spake every man aboute, There was allegged many a doubte, And many a proud word spoke also. But for the moste parte as tho They wisten nought what was the beste Or for to werre or for to reste. But he that was withoutefere, Hector among the lordes there His tale tolde in suche a wife And faide: Lordes, ye ben wife, Ye knowen this als well as I, Above all other most worthy Stant now in Grece the manhod Of worthinesse and of knighthod. For who fo woll it wel agrope, To hem belongeth all Europe,

Whiche is the thridde parte even Of all the world under the heven. And we be but of folk a fewe, So were it reson for to shewe The peril, er we fall therinne. Better is to leve than beginne Thing, which as may nought ben acheved, He is nought wife, that find him greved And doth fo, that his greve be more. For who that loketh all to-fore And woll nought fe what is behinde, He may full ofte his harmes finde. Wick is to strive and have the worse. We have encheson for to curse, This wote I well and for to hate The Grekes, but er that we debate With hem, that ben of fuch a might,-It is full good, that every wight Be of him felf right well bethought. But as for me thus fay I nought, For while that my life woll stonde, If that ye take werre on honde, Fall it to the best or to the werst, I shall my selven be the ferst To greven hem, what ever I may. I woll nought ones faie nay To thing, which that your counceil demeth, For unto me well more it quemeth The werre certes than the pees. But this I faie netheles.

As me belongeth for to fay, Now shape ye the beste way.

Whan Hector hath faid his avis. Next after him tho spake Paris, Which was his brother, and alaide What him best thought, and thus he saide: Strong thing it is to fuffre wronge, And fuffre shame is more stronge, But we have fuffred bothe two, And for all that yet have we do What so we mighte to reforme The pees, whan we in suche a forme Sent Anthenor, as ye wel knowe. And they her grete wordes blowe Upon her wrongfull dedes eke, And he that woll him felf nought meke To pees and lift no refon take, Men sain reson him wol forsake. For in the multitude of men Is nought the strengthe, for with ten It hath be sene in true quarele Ayein an hunderd false dele, And had the better of goddes grace. Thus hath befalle in many place. And if it like unto you alle, I will assay how so it falle Our enemies if I may greve, For I have caught a gret beleve Upon a point I wol declare. This ender day as I gan fare

To hunt unto the grete herte, Which was to-fore min houndes sterte, And every man went on his fide Him to pursue, and I to ride Began to chase, and soth to say Within a while out of my way I rode, and niste where I was, And slepe me caught and on the grasse Beside a welle I laid me down To flepe and in a vision To me the god Mercurie cam, Goddesses thre with him he nam Minerve, Venus and Juno, And in his honde an appel tho He helde of gold with letters write. And this he dide me to wite, How that they put hem upon me, That to the fairest of hem thre Of gold that appel shulde I yive, With ech of hem tho was I shrive And eche one faire me behight. But Venus said, if that she might That appel of my yifte gete, She wolde it nevermore foryete, And faide, how that in Grece londe She wolde bring into min honde Of all this erthe the fairest, So that me thought it for the best To her and yaf the appel tho. Thus hope I well, if that I go,

That they matere for to pleigne
Shull have, or that I come ayein.
Nowe have ye herd, that I woll fain,
Say ye, what fant in your avis.
And every man tho faide his,
And fondry causes they recorde,
But ate laste they accorde,
That Paris shall to Grece wende,
And thus the parlement toke ende.

Cassandra whan she herd of this, The which to Paris suster is, Anone she gan to wepe and weile And faid: Alas, what may us eile, Fortune with her blinde whele Ne woll nought let us stonde wele, For this I dare well undertake, That if Paris his waie take, As it is faid, that he shall do, We ben for ever than undo. The which Cassandra thanne hight In all the world as it bereth fight, In bokes as men finde write, Is that Sibille, of whom ye wite, That alle men yet clepen fage. Whan that she wist of this viage, How Paris shall to Grece fare, No woman mighte worse fare Ne forwe more than she did. And right so in the same stede

Ferd Helenus, which was her brother Of prophecy and fuch another, And all was holde but a jape, So that the purpos, which was shape, Or were hem lefe or were hem lothe, Was holde, and into Grece he goth This Paris with his retenaunce. And as it fell upon his chaunce, Of Grece he londeth in an ile, And him was tolde the same while Of folk, which he began to freine, Tho was in thile quene Heleine And eke of contres there about Of ladies many a lusty rout, With mochel worthy people also. And why they comen thider tho, The cause stood in such a wife For worship and for facrifice, That they to Venus wolden make, As they to-fore had undertake Some of good will, some of behest, For thanne was her highe fest Within a temple, which was there. Whan Paris wiste what they were, Anone he shope his ordenaunce To gone and done his obeifaunce To Venus on her haliday And did upon his best array. With great richesse he him behongeth, As it to fuch a lord belongeth,

He was nought armed netheles, But as it were in londe of pees. And thus he goth forth out of ship And taketh with him his felaship In such manere, as I you say, Unto the temple he helde his way.

Tidinge, which goth over all To great and smalle forth withall, Come to the quenes ere and tolde, How Paris come, and that he wolde Do sacrifice to Venus. And whan she herde telle thus, She thought, how that it ever be, That she woll him abide and se.

Forth cometh Paris with glad vifage Into the temple on pelrinage, Where unto Venus the goddesse He yiveth and offreth great richesse And praieth her that he praie wolde. And than afide he gan beholde And figh, where that this lady stood, And he forth in his fresshe mood Goth there she was and made her chere. As he well couth in his manere, That of his wordes fuch plesaunce She toke, that all her aqueintaunce Als ferforth as the herte lay He stale, er that he went away. So goth he forth and toke his leve And thought anone, as it was eve,

He wolde done his facrilegge, That many a man shulde it abegge. Whan he to ship ayein was come, To him he hath his counseil nome And all devised the matere In fuch a wife, as thou shalt here. Withinne night all prively His men he warneth by and by, That they be redy armed fone For certain thing, whiche is to done. And they anone ben redy alle And echone other gan to calle And went hem out upon the stronde And toke a purpos there on londe Of what thing that they wolden do, Toward the temple and forth they go. So fell it of devocion Heleine in contemplacion With many an other worthy wight Was in the temple and woke all night To bid and pray unto thymage Of Venus, as was than usage, So that Paris right as him lift Into the temple er they it wist Came with his men all fodeinly. And all at ones fet askry In hem, which in the temple were, For the was mochel people there, But of defence was no bote, So fuffren they, that fuffre mote.

Paris unto the quene wente And her in both his armes hente With him and with his felaship, And forth they bere her into ship. Up goth the faile, and forth they went, And fuche a wind fortune hem fent. Till they the haven of Troie caught, Where out of ship anone they straught And gone hem forth toward the town, The which came with procession Ayein Paris to sene his pray. And every man began to fay To Paris and his felaship All that they couthen of worship, Was none fo litel man in Troy, That he ne made merthe and joy Of that Paris had wonne Heleine. But all that merthe is forwe and peine To Helenus and to Cassandre. For they it tolden shame and sclaundre And loss of all the comun grace, That Paris out of haly place By stelth hath take a mannes wife, Wherof he shall lese his life And many a worthy man therto And all the citee be fordo, Which never shall be made ayein. And so it fell, right as they sain, The facrilegge, which he wrought, Was cause, why the Gregois sought Unto the town and it belay And wolden never part away, Till what by sleight, and what by strength They had it wonne in brede and length And brent and slain that was withinne.

Now fe, my fone, which a finne Is facrilegge in haly stede. Beware therfore and bid thy bede And do nothing in haly chirche, But that thou might by reson wirche. And eke take hede of Achilles, Whan he unto his love chees Polixena, that was also In haly temple of Apollo, Which was the cause why he deide And all his luft was laid afide. And Troilus upon Creseide Also his firste love laide In haly place, and how it ferde As who faith all the world it herde. Forfake he was for Diomede, Such was of love his laste mede.

Confessor.

Forthy my sone, I wolde rede
By this ensample as thou might rede
Seche elles where thou wilt thy grace
And ware the well in haly place,
What thou to love do or speke
In aunter if it so be wreke,
As thou hast herd me tell to-fore,
And take good hede also therfore.

Upon the forme of avarice More than of any other vice I have devided in parties The braunches, which of compaignies Through out the world in generall Be now the leders over all Of covetise and of perjurie, Of fals brocage and of usurie, Of scarsenesse and of unkindeship, Which never drough to felaship, Of robberie and of prive stelth, Which done is for the worldes welth, Of ravine and of facrilegge, Which maketh the conscience agregge, All though it may richesse atteigne, It floureth but it shall not greine Unto the fruit of rightwisnesse. But who that wolde do largesse Upon the reule, as it is yive, So might a man in trouthe live Toward his god and eke also Toward the world, for bothe two Largesse awaiteth as belongeth To neither part, that he ne wrongeth, He kepeth him felf, he kepeth his frendes, So stant he fauf to both his endes, That he excedeth no mesure. So well he can him felf mesure. Wherof, my fone, thou shalt wite, So as the philosophre hath write.

Prodigus et parcus duo sunt extremaque, largus Est horum medius plebis in ore bonus.

Nota hic de virtute largitatis, que ad oppositum avaricie inter duo extrema videlicet percimoniam et prodigalitatem specialiter consistit.

Betwene the two extremites Of vice stont the propertes Of vertue, and to prove it so Take avarice and take also The vice of prodegalite, Betwene hem liberalite. Which is the vertue of largesse, Stant and governeth his noblesse. For tho two vices in discorde Stond ever, as I find of recorde, So that betwene her two debate Largesse reuleth his estate, For in fuch wife as avarice. As I to-fore have told the vice, Through streit holding and through scars-Stant contraire to largesse, nesse Right fo stant prodegalite Revers, but nought in fuch degre. For fo as avarice spareth And for to kepe his trefor careth, That other all his own and more Ayein the wife mannes lore Yiveth and despendeth here and there, So that him reccheth never where, While he may borwe, he woll despende Till ate last he saith: I wende. But that is spoken all to late, For than is pouerte at the gate

And taketh him even by the fleve. For erst woll he no wisdom leve, And right as avarice is sinne, That wold his trefor kepe and winne, Right fo is prodegalite. But of largesse in his degre, Which even stant betwene the two, The highe god and man also The vertue eche of hem commendeth. For he him felven first amendeth. That over all his name spredeth And to all other, where it nedeth, He yiveth his good in such a wife, That he maketh many a man arise, Whiche elles shulde falle low. Largesse may nought be unknowe. For what lond that he regneth inne, It may nought faile for to winne Through his deferte love and grace, Where it shall faile in other place. And thus betwene to moch and lite Largesse, which is nought to wite, Holt ever forth the middel way. But who that torne wol away Fro that, to prodegalite Anone he left the proprete Of vertu and goth to the vice. For in fuch wife as avarice Lefth for scarsenesse his good name, Right fo that other is to blame,

Which through his wast mesure excedeth. For no man wot what harm that bredeth But mochel joie ther betideth,* Where that largesse an herte guideth. For his mesure is so governed, That he bothe parts is lerned To god and to the world also, He doth reson to bothe two. The pouer folk of his almesse Relieved ben in the distresse Of thurst, of hunger and of colde, Ne yift of him was never folde, But frely vive, and netheles The mighty god of his encres Rewardeth him of double grace, The heven he doth him to purchase And yiveth him eke the worldes good. And thus the cote for the hood Largesse taketh, and yet no sinne He doth, how so that ever he winne.

Luc. Omni habenti dabitur.

What man hath hors men yiven him hors, And who ne hath of him no force. For he may thenne on fote go, The world hath ever stonde so. But for to loken of the tweie, A man to go the fiker weie Beacius est dare Better is to vive than to take, With yifte a man may frendes make,

But who that taketh or great or small, He taketh a charge forth with all And stant nought fre til it be quit. So for to deme in mannes wit. It helpeth more a man to have His owne good than for to crave Of other men and make him bonde, Wher elles he may stond unbonde. Senec counseileth in this wife And faith: But if the good fuffice Unto the liking of the will, Withdrawe thy lust and hold the still And be to thy good suffisaunt, For that thing is appurtenaunt To trouthe and causeth to be fre After the reule of charite, Which first beginneth of him selve. For if thou richest other twelve. Wherof thou shalt thy self be pouer, I not what thank thou might recouer, While that a man hath good to yive, With greate routes he may live And hath his frendes over all, And everich of him telle shall, The while he hath his fulle packe They fay: A good felaw is Jacke. Whan it faileth ate last, Anone his prise they overcast, For than is there none other lawe. But Jacke was a good felawe.

Seneca. Si res tue tibi non sufficiant, fac ut rebus tuis sufficias.

Apostolus. Ordinata caritas incipit a se ipsa.

394 CONFESSIO AMANTIS.

Whan they him pouer and nedy se, They let him passe and fare well he, Al that he wend of compaignie Is thanne torned to solie.

But now to speke in other kinde Of love, a man may suche finde, That where they come in every rout, They cast and wast her love about Till all her time is overgone, And thanne have they love none. For he that loveth over all, It is no reson, that he shall Of love have any proprete. Forthy my fone, avife the, If thou of love hast ben to large. For fuche a man is nought to charge. And if it so be, that thou hast Despended al thy time in wast And fet thy love in fondry place, Though thou the substaunce of thy grace Lese at the last, it is on wonder, For he that put him felven under, As who faith comun over all, He lest the love speciall Of any one, if she be wife. For love shall nought bere his prise By reson, whan it passeth one. So have I fen full many one, That were of love wel at ese, Which after fell in great disese

Through wast of love, that they spent In sondry places where they went. Right so, my sone, I axe of the, If thou with prodegalite Hast here and there thy love wasted?

Confessor.

Amans.

My fader, nay, but I have tasted In many a place as I have go, And yet love I never one of tho, But for to drive forth the day. For leveth well, my hert is ay Withoute mo for evermore All upon one, for I no more Defire, but her love alone. So make I many a prive mone, For well I fele I have despended My longe love and nought amended My spede, for ought I finde yit. If this be wast unto your wit Of love and prodegalite, Now, gode fader, demeth ye. But of o thing I woll me shrive, That I shall for no love thrive, But if her felf me woll releve.

My sone, that I may well leve, And netheles me semeth so, For ought that thou hast yet misdo Of time, whiche thou hast spended, It may with grace ben amended. For thing which may be worth the cost Perchaunce is nouther wast ne lost,

Confessor.

396 CONFESSIO AMANTIS.

For what thing stant on aventure, That can no worldes creature Tell in certain, how it shall wende, Till he therof may fene an ende. So that I note as yet therfore, If thou, my fone, hast wone or lore. For ofte time, as it is sene, Whan fomer hath loft all his grene And is with winter wast and bare, That him is left nothing to spare, All is recovered in a throwe, The colde windes overblowe. And stilled ben the sharpe shoures, And fodeinlich ayein his floures The fomer happneth and is riche, And so parcas thy grace is liche. My fone, though thou be now pouer Of love, yet thou might recouer.

Amans.

My fader, certes graunt mercy, Ye have me taught so redily, That ever while I live shall The better I may be ware with all Of thing, which ye have said er this. But evermore how that it is Toward my shrifte, as it belongeth, To wit of other points me longeth, Wherof that ye me wolden teche With all min herte I you beseche.
